$2,000,000 Shrine Mosque to House Huge Theater

FOX CORPORATION TO PAY $3,000,000 FOR 21-YEAR LEASE

THEATER SEATING CAPACITY 5,000

Building To Be Completed Within Year or 14 Months; Yaarab Members Finance Structure.

Bringing to Atlanta amusement productions on a par with those of Roxy's celebrated New York theater, and giving final impetus to construction of what promises to be one of the most elaborate Shrine mosques in America and the outstanding architectural feat of this section, announcement was made Saturday of the lease of the auditorium, central unit of the proposed Yaarab temple, to the Fox Theater corporation.

Negotiations for the lease, which have been pending for six months, were concluded in New York earlier in the week. Duration of the lease on the auditorium with 5,000 seating capacity for 21 years at an aggregate rental of $3,000,000 and with a provision that the auditorium will be available for customary shrine ceremonies taking place about six times a year are principal features of the transaction.

The shrine center, consisting of three units: First, mosque and Yaarab temple headquarters; second, auditorium and third, stores and rentable sections and costing approximately $2,000,000 for construction, has already been financed through contributions by thousands of fraternal members. The site, in one of Atlanta's choice sections, bounded by Peachtree, Kimball and Cypress streets, has been completely graded. Now that the most important income feature has been provided for in lease of the auditorium to the Fox corporation, actual construction will be begun as quickly as possible.

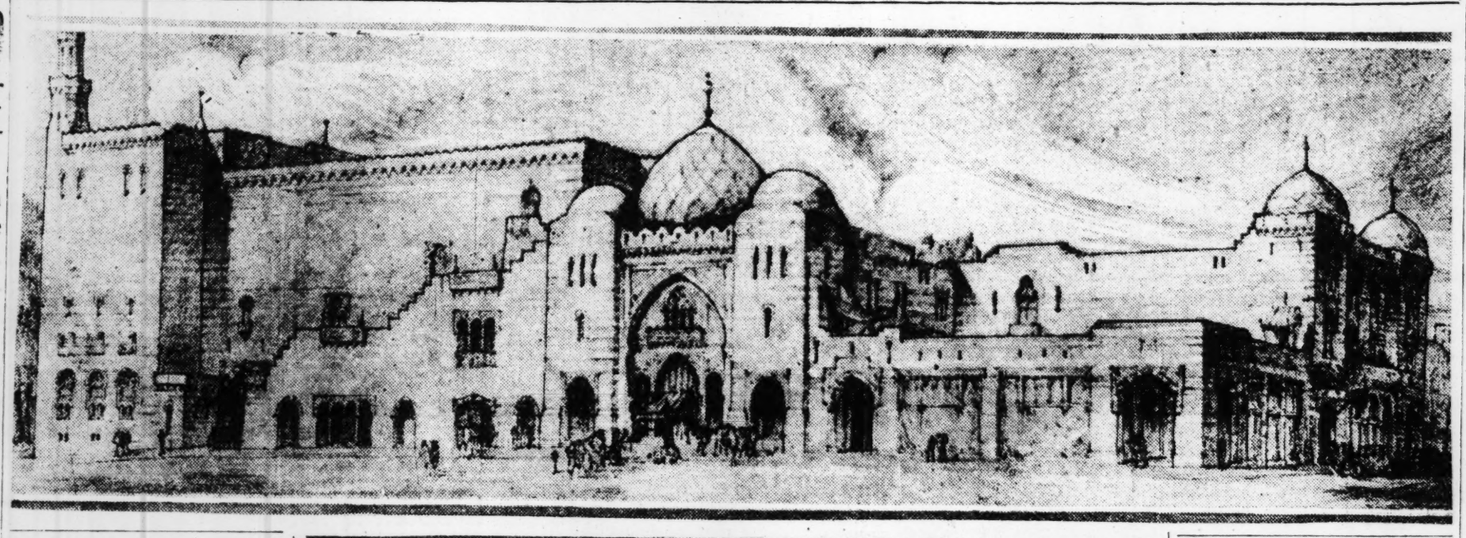

Month for Revision.

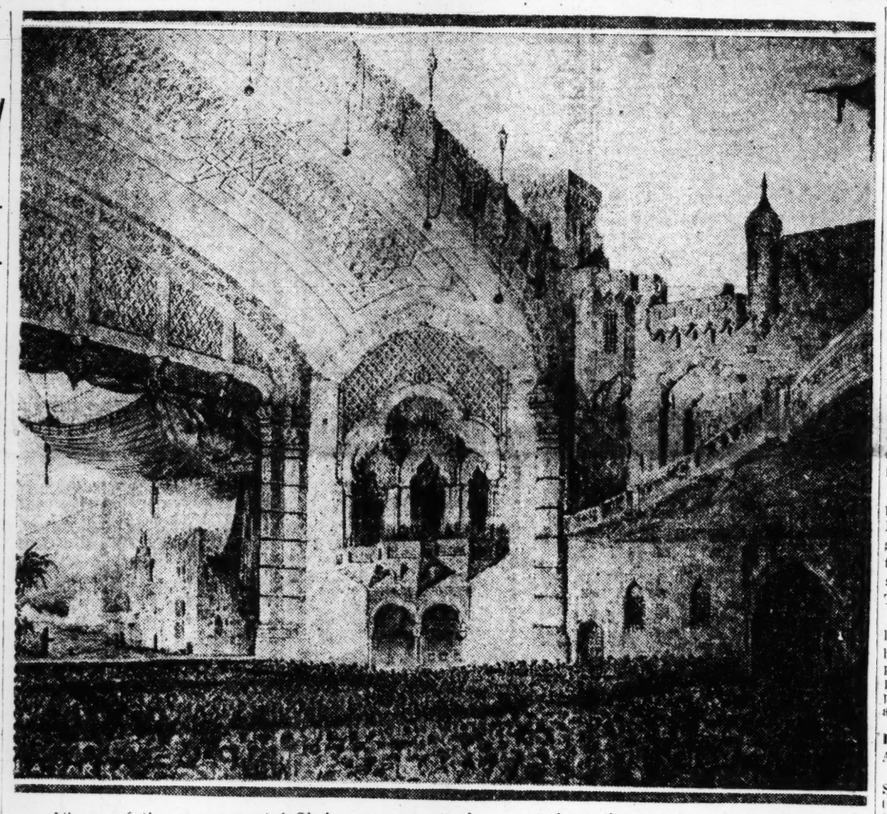

According to the announcement issued Saturday it will require approximately 30 days to revise all plans and specifications in agreement with the elaborate theatrical requirements called for by Fox's proposals. Erection of the building will follow immediately with its completion scheduled to take place within a year or 14 months.

Principals involved in the negotiations that have assumed vast propor-

GALE FANS BLAZE AT ATLANTIC CITY

Boardwalk Swept by $1,000,000 Night Fire; Teacher Seriously Injured.

Atlantic City, January 29.—(AP)—Fanned by a 40-mile an hour gale, fire early today razed three of the resort's principal bath houses in the vicinity of South Carolina avenue and the Boardwalk, destroyed the homes of William S. Cuthbert, director of public safety, and Senator Emerson L. Richards on the Boardwal, and for a time threatened several o. the city's leading hotels.

The fire caused damage estimated at far more than a million dollars. At 2 a. m. the blaze was reported under control. It started a few minutes after midnight in the rear of the Atlantic Foto Service on the Boardwalk near South Carolina avenue and had eaten through the second and third stories of the frame and brick dwelling by the time engine companies had battled through a blizzard to reach it.

School Teacher Injured.

Miss Maud Frank, a school teacher, the only occupant of Director Cuthbert's apartment, above Cuthbert's baths was badly injured when she either jumped or fell from a second story window.

At the Chalfonte hotel, close by, 500 guests congregated in the hotel lobby with their baggage, many of them in their night clothes.

FOUR RAILROAD HEADS ARE HELD FOR CONTEMPT

Houston, Texas, January 28.—(AP) Four high officials of the Southern Pacific railroad were held in contempt of court in a decision handed down here today by Federal Judge J. C. Hutcheson, Jr., in which the executives are charged with violating an injunction issued August 3, 1927, forbidding them to interfere with organization activities of employees.

Those cited were H. M. Lull, executive vice president; G. S. Waid, vice president and general manager; J. G. Tarian, assistant to Mr. Waid, and W. R. Mann, superintendent of the El Paso division. Judge Hutcheson's decision ended a series of hearings which began in July, 1927. The officials were ordered to appear in Judge Hutcheson's court for sentence at 10 a. m. next Friday.

MORROW LANDS AFTER GALE HELD HIM ON STEAMER

Mexico City, January 28.—(AP)—Ambassador Morrow landed at Vera Cruz late today after the vessel on which he came from Havana, the steamship Monterey, had been detained outside the harbor by a severe storm for many hours, said a telegram to the United States embassy tonight.

Ambassador Morrow is expected to arrive in the capital tomorrow morning.

CATHOLIC SOCIETY IN MEXICO RAIDED

Mexico City, January 28.—(United News)—Scenes reminiscent of July, 1926, when Mexico's restrictive church rules became effective, were reenacted at police headquarters today.

While police questioned Catholics whom they sought to connect with rebellions outside the capital, anxious and weeping relatives of those detained filled the station house. The scene at police headquarters was only one of many occurrences during the day which caused sensational interest in what appeared to be a renewal of the department's campaign against alleged anti-government movement.

Raid K. of C. Headquarters.

A raid on the alleged headquarters of the Knights of Columbus had occurred earlier. A quantity of documents said by raiders to be seditious were seized, but the place was deserted.

Six priests taken earlier were held for further questioning at headquarters, as was Senorita Margarita Lascurain, a prominent Catholic woman. Earlier reports had said that she was president of the League of Catholic Women, but these later were denied.

Reports of a Catholic revolt in the capital were denied by police, although they insisted that papers seized showed a connection between Cath-

Georgia Girl Found After Desert Fight

Miss Carr Rescued by British Officer Following Harrowing Experience.

Mosul, Irak, January 28.—(AP)—After harrowing experiences in the desert between Mosul and Bagdad, during which her automobile broke down on the brink of a precipice and she was attacked by wolves, Miss Alice Carr, Near East Relief nurse, of McRae, Ga., who is en route to Smyrna, arrived here today.

The American nurse who essayed the dangerous trip from Bagdad to Smyrna alone was found, after wandering helplessly three nights in the desert, by a British officer and Assyrian soldiers.

The men fought off the wolves with rifles, provided Miss Car with shelter and food and then brought her in an army motor car to Mosul.

Miss Carr carried $10,000 for Assyrian relief and when she was reported missing yesterday it was feared that she might have been waylaid by marauding tribesmen of bandits.

SECRETARY M'LENDON STILL CRITICALLY ILL

Secretary of State S. G. McLendon remains in a critical condition from a severe attack of influenza, according to reports received Saturday from his bedside at the Henry Grady hotel. He has been seriously sick for several days and it was announced that he was no better Saturday.

NEW MOTOR LAWS EFFECTIVE FEB. 1

Complete Set of Regulations Passed by Legislature To Be Enforced by Highway Officials.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Laws limiting the height, width and weight of motor vehicles; establishing a speed limit of 40 miles an hour over Georgia highways and providing a complete set of traffic regulations over the roads of the state passed by the legislature at its session last summer will become effective February 1 and will be enforced by officers of the state highway department, according to information obtained Saturday at the office of Secretary of State S. G. McLendon.

Under the new law the state highways will be provided with traffic regulations similar in many respects to those used in cities. The speed limit on state roads outside of municipalities will be increased from 35 to 40 miles an hour for vehicles having pneumatic tires and weighing less than 10,000 pounds. From 10,000 to 16,000 pounds the limit is 25 miles an hour and over 16,000 pounds 20 miles an hour.

Restrictions as to size and weight made in the new law will become effective Wednesday and it is probable that many huge trucks and vans now being used in the state will come under the ban of the new regulations, according to officials. No accurate check on the number of vehicles to be outlawed under the new law can

MILLION IS PAID FOR CHAIN STORES

Southern Stores Corporation Buys Piggly Wiggly Units in Atlanta, Tampa and Other Cities.

Piggly Wiggly corporation Saturday closed deals whereby 78 of their stores, located in Atlanta, Nashville, Tampa, Chattanooga and Knoxville, passed into the hands of the Southern Stores corporation of Atlanta. The stores brought $1,000,000, it was announced Saturday.

Announcement was made in Memphis Saturday afternoon by J. D. Maury, president of the Piggly Wiggly corporation, of the Atlanta, Chattanooga, Knoxville and Nashville stores, 60 in all, changing hands. They brought $600,000.

The Tampa deal was announced later Saturday afternoon in Atlanta by R. J. Marshburn, of Miami, Fla., president of the Southern Stores corporation, who stated that the sale price for the 18 Tampa stores was an additional $400,000.

PIGGLY WIGGLY SALE ANNOUNCED IN MEMPHIS.

Memphis, Tenn., January 28.—(AP) Sale of 60 stores in Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville and Atlanta for a total consideration of $600,000 to the Southern Stores Corporation of Atlanta was announced tonight by the Piggly Wiggly corporation.

Sale of these units brought a total of between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000, the amount of Piggly Wiggly holdings disposed of, and left the corporation in control of only the Memphis and Columbus, Ohio, establishments.

J. D. Maury, president of the corporation, said that last fall the corporation saw the advisability of transferring the various stores throughout the country to individual owners and managership as the most efficient plan for operation.

Purchasers continuing to operate under a Piggly Wiggly license pay a royalty to the Memphis corporation for use of the name and the unique style of equipment.

The Southern Stores corporation is headed by R. J. Marshburn, of Miami, Fla., who is moving to Atlanta, where headquarters of the company will be

BIBLE AND SERMON USED IN SOLVING DACULA MURDERS

Confession Obtained by Exhorting Accomplice To Repent and Ask Forgiveness.

Lawrenceville, Ga., January 28.—(Special.)—A Bible read by a woman and the fifth commandment were used by Sheriff W. T. McGee in obtaining a confession to the brutal murders of Jim Bennefield, 55-year-old farmer and his nine-year-old son, John, slain near Dacula on December 16 or 17, from Joe Price, 40, farmer, who implicated two other men.

Sam Gower, 42, farmer, and LeGrande Sikes, 24, farmer, are the two men implicated in Price's confession, which states that Gower killed the senior Bennefield with a hammer and that Sikes killed the child with a butcher knife.

After having held Price in jail for several days and feeling sure that he had one of the right men, Sheriff McGee Friday night decided on his novel third degree method. He led the prisoner into a room where Mrs. McGee, the sheriff's wife, was sitting.

Cain Slew Abel.

Price was told to sit down. Mrs. McGee slowly began reading Scriptural passages, beginning with the first murder, that of Abel by Cain. Many other Biblical homicides were cited and the punishment meted to murderers stressed.

Price tensed and became nervous. He paled and his face became strained. Mrs. McGee ceased reading.

"Thou shalt not kill."

Sheriff McGee started talking, talking with the consoling unction of a preacher. His text was the fifth commandment and his message was God's mercy to penitent sinners. Suddenly the sheriff halted, as suddenly as his wife had stopped reading.

Mrs. McGee knelt and, face lifted, began a prayer. Down on his knees came Price, tears of Bible-stirred remorse streaming down his face. Haltingly he began to pour out his story of Bennefield's murder and ask forgiveness.

Confession Begins.

And then he began the confession which ended Saturday morning with the arrest of Sikes and the transfer of Gower, who was already in jail, to Fulton tower in Atlanta for safe keeping.

Price, in his confession, set the date of the murder as Saturday night, December 17. He says that he, Gower and Sikes went to Bennefield's house after parking their Ford car about three-quarters of a mile away.

Bennefield, father and son, sat before an open grate when the three men entered the house, Price said. A general conversation began, in the

MRS. T. W. LATHAM, PIONEER RESIDENT, TAKEN BY DEATH

Mrs. Thomas W. Latham, 79, one of Atlanta's most beloved pioneer residents, died early this morning at the residence, 900 Penn avenue, following an illness of many months.

Mrs. Latham, who was one of the most devout Christian workers in the city, was a native of Greenville, moving to Atlanta early in life.

She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Edgar Allen Alexander, national democratic committeewoman for Georgia, and Mrs. Mary Latham Cox, and a brother, J. M. Park, of Greenville.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Hobo Dies 'Inch-by-Inch' With Jest Upon His Lips

:: LAUGHS AFTER ARMS AND LEGS ARE AMPUTATED ::

Newark, N. J., January 28.—(United News.)—With a jest upon his lips, a man named William Connors, a tramp, finished dying inch by inch and joint by joint in the Newark city hospital today.

It took him 35 days. A policeman picked him out of a gutter, dead drunk, Christmas eve. His whole body was frost bitten. At the hospital next day, they asked him his name. He told them. Age? "Forty-two." Address? "Haven't got any—here, I guess?" Occupation? The patient laughed. "Bum," he answered.

They called him "Bill the Bum." He liked it. Doctors and nurses agreed he was the most cheerful patient they ever attended.

Gangrene soon made it necessary to amputate his left arm. His right leg went next. Then, regretfully and apologetically, the surgeons amputated his remaining arm.

Somehow, he continued to live. More than that, he continued to make wisecracks.

"Don't worry, Doc.," he said. "When I get out of this joint, I'll make a cleanup. Just give me a tin cup and I'm a rich man."

But he grew weaker and it became necessary to amputate his last remaining limb—his left leg. Bill, swaddled like a mummy, okeyed the procedure.

He was too weak, however, and knew this morning that he was going to die. A nurse asked him if she could light a cigarette for him and hold it while he smoked.

"Don't bother, sister," he said. "There's going to be plenty of smoke where I'm going soon, and I won't need those arms to get it, either."

He laughed uproariously: "That's a hot one. Slip it to the doc, will you, sister?"

Half an hour later, he was dead. The shades of D'Artagnan and Cyrano de Bergerac, should they wish to visit his grave, can find it in the Potter's field Sunday.

ATTORNEY SILENT ON SUDDEN CHANGE IN FOX'S ATTITUDE

Repudiation Made to Chief of Defense Alienists Who Was Examining Prisoner in Cell.

WALSH PLANNING ANOTHER PLEA

Will Claim Slayer Is Insane Now If Jury Finds Him Sane at Time of Killing.

Los Angeles, January 28.—(AP)—The kidnaping and killing of Marian Parker was disclaimed today by William Edward Hickman, whose counsel declared that the youth had repudiated his confession to the police.

Jerome K. Walsh, defense attorney, said Hickman does not admit the slaying of the schoolgirl, but refused to elaborate on the sudden change in the attitude of the accused youth, who heretofore had been ever ready to confess his guilt to officers, newspaper reporters and others.

The repudiation of the confession obtained by the police was made to Dr. A. L. Skoog, of Kansas City, chief of the staff of defense alienists, who visited Hickman in his cell.

Along with the latest turn in the case, Walsh revealed plans for continuing the fight for Hickman's life should he meet with defeat in the accused killer's insanity trial, which will be resumed in superior court Monday.

Walsh said that if the jury in the present hearing finds Hickman was sane at the time of the crime, an arrest of judgment will be asked, coupled with a demand for another trial on the plea that the defendant now is insane. In this connection Walsh point-

1,000 VOLUNTEERS FIGHT TO CHECK FOREST BLAZE

Pontchatoula, La., January 28.—(AP)—A thousand men and boys late today were battling against a forest fire, breaking out ten miles from here today and burning over 30 square miles.

The flames along a three-mile front, had crossed the Pontchatoula and Yellow Water creeks, traveling eastward. No loss of life had been eported.

Settling of the winds tonight turned the tide in favor of the fire fighters. Members of the Pontchatoula fire department assisting in the emergency expressed belief that the fire would be brought under control by tomorrow.

The area burned is a broad expanse of grass and forest lands almost uninhabited and no fears were entertained that there would be loss of life. Workers were protecting homes in the path of the fire by "back firing" and saving strawberry areas in the same manner.

Elaborate Rites To Observe Stephens' Birthday Feb. 11

Preliminary plans for a mammoth memorial service in Atlanta to Alexander Hamilton Stephens on the one hundredth and sixteenth birthday of the noted Georgian on Saturday, February 1, were unfolded Saturday by Dr. Garnett Quillan, chairman of a special committee appointed by Governor L. G. Hardman to have charge of arrangements.

The governor will receive from Gutzon Borglum, internationally known sculptor, who carved the marble statue of the famous Georgian, which was unveiled December 8 in the national hall of fame, Washington, an exact plaster model of the original. This will be formally presented to the state at a service to be held at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of February 11.

Preceding the presentation ceremony, a parade will be staged through the streets of the city at 2 o'clock that afternoon. The Stephens statue replica will be placed in the rotunda of the state capitol following the presentation ceremony in the afternoon.

Senators Walter F. George and William J. Harris will make short addresses at the presentation ceremony and Governor Hardman also will participate. City, county and state officials will be invited to appear, and all addresses will be limited to five minutes each, it was said. All local military units will cooperate, assuring an impressive parade.

Enthusiastic responses have been received from Wesleyan, Agnes Scott, Bessie Tift and other leading female colleges of the state that they will actively cooperate and send their senior classes en mass to Atlanta for the celebration at the auditorium.

An interesting program of a number of five-minute speeches and music is being arranged. The speakers invited are prominent citizens from various sections of the state, and are selected because of their peculiar fitness for the occasion. Full announcement of the program will be made through the press at a later date.

All railroads of the state have agreed to put on a special one and one-third fare, round trip for this unusual celebration.

$15,000 IS DAMAGE OF ROCKY FORD FIRES

Rockyford, Ga., January 28.—(AP) High winds contributed to the cause of the burning of four residences here yesterday. The blaze started from an unknown origin in the home of Arthur Burke and spread quickly into three other homes. The residences destroyed were occupied by Edwin Miller, E. S. Bolton and Mrs. A. L. Mock. The loss was $15,000, with $7,000 insurance.

FEAR AIRMAN IS LOST IN OCEAN AFTER LEAP

Melbourne, Australia, January 28.—(AP)—Fear for the life of Lieutenant H. Quiller, noted parachute jumper, is felt here as an outcome of his latest exploit.

When Lieutenant Quiller dropped from a plane while giving an exhibition off Bondy Beach, Sydney, he fell into the water and drifted out to sea into a section known to be sharks infested. While 12,000 spectators awaited his reappearance a surf boat rushed to rescue him, but an hour later Quiller had not appeared and it was feared that he was lost.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Radio telephonic communication between the Netherlands and the United States will be inaugurated Monday at 9:25 a. m., when the foreign minister of the Netherlands will talk with Secretary Kellogg.

Arrangements were completed today for the conversation by the Dutch telephone administration.

HILL JURORS VISION SPOOKY BASEMENT

Ottawa, Ill., January 28.—(AP)—A scene in a spooky basement, with the steel spade glittering in the light of an old kerosene lamp as it chipped a grave from hard clay and made tell-tale marks on the shoe that guided, was reconstructed by the prosecution today in its fight to prove Harry Hill shot and killed his mother and buried her body in the cellar of her home at Streator.

The spade, minus a piece of metal which ordinarily would have protected the foot of a digger, was described by Sheriff Floyd Clark. A pair of woman's shoes, toes scratched and smeared with clay were identified by the sheriff as those he saw a deputy take from a cupboard the night the body of Mrs. Eliza A. Hill was discovered. And standing beside the woman's shoes, the sheriff testified, were those of a man, clay-coated and dented on the instep of the soles.

Fails To Identify Clothes.

The state contends the marks were made on Harry's shoes by the unguarded spade blade and that before burying his mother's body he removed her shoes, later placing them with his in the cupboard.

A Streator clothier and neighbor of the Hills, Sidney Iskowitch, was unable to identify a blue suit of clothes taken from the Hill home as one he sold Harry. He said, however, it was similar to one he had sold him. The witness was understood to have identified the suit before a grand jury.

ARMY OF REVOLUTION LAUDED BY COSGRAVE

Philadelphia, January 28.—(AP)—On the snow-clad hills where Washington and his army of Continentals suffered through the terrible winter of 150 years ago, William T. Cosgrave, president of the executive council of the Irish Free State, today paid tribute to their heroism.

While the wind swept across the snow-leagured redoubts and drifted the snow high about the little huts on the hillside, President Cosgrave stood with bared head in Washington's headquarters. Before him stood the desk where the father of his country, in that anxious winter, had sat writing his dispatches, and on a pen in the wall nearby hung the long cloak and three-cornered hat which belonged to General Washington.

As he set out for Valley Forge amid the first heavy snowstorm of the winter, Cosgrave looked at the low hanging clouds and whirling snow and commented on the coincidence.

DE VALERA CHEERED BY CHICAGOANS.

Chicago, January 28.—(AP)—Greeted by the cheers of more than 1,500 ardent supporters of the Irish republican movement, Eamon De Valera, leader of the Fianna Fail party, tonight addressed the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, denying most of the statements made by William T. Cosgrave, Irish Free State executive, on his visit here last week.

De Valera made no mention of Cosgrave's visit, but his supporters described Cosgrave's call here as a spectacular but ineffective bit of propaganda. De Valera is in this country to raise funds to establish an Irish republican newspaper in Ireland.

IMMIGRATION ACT SCORED BY SPEAKER AT IRISH MEETING

New York, January 28.—(AP)—The federal government cannot afford to use such "flimsy material" as the national origins clause of the immigration act as a foundation for its immigration policy, Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, told the American Irish Historical society tonight.

Speaking at the 13th annual banquet of the society, he said: "My reason for asking for the elimination of the 'national origins' method to determine the quota of each country is that I find that we have not sufficient official or other data upon which to determine the quota of each country upon this basis and that it would lead to discrimination between different nationalities, which is just what congress diligently endeavored to avoid in passing the immigration act of 1924."

NO INDICTMENTS RETURNED BY JURY IN LYNCHING QUIZ

Whitesburg, Ky., January 28.—(AP) No indictments were returned in the case today by a county grand jury which had spent more than a week delving into the lynching November 29, at Pound Gap, Va., near here, of Leonard Woods, negro.

Dozens of witnesses from the coal field towns through which the mob traveled to reach Whitesburg, where the negro was taken from a jail, were questioned. No witnesses identified any members of the mob. The negro was accused of killing Ferschel Deaton, mine foreman, because he refused to give him a "lift" in an automobile.

During its term, which ended today, the jury returned 150 indictments in other cases.

PINK BOLLWORM OUTBREAK STARTS CRUSADE IN TEXAS

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—The department of agriculture announced today it planned to unite federal and state forces immediately for control of the pink bollworm outbreak in western Texas. The new infestation is giving the department serious concern, it was said, presenting what it regards as possibly the greatest menace to the cotton areas not only in Texas but eastward throughout the cotton belt, since 1917.

The success of the eradication campaign in 1917 would seem to indicate, the department said today, that the present menace can be similarly controlled if prompt action is taken. Extensive scouting and field work is now under way to determine the extent of the pink bollworm invasion.

VICTIM OF DRUG, IN STUPOR 7 DAYS, EXPECTED TO LIVE

Nashville, Tenn., January 28.—(AP) Perris Osman, 32, merchant at Norene, near here, is believed out of danger after two weeks of sleep following an overdose of a drug on January 14.

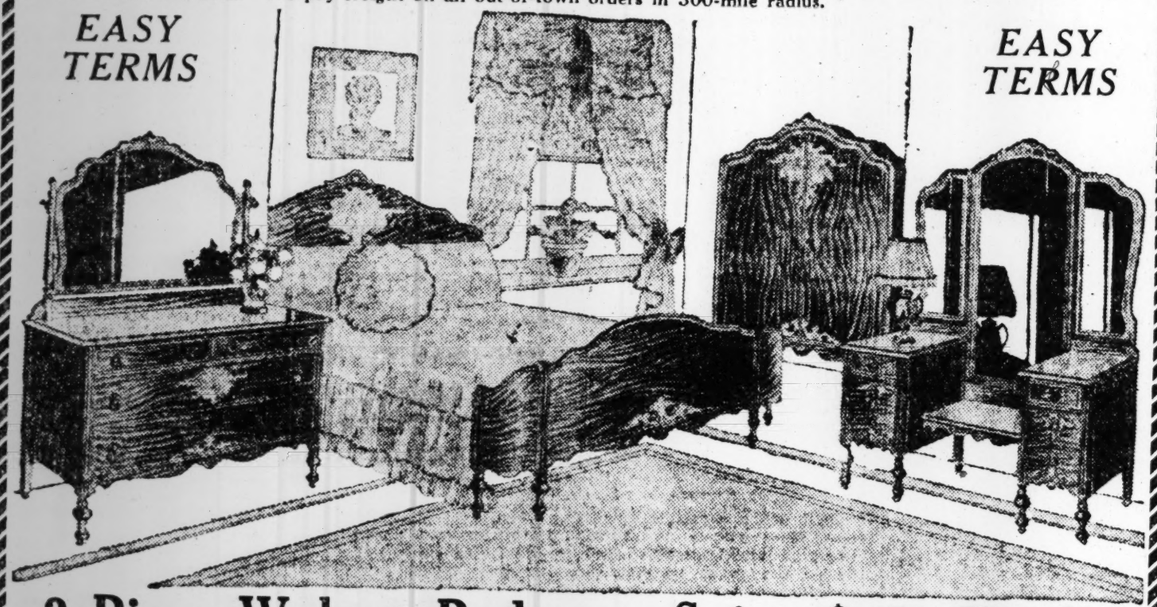

For seven days after he took a dose of 600 grains of the drug by mistake he remained in a coma. He has awakened only for brief intervals since that time. A dose of 750 grains of the drug, administered over a week's period, would produce a sleep resulting in death, physicians said.

FORD, JOHNSON IN COUNCIL RACE

On the heels of announcement Saturday by former Alderman Charles M. Ford that he will be a candidate to succeed Councilman Frank Callaway, of the tenth ward, when the latter resigns to accept a position in Fulton county sheriff's office, Solon Johnson, Atlanta real estate man, issued a formal statement of his candidacy to fill the councilmanic position now held by W. Garland Cooper.

Mr. Ford stated that he will seek the position through selection of city council unless Mr. Callaway quits his position in time to fill it in the city primary to be held this spring. In the latter event, he will offer for the position subject to the primary.

Formal entrance Saturday of Mr. Johnson in the race to succeed Mr. Cooper places him and Mr. Cooper definitely in the race as opponents, since Mr. Cooper took the field Friday night.

It also is rumored that John C. Mackey and J. R. Curtis are prospective aspirants for the Cooper position. Mr. Ford will not have opposition, according to predictions Saturday.

Mr. Johnson pointed out in his announcement that he has been a resident of Atlanta for 25 years, and has lived in the tenth ward for 21 years of that time. For 15 years he was a paying teller of the Fourth National bank, and for the past three years has been connected with a local real estate firm.

He is a past master of the Capitol View lodge Masons and a deacon in the Capitol View Baptist church.

"If elected, I shall render the people of the tenth ward and of Atlanta the best possible service, being hindered by no clique or organization," Mr. Johnson said.

MOTHER OF ATLANTA ATTORNEY IS CALLED

News of the death of Mrs. Martha Anne Bates Scott, mother of Thomas Howell Scott, Atlanta attorney, was received here Saturday by relatives. Mrs. Scott died Friday afternoon at her residence in Childress, Texas, after a stroke of apoplexy suffered Wednesday, from which she never recovered consciousness.

Although 83 years old, Mrs. Scott had been in excellent health and her sudden sickness and death has come as a severe shock to her many friends in the south. She was a widow of Andrew Tabor Scott, who died in 1916, three years after the couple celebrated its golden wedding anniversary. Mrs. Scott was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Bates, of Spartanburg, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott lived in Canton, Ga., for a number of years following their marriage. In 1892 they moved to Texas and remained there the rest of their lives. Mrs. Scott was the mother of 12 children, eight of whom survive her. Two years ago she visited the youngest of her sons, Thomas Howell Scott, in Atlanta, endearing herself to a large circle of friends here.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at the First Methodist church of Childress, and interment was in the same city.

In Atlanta Mrs. Scott is survived, in addition to her son, by two grandchildren, Miss Mary Standard and Mrs. Anna S. Harrison, and a son-in-law, C. T. Standard.

INDIAN CHIEFTAIN AND FATHER OF 41 VICE WAR 'CATCH'

New Orleans, La., January 28.—(AP) A 95-year-old negro, who said he was the father of 41 children, the eldest 72, has been enmeshed in the proverbial dragnet with a self-styled Indian chief, in a widespread local drive on crime and vice.

Three days ago, Thomas Healey, superintendent of police, instituted a campaign against gunmen, bandits, hotel "lobby steerers" and other undesirables. Fourteen hundred suspicious characters, so far, have been arrested.

The aged and paternal negro, A. B. Tallon, said he pined for slavery times.

Chief "Red Wing" claimed sovereignty over a tribe of 150 aborigines near Tulsa, Okla., and a knack at charming snakes, but was unable to pay a $5 fine.

Mrs. G. M. Wilson, of 384 Dargan place, Saturday asked The Constitution to aid in the search for her 15-year-old son, Robert Wilson, who was last seen at his home Friday morning when he left to attend Joe Brown Junior High school, of which he is a student in the seventh grade. The Georgia Baptist convention will observe its fiftieth anniversary of the state mission board this year. Although the convention was organized in 1822, it was not until 1878 that the convention established a state mission board. Coming this year to the jubilee of Baptist state missions in Georgia, the recent session of the convention, held in Augusta, authorized the appointment of a jubilee committee to work out fitting plans for the celebration of this anniversary.

The committee has been appointed and is composed of the following widely known Baptist leaders in Georgia: W. H. Major, pastor Capitol Avenue Baptist church, Atlanta, chairman; Governor L. G. Hardman; Dr. Charles E. Burts, pastor First Baptist church, Macon; Dr. J. C. Brewton, pastor at Vidalia; Dr. John D. The program is being sponsored by the Calendar society of the church.

CHURCH QUALIFIES FOR POST OF JUDGE OF CRIMINAL COURT

R. E. Church, attorney, Saturday qualified as a candidate for the position of judge of the criminal court of Atlanta to succeed Judge Jesse M. Wood, incumbent.

In making his announcement, Mr. Church declared he is not running to oppose Judge Wood or anyone else, but is making the race strictly on his own merits.

"If elected, I will put an end to the menace of suspended sentences in misdemeanor cases which have been held to be clearly illegal by the appellate court of the state," Mr. Church said.

He is a past master and life member of the Masons, a past exalted ruler and life member of the Elks, a past grand of the Odd Fellows and is prominent in fraternal circles.

He attended the Georgia School of Technology and was admitted to the bar in Atlanta.

Peril of Sunday Accidents Enhanced by Cold Weather

Another Sunday—time for more automobile accidents.

Cold weather and attendant motor "breakdowns," increased highway traffic—these will bring disaster to a number of persons. Each Sunday writes a story of death and injury, and today will be no exception to the rule.

Will you be riding today? Will you be walking where automobiles may strike you? If so, your chances of being included on the list of casualties are as heavy as anyone else's.

Are you protected against the ever-growing wave of traffic accidents? Is the future of your wife and children or those who are dependent on you safeguarded? You need insurance!

The Constitution offers its readers the famous $7,500 travel accident policy issued by the North American Insurance company, of Chicago, an old and reliable concern which already has paid more than $53,000 in claims to Constitution policyholders.

The policy, which costs only $1.25 per year, provides for payment of sums ranging from $7,500 in case of death resulting from certain accidents; heavy cash payment for permanent injuries and $10 weekly indemnity for disability resulting from the stated accidents. And the cost is only a fraction of a penny a day.

A train wreck, a crash of automobiles, the speeding wheels of an onrushing car or a burning building may leave you a victim of the ever-growing wave of accidents today.

In this paper appear regular advertisements supplying full details of the great offer. Watch for them.

This $7,500 travel, $2,000 auto and $1,000 pedestrian accident policy is issued only to subscribers of The Daily and Sunday Constitution and immediately dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 17 and 70 at $1.25 per year.

Those taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution by mail, either through a postoffice or rural route delivery, for one year are eligible by paying $1.25 per year per policy above the subscription price.

In sending applications for insurance, the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation. If beneficiary is desired, full Christian name must be given and relation of same to the insured.

STARVING DEER IN CANADA EAT TOBACCO LEAVES

Peachland, B. C., January 28.—(AP) It's a hard winter when deer take to chewing tobacco for sustenance.

Owing to the unusual depth of snow in the Okanagan country, deer have been driven down to the valleys to forage. They found two long test rows of different varieties of tobacco that had not been harvested sticking up above the snow and gnawed off every leaf, from mild Virginia to burley chewing.

Hospital Inmates Narrowly Miss Death in Fire

Waycross, Ga., January 28.—(AP)—Fire practically destroyed the King's Daughters hospital here this morning, the blaze originating, it is thought, from a flue in the upper part of the building. The hospital was filled to capacity, but all patients were removed to nearby homes. A strong wind fanned the flames, and it was only through heroic work of firemen and hundreds of volunteers that the lives of patients were saved.

Students in Oratorical Contest Are Assured Aid From Bar Members

Millard Reese, Association President, Indorses Declamations; Interest Among Students Awakening.

The oratorical business, it seems, is picking up among Georgia high-school students.

Millard Reese, of Brunswick, president of the Georgia Bar association, in a letter received by The Constitution Saturday assured students planning to enter the contest that "members of the Georgia Bar association throughout the state stood ready and willing to render to students in their respective localities who are contemplating entering this contest all assistance that they properly can render."

Mr. Reese's letter follows:

"I am very glad indeed that The Constitution will sponsor again this year the national oratorical contest on the constitution of the United States among students of accredited high schools. For some yers past I have been rather closely associated with this contest in Glynn academy, the local high school. The number of contestants who have entered has been gratifying and the standard of their efforts has been high.

"If none but the students who have participated had profited, the contests still would have been well worth while. But the contests have inspired and developed in the student body generally a new interest in the constitution, in the principles upon which it is based and in the thrilling events that led up to its adoption and were present in its making.

"Brunswick's representative last year was the winner of the state contest and hence was Georgia's representative in the regional contest. Naturally this has tended to increase interest in the contest locally.

Ready to Help.

"I am sure that members of the Georgia Bar association throughout the state stand ready and willing to render to students in their respective localities who are contemplating entering this contest all assistance that they properly can render. As a rule, the members whose assistance would be desired are very busy men, but it would be surprising to me if one of them should decline to render such service. I hope students throughout the state who desire to enter will not hesitate to call upon our members for proper assistance."

Dr. J. S. Stewart, of the University of Georgia, and president of the Georgia High School association, is in charge of the contest in Georgia. All high school students in Georgia in member schools, under 19 years of age, are eligible.

The plan of elimination is that each school will select its ablest representative. This representative will compete with other students named in like manner in the district competition and the winners of the contests in each of the 12 congressional districts will meet in the state finals. The state winner will compete in the zone finals, to be held in Raleigh, N. C., and the winner in that meet will compete in the national finals in Washington. Each zone winner will get a 12 weeks' tour of Europe during the summer free.

Interest Awakening.

Interest in the contest is awakening in all parts of Georgia. Each student wishing to enter the contest is advised to go to his school superintendent or principal and secure full information. During the past week booklets containing this information has been mailed to over 100 of the larger high schools in the state by Dr. Stewart.

Searcy Garrison, student at the Ochlochnee Consolidated school at Ochlochnee, writes:

"Please consider me a contestant and send literature and full details for same."

Many other letters have been received, and the indications are that this will be the largest and best of the contests staged in Georgia.

The contestants must restrict orations to two subjects: 1, the development of the United States constitution, and 2, the present significance of the United States constitution.

Foot Health Shoppe, New And Unique Store, Formed

Members of the firm of the Foot Health Shoppe, which opens Monday morning at 110 Peachtree Arcade. Left, W. R. Freeman; center, Dr. R. A. Parker, and DeLacy Law, Jr.

A new and unique addition to Atlanta's footwear establishments will have its formal opening Monday morning when the Foot Health Shoppe opens its doors to the public at 110 Peachtree arcade.

The company is composed of three men already widely known in Atlanta—Dr. R. A. Parker, foot relief specialist; W. R. Freeman and DeLacy Law, Jr. All three were connected with the Fred S. Stewart company for many years. Mr. Freeman spent 20 years with this company, Dr. Parker 11 years, and Mr. Law five years.

The Foot Health Shoppe will specialize in the famous Drew Arch Rest shoe, which enjoys a national reputation, and in addition will carry a full and complete line of special health and stylish dress shoes. It also will operate a special foot relief department, which will be in charge of Dr. Parker, the department to feature the Wilbur Coon special combination shoe for women, Wizard Lightfoot appliances and Dr. Parker's special made-to-measure shoes. The shoppe also will carry the J. J. Grover shoes, one of the best known lines of comfort shoes for women in America.

Mr. Freeman and Mr. Law are well acquainted with the various lines of comfort and dress shoes to be featured by the shoppe, having had extensive experience in handling them at the Stewart company. Mr. Freeman is a veteran and popular salesman with a wide following, and Mr. Law, who was advertising manager at Stewart's, also is widely and popularly known.

The shoppe announces that while it will carry shoes for women only, its foot relief department will be for the service of the general public—distorted foot conditions of men, women and children alike being treated.

LANDING OF 'BLIMP' ON SHIP STIRS NAVY

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—The feat of the Los Angeles in making contact at sea with the new aircraft carrier Saratoga is considered by Commander C. E. Rosendahl, in charge of the big dirigible on its flight yesterday, as having "proved the feasibility of landing an airship on the deck of a large ship."

At the request of Secretary Wilbur, a report was made today to the navy department by Rosendahl of the airship's landing on the Saratoga's deck—something never before accomplished—at sea off Newport, R. I. He said the wind was "light but very gusty;" the entire operation took about an hour, and that a hose was led to the dirigible from the Saratoga and "fuel, water, supplies and all passengers were transferred from one ship to the other."

Lieutenant Commander Garland C. Fulton, lighter than air expert, who was a passenger aboard the Los Angeles, arrived in Washington today to make a report to Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics.

Fulton said that the landing was accomplished without any danger to either craft or to their crews. When the lines were dropped to the deck of the Saratoga, he recounted, they were placed in blocks by the crew and were drawn until the control car rested on the deck. He pointed out, as did Admiral Moffett, that the dirigible was more secure in its position on the Saratoga than on the specially equipped Patoka which has a mooring mast for dirigibles.

Moffett expressed the opinion that yesterday's experiment proved conclusively dirigibles could be used in trans-Atlantic commerce and that the radius of a dirigible is of great magnitude. He said that an airship such as the Los Angeles would be capable of crossing the Atlantic in two days and carrying 100 passengers with a great degree of safety.

COLONEL WINSHIP GOES TO MANILA AS GOVERNOR'S AID

Confederate Dies.

Richmond, Va., January 28.—(AP)—General Edgar Dalby Taylor, 79, commander of the army of northern Virginia, United Confederate veterans, died at his home on Three-Chopt road here late yesterday. Funeral services will be held here Monday morning from the Second Presbyterian church where General Taylor was an elder, with interment in Hollywood cemetery.

TWITTY EDUCATIONAL FOUNDATION BEGUN

Brunswick, Ga., January 28.—(AP)—There was an interesting meeting last night of the friends of the late F. E. Twitty for the purpose of organizing the F. E. Twitty foundation to distribute a fund to be employed in the education of worthy young men and women who are students in schools and colleges. Millard Reese, who called the meeting, was made permanent chairman of the foundation. He is to select 12 trustees to serve with him.

Twitty had long maintained a fund for the purpose named. It is proposed to augment this with popular subscriptions and make the fund thus raised a perpetual one as a memorial to Mr. Twitty, who was a prominent Brunswick lawyer.

MOSCOW SHORT ON FOOD; PEASANTS HOARD SUPPLIES

Moscow, January 28.—(AP)—Moscow is experiencing a certain amount of shortage in butter, eggs, tea, copper, soaps and textiles of all sorts.

These articles can be purchased at fancy prices in the market place only, most stores having little or none to offer. Authorities are taking energetic measures to secure these necessities in plentiful quantities, saying that the shortage is due largely to the hoarding of staples by peasants who are holding them for higher spring prices.

LACK OF TAXI FARE LANDS GIRL IN JAIL ON OLD CHARGE

Kansas City, January 28.—(AP)—(United News.)—Miss Jean Davis, 29, didn't have $7.65 for taxi fares.

The taxi driver had her arrested. She was fined $15 because she did not pay the driver. She did not have the $15, either.

Then two city detectives recognized her as a woman wanted on a forgery charge. She was taken to justice court and arraigned.

Bond was set at $2,500. She didn't have that, and was taken to the county jail.

The taxi driver still is out his $7.65.

PROTECTION

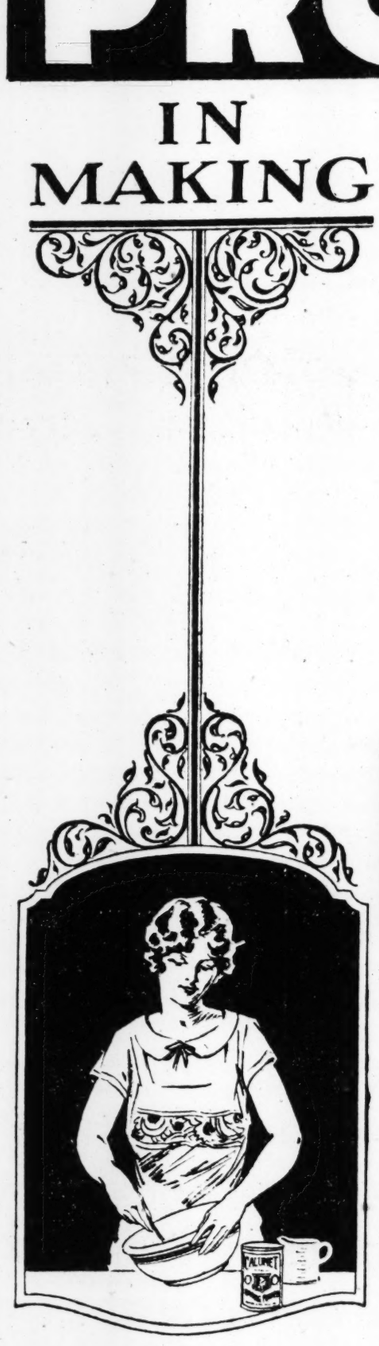

IN MAKING

Many bakings are total failures before they ever enter the oven. And the sad part of it is that the housewife does not realize it. The cause of such failures usually lies in the lack of proper leavening action, when the dough is being mixed. There is no way of determining by sight or touch whether the dough is ready for oven heat, whether the baking will prove successful.

But there is a definite way to safeguard against "blind baking methods," against possibility of such failures. And that is through the use of

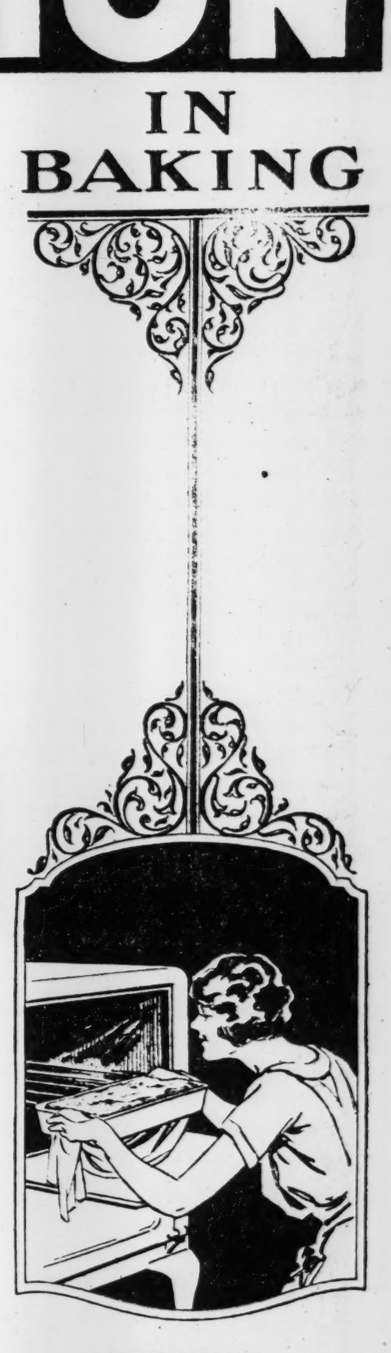

IN BAKING

CALUMET
THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

It is double acting. Contains two leavening units. One begins to work when the dough is mixed; the other waits for the heat of the oven, then both units work together.

When the dough goes into the oven, it is ready for oven heat. The result is, even and thoroughly raised bakings, always. The dependable double action of Calumet gives you protection against those mysterious failures that just seem to "happen."

RECIPE FOR CALUMET AMERICAN COFFEE CAKE

4½ cups flour — 6 tablespoons shortening
4½ level teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder — 2 eggs
1 level teaspoon salt — 1¼ cups milk
¼ teaspoon mace — 1 scant cup sugar

Sift flour, measure, add baking powder, salt, sugar, spice and sift three times. Work in shortening with tips of fingers. Beat eggs, add milk and gradually add to the dry ingredients. Beat thoroughly and pour into two square pans. Spread with the following:

1 cup graham cracker crumbs — 1 teaspoon mace
1 cup sugar — 6 tablespoons butter

Mix all together and spread on top of cake. Bake in a moderate oven 30—35 minutes at 350° F.

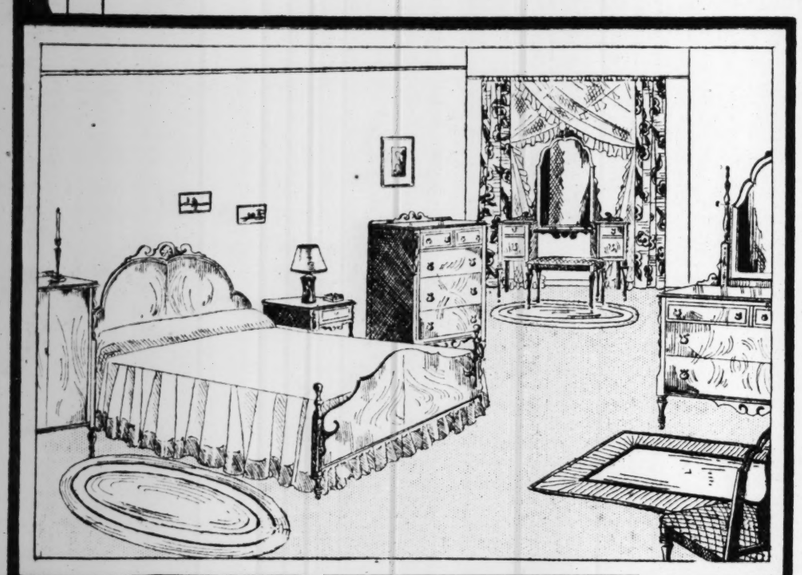

LESS THAN 1¢ PER BAKING

Calumet stops all waste and eliminates baking extravagance. Those delicacies many housewives feel they can afford to serve only occasionally and sparingly may be produced in abundance at a surprisingly moderate cost. The family can be furnished with a greater variety of better foods at a financial saving that is worth while.

2 FIRES CHARGED TO INCENDIARIES

Activity of firebugs Saturday again occupied attention of police detectives, when reports were made by Chief W. B. Cody of the fire department, that the blaze Friday night which badly damaged a two-story vacant house at 759 Boulevard, N. E., was of incendiary origin, and when police probing a robbery report at the Dixie Drug company, 332 Houston street, found evidence that the burglars had attempted to cover their robbery by setting fire to the store.

Chief of Detectives A. Lamar Poole at once assigned men to work on the cases. At a late hour Saturday night, detectives apparently had failed to uncover clues which might lead to apprehension of the firebugs.

No Clues Found.

Working on information that the Boulevard fire might have been caused by two boys who had been in the house several hours before the blaze started, detectives were unable to report any progress in the case. Also no clues have been discovered, so far as known, which might lead to arrests in the Courtland street fire Thursday in which seven Atlanta fire fighters were injured.

The attempt to destroy the Dixie Drug company store, following the robbery, was uncovered when detectives found evidence that a fire had been started on the floor of the store.

The building was ransacked, and a quantity of cigars, cigarettes and flashlight batteries stolen, police were told. The burglars accommodatingly placed a padlock on the jimmied front door when they left, according to police.

Piedmont Avenue Blaze.

In a fire early Saturday morning, the grocery store of Gus Nicholas, at Piedmont avenue and Cain street, was damaged badly. The fire was reported to have been of undetermined origin.

The boarding house of Mrs. Annie Farmer, at 205 Walton street, caught fire early in the morning from sparks from a flue, according to fire department reports.

The gorcery store of C. P. Lamb, at 114 Hurt street, was robbed of $25 worth of meats and cheese by burglars who entered through a rear window, according to police.

Mrs. F. W. Hansman, of 577 Barnett street, reported to police that her purse, containing $10, was snatched by a negro near her home.

J. O. Pittman, of Commerce, told police that his pocket was picked of $5 at Brookwood station.

APOPLEXY STROKE FATAL TO WOMAN WHILEDRIVINGAUTO

While driving to Atlanta with her husband, Mrs. C. S. White, 33, of Adamsville, suffered a stroke of apoplexy shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday night. She was rushed to Grady hospital by her husband, a convict guard at the river camp, who was driving the automobile, but died before medical attention could be administered.

The body has been taken to the undertaking establishment of Harry G. Poole.

INVENTOR OFFERS BIG MONEY TO TEN LOCAL MEN

Word has just been received from M. H. Rhodes, noted St. Louis inventor, asking us to locate ten reliable men to represent him in this locality. The opportunity offers a chance to make better than $75 a week at the start.

Mr. Rhodes is the inventor of the famous KRISS-KROSS stropper for razor blades. This amazing device often makes any kind of razor blade last as much as 6 to 9 months! Over one million orders have already been taken. Local demonstrators in all parts of the country have been cleaning up surprising sums. R. S. Hopkins, a local agent in Michigan, made $20 his first day. And M. Y. Fitzgerald, a spare-time representative in California, made over $200 in 7 days!

Mr. Rhodes' proposition is extremely generous. If you are interested, write him at 1418 Pendleton Ave., Dept. A-3172, St. Louis, Mo.—(adv.)

Valley Mills, of Callaway Group at LaGrange, Are Reorganized In Order To Form Five New and Separate Corporate Interests

Upper left, handsewing of oval, braided rugs of cotton chenille in the Valway Rug mills. Upper right, weaving kex industrial wiping cloths in the Oakleaf mills. Lower left, the testing department for measuring and analyzing products, and, lower right, an airplane view showing the Valley mills, Oakleaf mills, Rockweave mills, Hillside mills and the great cotton warehouses in the industrial center of LaGrange.

New Concerns Are Valway Rug, Rockweave, Oakleaf, Valley Waste Mills, and Truline, Inc.

BY LOYD A. WILHOIT.
Constitution Staff Representative.

LaGrange, Ga., January 28.—(Special.)—A significant development in the Georgia cotton textile world came to light here today when announcement was made that the organization which for the past 12 years has been known as the Valley Mills—one of the Callaway group of mills located at LaGrange—has been reorganized so as to form out of its various units five different corporations.

Cason J. Callaway, who established the Valley Mills and has been president of the company since its inception, will remain at the head of the five new corporations, and control and management of the corporation will remain as in the past.

The five new corporations formed out of the Valley Mills will be The Valway Rug Mills, manufacturing high-grade chenille rugs of cotton in quality and design that set a standard, not only for the south but for the entire nation.

Truline, Inc., manufacturers of men's and boys' trousers and riding breeches.

The Rockweave Mills, manufacturers of a complete line of laundry textile supplies, including canvas baskets and truck, nets, cover cloths, padding, felt and twine.

The Oakleaf Mills, manufacturers of industrial and service wiping cloths.

The Valley Waste Mills, utilizers and converters of cotton waste into grades adapted for spinning and automobile upholstery purposes.

Fuller E. Callaway—founder of the Callaway group of mills in LaGrange, a pioneer in the textile industry in the south and a figure of national prominence in cotton manufacturing—will be chairman of the board of directors of the five new corporations. His son, Cason J. Callaway, who now is president of the new organization, will continue as president of the entire Callaway group of mills.

The five new corporations were organized by Cason J. Callaway during recent years after extensive experimental tests in the products which they turn out, and their incorporation as separate bodies is due to tremendous growth in their business. Officials of the new organizations believe that better service may be rendered by definite heads, personnel and responsibility toward giving the highest service in each of the divisions. This opinion led to the reorganization move consumated this week.

Location of Mills.

Four of the five corporations formed this week are located at LaGrange, and the fifth—Truline, Inc.,—is at Roanoak, Ala. Distribution of the products of all five will be handled from the LaGrange general offices except in the case of Valway rugs. Southern distribution of these beautiful products is centered at LaGrange with Frank Edwards as sales-manager. Eastern and western distribution is handled by Guy A. Reed in New York city.

Directing officials of the new corporation will be:

Rockweave Mills: W. H. Turner, Jr., vice president and genera manager; H. L. Richardson, sales manager; Ben Hill Pinson, assistant sales manager.

Truline, Inc.: I. B. Grimes, general superintendent; George M. Forrester, vice president and plant manager; Sam D. McDaniel, vice president and sales manager; H. G. Almand, assistant sales manager.

Oakleaf Mills: I. B. Grimes, vice president and factory manager; T. J. Callaway, sales manager; R. H. Teat, assistant sales manager.

Valley Waste Mills: Grady S. Kennington, general manager; Fuller E. Callaway, Jr., treasurer.

Build Communities.

The Callaway Mills have been pioneers in the practice of upbuilding the industrial communities surrounding them as well as upbuilding quality in their manufactured products. As early as 1906 kindergartens and schools were built to serve the youth of their employees, and without interruption this system has been continued until advantages now offered employees include three schools, eight churches, six greenhouses, six Boy Scout troops, three bands, two Y. M. C. A.s', hospital and visiting nurse service, sanitary sewerage connections with every home, and all modern urban conveniences.

The five new corporations, manufacturing highly diversified products, are doubly interesting due to the success and magnitude of the strictly textile Callaway mills. The story of the growth and expansion of their products, as well as the tremendous increase in volume which they have won, reads like a romance. Before actually entering upon manufacture of any product other than the original strictly textile goods, in each case an experimental and research department was organized in order to perfect machinery, and only after a careful inspection of world markets to determine that material best adapted to produce articles in the most economical manner and of the highest possible quality.

Not until perfection of the plans was actually accomplished were engineers allowed to proceed with construction of plants necessitated by the expansion program. As an illustration, in the Valway mills three methods of dyeing were installed and tested before equipment satisfying the management was procured. In many cases the equipment was not available in the markets but was specially designed so as best to meet its particular purpose.

Tremendous Expansion.

The reward of this patient, quality building system is illustrated by the fact that in 1927 distribution increased over 250 per cent, a fact which led to separation of the five departments into individual corporations in order to place a definite responsibility on officials in charge of each. At the same time products manufactured by the five corporations will bear labels certifying that they are divisions of the Callaway mills, a fact which will necessitate upholding the quality for which this organization is noted.

The Callaway mills were organized in a modest way in 1900 with only one comparatively small mill. Their policies of service and quality have caused them to grow to such an extent that they now consume more than 100,000 bales of cotton annually. As part of a program of progressive growth the mills seven years ago organized their own selling agency in New York, with branch in Chicago, Boston and Akron—all being established in order to directly control distribution. Distribution of the five additional companies has been steadily developed and they now function directly under sales managers of the various divisions.

These five companies, as stated above, are a continuation of the organization launched by Fuller E. Callaway, who was born and reared in LaGrange. In 1900 he established in LaGrange a duck mill called the Unity Cotton Mills. Three years later he took over the management of the Milstead Manufacturing company in Milstead, Ga., and this is the only mill in the group not built by the Callaway interests.

The Elm City mill was built in LaGrange in 1907 and the following year the Unity Spinning mill was built to turn out yarns, as a subsidiary of the Unity Cotton mills. This was the first venture of the company out of the strictly cotton duck field.

Manchester Mills.

The Manchester Cotton mills were built at Manchester, Ga., in 1911, and was the largest unit in the Callaway group at that time. It made moleskins and sateens largely for the automobile trade, a second departure from the strictly textile field. Still another new line was added in 1915 with the building of the Hillside Cotton mills at LaGrange, constructed to produce whipcords and raw stock dyed products.

In 1915 Cason J. Callaway, who had worked in the mills for several summers while on vacation from college and who later was in the clerical department of the Unity Spinning mills, organized and became manager of the Valley mills at LaGrange, a subsidiary of the Hillside Cotton mills. The Valley mills were run for seven years exclusively utilizing byproducts of cotton mills.

In 1921 the Callaway interests took over the J. T. Perkins company, of Brooklyn, N. Y., makers of a camel's hair press cloth and yarns, used as filter fabrics.

In addition to the new lines represented by the five companies organized this week, experimental units were established at intervals of about a year on rugs, wiping cloths, laundry textiles and trousers. After long experiments, modern plants were built for these departments as additions to the Valley mills to produce these lines, the products being increased as demand developed.

Shows Georgia Progress.

Touring the great mills which turn out finished products of a wide variety, the average Georgian would be surprised at the artistry employed in the design and manufacture of their products and the unfailing beauty and high quality of the articles manufactured.

The rug weaving plant, where are produced cotton chenille rugs of the most attractive colors and designs and in texture that plainly indicates highest quality, is particularly interesting to the visitor. Great batteries of weaving machines turn out their rugs in every hue and shape and a statement of the volume of business done in this line alone is amazing to the southerner.

Trousers manufactured by the Truline company are of every fabric and design, stylishly made and adapted to every pursuit from day labor to golf.

Industrial wiping cloths, made to take the place of cotton waste, are proving highly popular in point of saving and economy, and these are turned out in such quantity as to stager the imagination.

One who is skeptical on the point of Georgia's industrial progress and artistic appreciation should not fail to take advantage of the opportunity to tour the LaGrange group of mills should such a chance ever present itself. Such a trip, this writer found, is an education within itself in the growing power and scope of Georgia's ever-increasing army of manufacturing interests.

The state highway board is authorized to select from its employees men who may be deputized for this service. The state laws are in no way to interfere with the traffic regulations of municipalities, according to the provisions of the measure.

The new traffic regulations provide that all motor vehicles shall take to the right on highways, slow-moving vehicles to run as near the curb as possible; cars must pass other cars in the same direction on the left-hand side; operators intending to turn or stop must give the signals for such moves; operators must reduce speed in rounding curves; an operator of a vehicle shall have the right of way over the operator of another vehicle who is approaching from the left at intersections but shall give the right of way to an operator approaching from the right; operators must stop for busses or street cars which are receiving or discharging passengers; operators must sound horn when approaching crossings and must reduce speed at crossings, on bridges and when passing any animal being led on the highway.

SIX REPORTED HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Six persons were injured in a series of automobile accidents occurring in the freezing weather and blinding winds experienced in Atlanta late Saturday.

R. D. Tarver, 55, of 878 Allene avenue, was taken to Grady hospital suffering from a fractured skull sustained when struck down by an automobile at the corner of Spring and Peters streets.

W. T. Anderson, 29, of 213 Hendrix avenue, suffered lacerations and bruises about the face when the automobile he was driving struck a telephone pole at Ormond and Pulliam streets.

An automobile accident in Crest Lawn cemetery, in which four people were believed to have been injured was reported to police. An ambulance from Blanchard Brothers was rushed to the scene but the persons believed injured had all left the cemetery before it arrived.

CONVENTION PARTY SOUGHT FOR CITY

Atlanta entered the field Saturday as a formidable contender for selection as the point through which the army of northern and eastern democrats will pass en route to the national democratic convention to be held June 26 in Houston, when a concerted movement was launched to give political leaders of the party a taste of the hospitality of the south's Gate City.

It was pointed out Saturday that the logical route is the southern one, via the "Crescent Limited," leading through New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Atlanta, Montgomery and New Orleans. This is the feasible route because of the excellent train service and also because of the historic centers through which the caravan would pass, it was held.

Outstanding attractions of the southern route would be the national capitol at Washington and other points of interest; Stone Mountain and the Confederate memorial at Atlanta, and third, the many points of interest at New Orleans, in many respects regarded as America's most historic and interesting city.

1,000 in Party.

If the drive to bring the delegations the southern route is successful, it is estimated that more than 1,000 from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North and South Carolina and perhaps Florida will gather here before taking off for the big show to be staged in Houston.

In taking the field to bring the delegates from the northern and eastern sections through Atlanta, leaders are vying with a string of cities located along the Great Lakes region and St. Louis, which already have begun active campaigns to carry the northern and eastern delegates through these points.

The civic board of Atlanta, the southern press and other powerful agencies will combine in an effort to sell the delegates on the claim of the southern route, and it is predicted that civic and patriotic organizations throughout the entire south will become identified immediately in the plan to popularize the southern way to the convention city.

Points of Interest.

Atlanta and the south abound in thousands of points of historical interest and many of those who will attend the convention have never visited the south before. Many battlefields of the Confederate war are located in the area through which the party would pass along the proposed southern route, it is said, and those who attend the convention should avail themselves of the opportunity to visit them.

Atlanta's claim to the commercial and industrial leadership of the south has attracted the attention of the nation, and should be a strong factor in determining the route to be selected, leaders declared Saturday.

Officials of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Atlanta city government, Fulton county commission and civic, patriotic and political organizations will begin this week to form a concerted movement designed to sell Atlanta and the south to the northern and eastern delegates, it was announced.

It is further pointed out that at the present rate of progress, on Stone Mountain, General Lee and Traveler will have been finished and unveiled, and Davis and Jackson will have been roughed out by the time the delegations will pass through here in the latter part of June.

Delegates to the national convention will be men and women of prominence and influence, in their respective states, and it would be of great value to Atlanta to have such people visit this city and receive first hand impression of its growing importance, commercially, financially and industrially, as well as to become acquainted with the hospitality of its people.

HICKMAN REPUDIATES ALL HIS CONFESSION

ed out that an insane man cannot be hanged under the California law.

The plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity," which Hickman entered for his present trial is a tacit admission of guilt and if he were found sane he would be subject to sentence.

The state's attorneys, commenting on the repudiation, admitted it might open a loophole for escape, but one which the state and the law might plug quickly.

In a surprise move the defense late yesterday accepted the jury with strategic swiftness, after District Attorney Asa Keyes had in effect accepted it by passing the state's turn of challenging the move of Keyes to retain, if he desired, the right to challenge further, and the protest against this of Walsh, precipitated an argumentative situation which will be settled by Judge J. J. Trabucco when the trial is resumed Monday.

Keyes admitted today he might not challenge further, leaving the possibility that the jury would be sworn as now composed. The defense indicated it would battle strenuously against the state being allowed to make further changes.

Two alternative jurors are to be selected.

The cafeteria will be operated solely on a non-profit and cooperative basis, food being served employees of Rich's strictly at cost. All foods left over after regular meals are served the employees, will be sold at cost to any of the store's force desiring to carry it home.

Quarters for the cafeteria have been prepared, and the cafeteria itself will be attractively finished in a combination of soft green and cream colors. Entirely new equipment has been installed, this being turned over to the employees by the Rich company.

Columbus Police Probe Shooting Of Eugene Ivey

Columbus, Ga., January 28.—(AP)—Eugene B. Ivey, employee of the local International Agricultural Corporation, was fatally shot last night on the Hamilton road near Columbus, while riding in an automobile with his wife, from whom it was reported to police authorities he had been estranged for some time.

He was carried to the city hospital last night about 9 o'clock and died there at 3:30 o'clock this morning. According to the story told police officers by Mrs. Ivey he was accidentally shot by the discharge of a pistol as it fell from the seat of the automobile. She stated that Ivey had gotten out of the car and that as he was in the act of reentering it, the pistol fell from the seat. According to her story, Ivey then drove the car home himself and a doctor was summoned. It was found that the bullet had entered Ivey's left breast just below the heart, lodging under the skin of the back just above the left hip.

Police, who were not notified of the occurrence until after the death of the wounded man this morning, are probing the affair.

SHARP ROW BREWS ON FLOOD CONTROL

Washington, January 28.—(United News.)—Sharp controversy over flood relief legislation when it comes on the floor of congress, with probable passage of a measure differing considerably from the administration plan, was foreseen tonight as congressional committees investigating the subject drew near the end of their work.

Both the house flood control committee and the senate commerce committee were unable to conclude their hearings today as had been planned. They expect to conclude Monday or Tuesday. Chairman Reid, of the house committee, said tonight he expects to report a measure to the house within two weeks. It will be taken up shortly thereafter. The senate will wait until the house bill is received before it acts. Two or three weeks will be required by the house for passage of a bill.

Criticise Army Control.

Indicative of the feeling of the house committee, criticism of the army engineer plan of flood control continued during the committee sessions today, while its author, Major General Edgar Jadwin, chief of engineers, defended his engineering proposals in detail and answered attacks upon the financial scheme, which calls for 20 per cent contribution by the states.

As the situation shapes tonight, it appears that congress will challenge the administration's financial plan, its proposals as to what authority should direct the work, and some of the engineering features urged by Jadwin.

Favors U. S. Payment.

The house committee, at least, will favor payment of the entire cost by the federal government and lodging authority in the Mississippi river commission instead of the board of army engineers, as the administration desires.

The senate hearing will take a political turn next week when Secretary of Commerce Hoover appears. Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, whose forces in Ohio are fighting the Hoover-for-president boom there, wants to place Hoover on record.

REBEL 'PLOTS' WIN PRAISE AT HAVANA

Havana, January 28.—(AP)—Revolutionists and rebels of all kinds to constituted government had their day today at the Pan-American congress when, in the midst of a disenssion aimed at promoting a degree of international cooperation for the repression of political disorders, their cause was suddenly and eloquently taken up to the discomfiture of a proposal further to hamper their activities.

Two Latin American ambassadors to Washington, Orestes Ferrara, of Cuba, and Honorio Pueyrredon, of Argentina, arose to champion the rebels, proclaiming the debt which all American republics owed to this system of introducing liberal ideas into this continent. The question arose when Dr. Fernando Gonzales Roa, Mexican member of the committee on public international law, asked the committee whether it would be ready to discuss the matter of allowing constitutional governments to blockade ports in their own territory which should have fallen into the hands of revolutionists.

Not on Proceedings.

The question was not on the official proceedings and Dr. Gonzales Roa said he would be ready to introduce a resolution for the consideration of the committee if the latter should agree to extend its agenda.

Ambassador Ferrara immediately objected to the consideration of the project, saying the committee should adhere to the prepared agenda. On further insistence from the Mexican delegate, Dr. Ferrara in a loud declamatory tone said that the conference had "been doing excessive work against the poor revolutionists. We must not forget that most of the countries here represented have progressed mostly through the efforts of the revolutionists."

Himself an old revolutionist against Spain in the days of the Cuban insurrection, Dr. Ferrara continued, "in those countries where the conditions are such that political changes cannot come easily from below, upheavals are the only way for new ideas to arise.

Leading Figures in Shrine Temple Undertaking

MOSQUE WILL HOUSE HUGE NEW THEATER

tions include the board of trustees of the Yaarab Temple Building company, William K. Fox, president, and Saul E. Rogers, vice president and general counsel of Fox Theater corporation, and Robert E. Graham, financial and commercial expert of New York, who, at the instigation of J. S. Shaw, member of the local building committee and close friend of Mr. Graham, represented the Yaarab temple in handling the transaction directly with Mr. Rogers.

The Atlanta architectural firm of Marye, Alger and Vinour conceived the plans and specifications for the monumental structure and will supervise the building. Howard B. Crain, of New York, is consulting architect. C. A. D. Bayley and company, of Atlanta, have been selected as general contractors. Mr. Shaw is the supervising engineer and direct representative of the board of trustees. In addition to Mr. Shaw, members of the board of trustees, Yaarab Temple Building company, are Henry Heinz, chairman; James S. Floyd, treasurer; William A. Fuller, vice chairman; George E. Argard, secretary; Tom C. Law, potentate Yaarab temple; Bayne Gibson, Charles A. Bowen, Frank M. Berry and William C. Wardlaw.

Three Units.

The three units of the new building, which will be so intimately arranged that the whole undertaking will retain a character of unity and harmony, will cover the large lot, measuring approximately 200 feet on Peachtree street, 400 feet on Kimball and 200 feet on Cypress. Plans are now under way for the widening and paving of Kimball street to make it a continuation of Ponce de Leon avenue into Spring street, it was stated. Officials of the temple have been given every assurance that this will be done at an early date.

The building will be of reinforced concrete structure ornamented with marble, terra cotta, stone and brick. On account of the high value of property on the Peachtree front almost this entire side had to be reserved for commercial space in order to obtain an income large enough to guarantee the upkeep of such a large building as the one contemplated. Marye, Alger and Vinour, the architects, set forth in their explanation of the structure and the problem confronting them in planning it.

"However, the incorporation of stores and other rentable spaces had to be done in such manner as not to break the unity of the building, which will include unique features never produced elsewhere in the world and destined to give Atlanta a show place of America," the architects sated. An annual income from rentable spaces of $140,000 a year is anticipated.

"The type of architecture used through the building is an adaptation of the Arabic periods known as Saracenic architecture, and found in the lands traveled through by the pilgrims, who, according to the traditions, established the mystic order now inexistence. In order to break from the monotony of too rigid an adaptation, some variation in the Egyptian style has been introduced for the treatment of a banquet hall, whose lofty and imposing proportions are reminiscent of the grandeur of Pharoah temples.

"In the first unit the mosque and Yaarab temple headquaters have three stories and a mezzanine section and also two stories in the basement. In these will be included the different rooms required for the Shrine activities, provided with a modern mechanical plant to satisfy the engineering problems of the vast structure.

"The first floor lobby, accessible from both Kimball and Peachtree streets through arcaded entrances, will lead to a monumental stairway with adjacent elevators. At the bottom of these stairs a Mosaic tiled fountain will be erected, recalling the refreshing coolness, dreamed of by pilgrims in their weary travels, and affording an invitation to the restful enjoyment of the fraternal group. On the second story, directly open to the stairway and elevators, will be a large lounge for general reception purposes. The lounge is in direct communication with a banquet hall, a reception room, an oasis court and the upper lounges of the auditorium balcony.

Egyptian for Banquet Hall.

"The banquet hall, approximately 6,500 square feet in area, is designed in Egyptian style, with monumental columns, 27 feet high, panelling the walls with fresco paintings. At the center of the eastern wall a mysterious Pharoah, standing in a radiantly incandescent recess, is guarded by two enigmatical sphinxes and four vigilant figures. The kitchen services provided in connection with this hall will make it possible to serve as many as 1,000 guests at one time.

"Special quarters for ladies, with attendant rooms are situated at the upper part of the monumental stairs, leading to the lounge. Two stories below the kitchen are devoted to locker rooms, showers and independent meeting rooms. The practice rooms for the bands and other musical groups are sound-proof and fitted with ideal acoustic arrangement.

"A novelty introduced in the structure is an oasis court, in the spirit of the Alhambra Court of Lions. One tiled fountain stands in the center of the court which is surrounded with colonnade arcade having direct communication with the lounge on the north, the auditorium on the east, recreation room on the west and the council chambers on the south. This will afford air enjoyment on warm days and synthetic moonlight effects are worked out for night. The council chamber, with adjacent potentate and recorders' rooms, located above the Kimball street entrance, has domed ceilings crowned by the mosaic cupola seen from the outside. This is really the heart of the mosque, where the deepest mysticism is expressed with aid of soft lighting."

Auditorium Outstanding Feature.

The other two units include the auditorium and the street frontage for stores. The outstanding feature of the structure is the auditorium, which will be adapted by Fox Theater corporation, the lessees, into one of the finest theaters in America.

The auditorium, large enough to accommodate an audience of 5,000 people, will be equipped to take care of the most pretentious stage productions. The stage, flanked with numerous dressing rooms, will be the largest one ever incorporated in a shrine mosque. The stage walls, being about 140 feet apart, will permit the largest pieces of scenery required for spectacular productions to be easily handled. A special disappearing electric platform on which 100 people could stand side by side will operate from the center of the stage to the basement and above the stage level for prompt changes in the setting and stage effect. The orchestra pit will consist of three elevator platforms modeled after that of Roxy's famous New York theater and providing novelty for music arrangements heretofore unthought of in this section. The elaborate productions being provided for will be made possible by the vast theatrical interests of Fox Theaters corporation, including ownership of Roxy's theater.

"The largest steel and rigid asbestos curtain ever built is to be constructed for the fire safety of audiences," the architects continued. "Various accommodations, such as lobbies, check rooms, smoking and rest rooms, have been planned for the convenience of the audiences. A special architectural feature eliminating the ugliness of ordinary steel fire escapes has been devised for this auditorium in the form of terraced stairways and promenade, accessible from the balcony, for the purpose of offering open air enjoyment during intermissions and maximum safety in case of fire.

"Atmospheric Effect."

"The interior of the auditorium has been given what is called an 'atmospheric effect,' instead of the impression of a closed room. The proscenium part is suggestive of an immense decorative bridge, such as could be dreamed of in a setting of 'Arabian Nights.' It spans about 150 feet between the sidewalks. The sidewalks are terminated at the top with terraced battlements. An immense dome, treated as an open sky, will form the ceiling of the auditorium. The way these combinations are devised is original and never attempted before.

"In studying the exterior design of the auditorium, the architects have contrived to avoid the exposure of ugly engineering features such as tanks and other devices that often destroy the beauty of similar buildings.

"Each engineering feature has been housed in some way forming a part of the composition. For example, a special tank, operating the curtain hydraulic motor, is worked out in the form of a minaret tower. The auditorium as a whole is planned to make possible any kind of theater production, such as grand opera, vaudeville and moving pictures."

To provide the most suitable occupants for such an elaborate structure, local officials, with advice of Robert Graham, of New York, determined to interest the Fox Theater corporation and succeeded after six months' negotiations. In relating the story of how the lease was obtained, Mr. Graham, who has been an executive of some of the leading banking and commercial institutions in America, and who transacted the deal directly with Mr. Rogers of the theater corporation, stated that an important feature was "selling" Atlanta to the theater magnate. The vast possibilities of this southern metropolis went far to interest the corporation in making the great investment in Atlanta, Mr. Graham said.

Eight new Fox theaters with 4,000 or more seating capacity will be opened in key cities of America during 1928, it was disclosed. Atlanta's theater will be outstanding among these.

Chamber Extends Congratulations.

Congratulations to Yaarab temple and the Fox Theater Corporation upon their agreement which will give Atlanta the finest theatrical entertainment south of New York, were extended Saturday by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which had used every influence at its command to assist the Shriners in completing the negotiations.

"We feel especially gratified that this nationally-famous film and entertainment organization has felt justified in making such a tremendous investment in Atlanta," said Milton Dargan, Jr., president of the chamber of commerce. "We are confident that Mr. Fox and Mr. Rogers, his associate, have made no mistake, and that in choosing Atlanta for their first venture into the southern field they will profit largely, not only in direct returns from the Atlanta public, but by the great advertising that will be given the Fox productions throughout the south. Atlanta is visited by many thousands of theatergoers every year, and they will carry back to their homes an impression of Fox pictures and Fox entertainment that will be of incalculable value.

"We congratulate our friends, the Shriners of Yaarab temple, in successfully concluding negotiations which will make possible the erection of the finest mosque in the country, and we congratulate Atlanta upon gaining such an addition to her many handsome buildings and to her many worthy theatrical enterprises. We are very glad that we had the opportunity to add the influence of the chamber of commerce to the Shriners' efforts in convincing Mr. Fox that such a theatrical enterprise in Atlanta would be a good investment."

GREECE RATIFIES DEBT AGREEMENT

Athens, Greece, January 28.—(AP)—The chamber of deputies has ratified a Greco-American agreement for settlement of the Greek war debt, which one speaker described as better than the settlement reached with Great Britain.

Another speaker said that the United States occupies in Greece the place which France held before the war and that Greece should have raised all the loans necessary for her economic restoration in America.

George Kaphandaris, Greek finance minister, replied that Greece had entrusted great public works to American firms and that the conditions obtained from the American government were better than those obtained by other debtors.

BIBLE, SERMON USED TO SOLVE MURDERS

course of which Gower accused Bennefield of having reported a still to officers. Hot words followed the accusation. The older Bennefield bent over the fire to lay on another log.

Then, says Price, Gower struck him over the head with a claw-hammer. Bennefield grabbed his chair and struck with it as his assailant, but Gower succeeded in hitting him several times more. The Bennefield child rushed to the defense of his father and received a blow of the hammer on his jaw. He ran screaming into an adjoining room.

Gower then hit the child's father between the eyes and ended the struggle, Price says.

Sikes, according to the Price confession, followed John Bennefield into the other room, dragged him from a lint pile where he had hidden, and slit his throat with a butcher knife.

Following his arrest Sikes also made a confession. His conflicted with the story told by Price. Sikes said that he had no part in the killing, but that as soon as the fight started he ran from the house. He fixed the night of the murder as of Friday night, December 16.

Gower has steadfastly denied knowledge of the crime. He was arrested several days before Price was, and was in the jail here at the time of Price's confession. His attorney had, however, already instituted habeas corpus proceedings, and a commitment hearing for Gower, alone, had been set for next Tuesday before Peace Justice John Houston here.

Williams Under Bond.

A fourth man was released Saturday on bond of $200 as material witness in the case. His name is Will Williams. Williams was arrested on December 25 and locked in the Gwinnett county jail here on a blanket charge of suspicion in connection with the murders. His arrest followed the discovery in his home of some blood-stained clothing which he could not readily explain, and, in fact, did not explain at all for some time after his apprehension. Information furnished by Williams, however, was responsible for the arrest of Price and Gower, Sheriff McGee said.

Care of Babies

This baby has never had a day's sickness and never a cross or fretful spell that lasted an hour. And what do you suppose is responsible for this healthy, happy condition? Not diet, for he has eaten just about anything and everything a child could eat. Not drugs, for he has not been dosed with opiates; he has never had a drop of paregoric. Nor has his sensible mother ever made him taste castor oil. Yet his nerves are sound and his little bowels are strong, and when he does seem the least restless or wakeful, or out of sorts—or likely to be—his mother has him all serene again in ten or fifteen minutes!

The secret of this complete freedom from the many ills and upsets so common to infants? Plain old-fashioned Castoria. A million and more mothers swear by Castoria, and no wonder! A few drops and an approaching fever, colic, diarrhoea or constipation seems to vanish in thin air. Castoria is purely vegetable; that is why physicians tell parents they may use it freely with children of any age—the youngest infant. And how they love the taste!

One word of warning; get the pure, real Castoria. Fletcher's Castoria is the original. It is the kind doctors specify. And with every bottle comes a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" that is worth its weight in gold to any mother or prospective mother. So, remember; tell your druggist you wish Fletcher's Castoria.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight, and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.—(adv.)

The division will arrive off Cuba February 15 and after operating for six weeks with the scouting fleet, will sail for San Pedro, Calif., the new home port. DRY LAW ISSUE AGAIN MENACES MAJOR PARTIES

Political Developments of Last Week Indicate Prohibition May Become Active in Presidential Race

CURTIS FAVORS ENFORCEMENT

Senator Reed, Labeled as Wet, Opens Campaign for Democratic Nomination.

Washington, January 28.—(United News).—The possibility of prohibition becoming more active in the presidential contests of both parties is suggested by developments this week.

Republicans had managed to keep the question somewhat dormant until Senator Borah started a series of open letters to republican presidential figures demanding to know where they stood on prohibition and enforcement. His first letter to Senator Curtis, of Kansas, brought the prompt and unequivocal reply to be expected of a bone-dry senator from a bone-dry state.

Willis Also Bone-Dry.

When he addresses Senator Willis, of Ohio, the same prompt, decisive answer may be expected. There is no better friend of the Anti-Saloon League than Willis.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover said in an economic report sometime ago that prosperity in the United States in recent years could be attributed in part at least to the benefits of prohibition. That is all that is publicly known about his position on prohibi-

WIFE SHOOTS MAN BELIEVED BURGLAR

Thomas M. Fellers Is in Critical Condition at Hospital; Wife Tells of Shooting.

A slight change in his plans and the leaving of a key on his desk at the office may result in death for Thomas M. Fellers, 34, of 313 Ferguson street. Fellers was shot in the abdomen and the shoulder by his wife early Saturday morning, when, coming home earlier than expected and entering his home through a window rather than awakening his wife, he was mistaken for a burglar, according to reports to police.

Fellers is in Davis-Fischer sanitarium in a critical condition, while his wife is under the care of a physician for nervous collapse. Physicians operated on the wounded man Saturday morning, and announced that his condition is extremely serious.

According to the story gathered by police from the distracted wife, Fellers, a construction foreman for the Georgia Power company, went to work Friday expecting to spend most of the night clearing up his work in anticipation of a transfer to a new division. Shortly after midnight, Fellers found that he would be able to go home a great deal earlier than he had planned to, but when he left the office, he left his home door key on his desk.

Arriving at home, Fellers searched his pockets and found that he did not have his key. He tapped at a window lightly trying to attract his wife's attention, and then, decided that he would not waken her, he opened the window and started to enter the room.

Mrs. Fellers was awakened by his entry, and, seeing his form outlined darkly at the window, snatched up a revolver kept by her pillow and fired two shots. Fellers, struck in the abdomen and shoulder, crumpled to the floor, and cried out to his wife.

Sarah Fellers, their 13-year-old daughter, and Miss Christine Comer, Mrs. Fellers' sister, were sleeping in an adjoining room. Awakened by the shots, they rushed into Mrs. Fellers' room, and aided Mrs. Fellers in placing Fellers on the bed. An ambulance was summoned and Fellers was rushed to the hospital.

Mrs. Fellers is extremely nervous at night, and her husband did not want to waken her because she could not go back to sleep if disturbed at night, it was said.

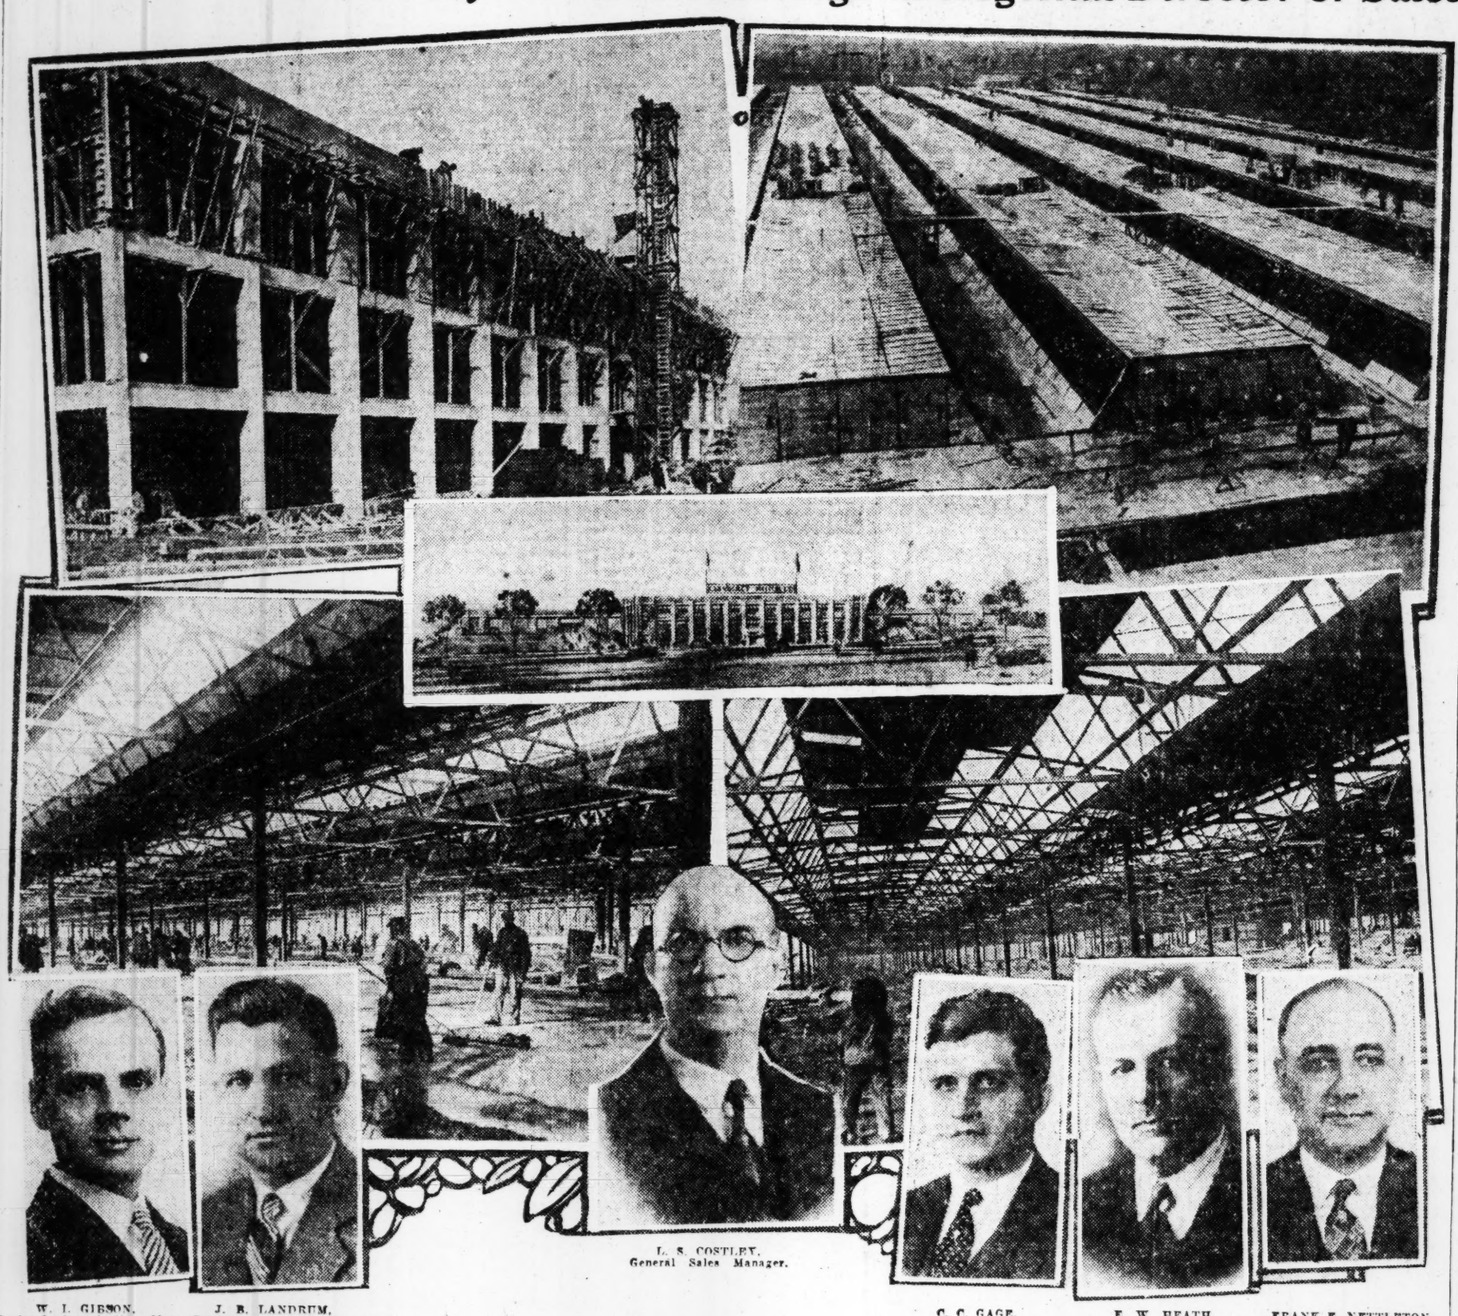

Fellers is one of the most popular employees of the power company, and is an amateur wrestler of local fame, having appeared a number of times before Atlanta fans.

YOUTH PLUNGES TO DEATH FROM MONUMENT TOP

Baltimore, Md., January 28.—(United News.)—In the midst of the heaviest snow storm that has visited Baltimore in years, an unidentified well-dressed young man vaulted the marble balustrade atop the Washington monument in Mr. Vernon square today and plunged head-foremost 180 feet into the frozen drifts heaped on the concrete sidewalk below.

Thomas Camella, a musician, the only pedestrian trudging the snow-laden square, narrowly missed being struck by the body. The caretaker of the monument said the young man had listened courteously to his recital of the historical facts concerning the edifice and asked to be left alone to admire "the snow-capped city."

With construction of the great, new Chevrolet assembly plant here progressing rapidly, announcement was made Saturday by the Chevrolet Motor company of the creation of a new southeastern region comprising the states of Georgia, North and South Carolina, Florida and Alabama to be served from the local plant.

L. S. Costley, formerly assistant regional sales manager of the southeastern region, which formerly comprised the states of Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Florida, has been appointed regional sales manager of the new southeastern region.

Other officials of the new region will be W. I. Gibson, organization manager; J. B. Landrum, car distributor; C. C. Gage, accounting manager; E. W. Heath, sales promotion manager, and Frank E. Nettleton, parts and service manager. With Mr. Costley, each of these officials either already has moved or soon will move to Atlanta and establish his home here.

New Southeastern Region.

The new southeastern region now comprising five southern states has five zone sales offices—Atlanta, Charlotte, Columbia, Jacksonville and Birmingham, and the territory of each of these offices with the exception of Charlotte, will be served by the new plant in Atlanta now under construction.

Creation of this new region and construction of the new assembly plant in Atlanta is the result of the remarkable growth that has taken place in Chevrolet sales during the past two years, officials said, and is for the purpose of better serving the great number of new Chevrolet owners being constantly added.

The organization of the new southeastern region began to function as a separate and distinct unit on January 1 of this year from a sales and service viewpoint, personnel been selected with offices in the Atlanta zone sales office building, located at the corner of Whitehall and McDaniel street. Operations of the regional office will be greatly extended after the opening of the new plant in Atlanta, which opening is contemplated some time between April 15 and May 1.

The new three-story office building being erected in connection with the plant will house all of the different Chevrolet departments in the southeast, consisting of regional sales organization, the local Atlanta zone sales organization, Chevrolet production department, Fisher body department and general accounting department, as well as personnel for

Livestock Trade Growth Bringing Wealth to Georgia

NEW FRIGID WAVE GRIPPING ATLANTA; 15 DEGREES SEEN

From Moderately Cold Range Mercury Suddenly Dropped to 18 Degrees Early Saturday.

A freezing wind which slipped in and bit Atlantans early Saturday morning, depressed the mercury to a frigid level of 18 degrees, will send the thermometer downward on another orgy of frostbite to a probable minimum of 15 degrees this morning, according to C. F. von Herrmann, U. S. meteorologist.

Developing within a few hours and bringing down a chill breath of air from the frigid region of the northwest a low barometer held responsible for Atlanta's present wintry weather was reported Saturday between New York and Hatteras. High northwest winds brought to Atlanta a fair sample of the weather which makes the Dakotas and Montana famous.

From a moderately cold range of 36 to 50 of Friday, the weather sideslipped into a nose dive that pulled up at 18 degrees at 8 o'clock Saturday morning, and rose to a bare 23 degrees shortly afternoon. The thermometer will still be in the freezing zone Monday morning, but indications are for a much warmer week than the past seven days, according to the weather bureau.

The weather will remain fair, but with rising temperatures after this morning's shivery temperatures, Mr. von Herrman predicted.

The report from Washington for the entire state calls for rising temperatures today.

Mayor Ragsdale announced that the coal dealers will be allowed to keep open for business today, in view of the temperature.

Business Up To Date in Atlanta Shows 140 Per Cent Gain Over That of Same Period in 1927.

GEORGIA FARMERS REAPING BENEFIT

Stock Yards Manager Reports Outlet for More Livestock Than He Is Able To Obtain.

BY ERNEST RUBIN.

Steady gains in live-stock trading of this section during the past year, climaxed by record business for the first month in 1928, revealed a new angle of the increasing wealth of farmers in Georgia and the southeastern states and confirmed the current opinion of generally improved conditions and an advancing era of rural prosperity.

These trends were disclosed in an interview given The Constitution Saturday by J. R. Brooks, secretary and manager of the Atlanta Union Stock Yards.

"Our market conditions right now are so advantageous," Mr Brooks remarked, "that we have an outlet for more live stock of all kinds than we are able to obtain." That January so far shows an increase of 140 per cent in all types of live stock handled by the yards over that handled during the same period in 1927, is a key to the vast growth of the live stock business, which is so closely allied to farming prosperity, Mr. Brooks pointed out.

While this notable mounting of business is regarded as a direct indication of the bright outlook for 1928, the fact that it comes on the heels of the best year experienced in live stocks here since the close of the war, is significant in showing a substantial trend in the south's development rather than a spasmodic fluctuation, it was made clear in the interview. Since the depression of the years 1920 and 1921, the live stock trade handled for the southeast through Atlanta has been steadily gaining, the year 1927 been steadily gaining. The year 1927 ended with a gross volume surpassing that of any of the preceding seven years, save one, while this year opened with an upward leap that bids fair to set a record for this section.

Farming Barometer.

Reasons why the live stock market conditions in Atlanta provide an accurate barometer for conditions prevailing among the farmers of the southeast is due to the fact that it indicates the amount of cattle being produced in sections here for outside marketing and also shows the number of mules being bought by farmers here to be used in working their crops.

In this respect Mr. Brooks stated that the figures of the Atlanta Union Stock Yards show the farmers to be shipping "more cattle than they have in many years." This trend reveals another aspect that is destined to bring a new era of prosperity to the south in that it shows the hold on farmers of this section that has been taken by the "cow, hog and hen," and the diversified crops movements. It is predicted that the day may not be far off when farmers of the southland will not be dependent solely upon the cotton crop, but will be able to add to the value and support of this money crop with an equally profitable production of live stock.

"At the same time that progress on this side is being shown," Mr. Brooks remarked, "the mule trade has also increased to a point greater than it has been in many years. This means the farmers are preparing to cultivate their crops with greater intensity, for all the mules go to the farmers. An increased demand in this line always indicates increased prosperity and plans for enlarging crop cultivation."

Horses From Northwest.

Horses and mules handled through the Atlanta Union Stock Yards come mainly from the northwest, including the states of Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana and the Dakotas, Mr. Brooks stated. These are shipped into the southeast. Cattle and hogs are shipped through the Atlanta yards to outside markets from Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi

'HEYDAY' OF GANGS IN CHICAGO AT END

Absence of Usual Arrests Indicates Ban on Gangsters Is Meant by Police.

Chicago, January 28.—(United News.)—Chicago's determination to drive out its gangsters and bombers and restore its reputation as a respectable city led today to what apparently was a firm but unspectacular attempt to starve out the hoodlums and racketeers.

The entire absence of the hullabaloo and wholesale arrests that have accompanied brief "drives" against gangsters in the past was taken, paradoxically, as the strongest indication that the police and the administration of Mayor William Hale Thompson were sincere in their threats to end gang domination.

Gambling Resorts Closed.

Gambling—chief source of gangster revenue—already has been virtually stopped except in small-scale establishments.

Today the order went out from police headquarters that beer and liquor—only remaining source of major revenues for the gunmen—must cease to yield income to the collapsing treasuries of Al Capone, Joe Saltis and other leaders of the underworld.

SIMILAR DRIVE STARTED IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, La., January 28.—(United News.)—America's most romantic city, gay New Orleans, tonight was in the throes of a police drive on undesirables. In the last three days 1,400 men and women have been arrested.

Painted ladies, bootleggers, touts, suspected thieves, waterfront hangers-on have been herded into police court in a continuous line. Tonight the police campaign centered on the bookmakers, whose little cubbyholes and more pretentious places of business dot large sections of the city.

The drive was termed the greatest in the history of this old Louisiana city by Superintendent of Police Thomas Healy.

2 NEW ASPIRANTS IN COUNTY RACES

Sam Hewlett Seeks Place On Commission; R. E. Church To Run for Criminal Judge.

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

Two new aspirants Saturday threw their hats into the political arena of Fulton county subject to the primary to be held March 7 and, with closing of registration and entry lists only about a week off, 21 qualified candidates were in the field.

Sam D. Hewlett, prominent Atlanta attorney, took the field in the contest for membership on the Fulton county commission, thus causing a five-cornered race in that event, with Mr. Hewlett, Walter R. Stewart, George M. Hope, Dr. A. H. Cochran and Edward H. Inman as contenders. Mr. Stewart and Captain Hope are members of the commission at the present time.

Opposition to Judge Jesse M. Wood, of the criminal court of Atlanta, developed with qualification of R. E. Church, attorney, for that post.

Probably the most hotly contested race will be for the solicitor of criminal court of Atlanta, in which Carlton W. Binns, incumbent and widely known attorney, is opposed by John McClelland, who opposed former Solicitor Roy Dorsey in the last race for the position.

Warm Races Predicted.

With injection Saturday of new blood in the primary races, predictions were that other aspirants will take the field this week and that the primary races will grow warmer until the voters select their public servants at the polls on March 7.

Every position at the courthouse with the exception of judges of the superior court and the solicitor general must be filled in the primary. These positions are state offices and are filled in the regular state primary slated for September 6.

Owner Saved As Funeral Home Burns

S. A. Blanchard, Ill, Is Wrapped in Blankets and Carried Out.

Fire caused by live sparks from a chimney resulted in serious damage Saturday afternoon to the two-story building at 1088 Peachtree street, which is occupied by Blanchard Brothers undertaking establishment. S. A. Blanchard, one of the proprietors, who has been confined to his room in the residential portion of the building through sickness, was wrapped in blankets and carried from the burning building by fellow workers.

Flames were discovered issuing from the structure by the manager of a gasoline filling station across the street from the Blanchard building, who turned in the alarm.

Before firemen were able to get the flames under control, heavy losses were caused by smoke and water on the expensive furnishings that were installed in the undertaking establishment since the first of the year, according to report of the fire department, which estimate the damage at $20,000.

Another fire, that brought members of the Atlanta fire department out into the freezing weather of late Saturday afternoon and threatened to destroy the fashionable Briarcliff apartment building, at 850 Briarcliff road, was reported by police as originating in the basement, where the furnace is located. The exact cause of the fire is undetermined.

Quick work on the part of the firemen saved the building from complete destruction by the flames, that were fanned by high winds. Among the apartments affected by the fire were those of Captain Robert Ennis, Mrs. V. H. Marechal, Mrs. Gordon Freeman and Mrs. M. L. Cole.

ACOSTA RELEASED FROM CELL AFTER HEARING IN COURT

New Haven, Conn., January 28.—(United News.)—After spending about 48 hours in New Haven county jail, Bert Acosta has been given his freedom.

Tonight the trans-Atlantic flier, who was arrested in Naugatuck for low flying earlier this week, was back in his New York home. He left here with his attorney, John H. Gamaldi, of New York, without further discussion of his recent legal difficulties.

COUNCIL TO MEET IN EXTRA SESSION

Monday's Meeting Called To Consider Details of Purchase of Extra Acreage for Perkerson Park.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale Saturday issued a call for a special meeting of city council at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon to consider details of purchase of the Perkerson estate as a park site.

City council several weeks ago voted unanimously to buy the tract in cooperation with Fulton county, but a survey showed that there were 429.87 acres in the site instead of the approximately 370 acres, which, it was thought, was the extent of the tract.

In issuing the call, the mayor pointed out that owners of the strip have agreed to cut the price from $429,877

Cold Takes Heavy Toll Over U. S.

Six Freeze to Death in Chicago Streets; Snow Blankets Most of Nation.

The severest general storm of the winter was taking a toll of life and property over half a million square miles of the United States last night.

Snow fell and the temperatures ranged from sub-zero to below freezing in a belt 500 miles wide and 1,000 miles long which extended from middle western farm states to the Atlantic ocean.

Eight deaths were reported from cold. Six men froze in the streets of Chicago and an elderly woman was found frozen in a boarding house bedroom. One man froze to death in Iowa.

TAX COLLECTIONS INCREASE $32,357

Though Deficit of $316,000 Was Shown When Books Were Closed, Last Minute Mail Boosted Figures.

Increase of $32,357 was shown Saturday in ad valorem taxes paid in for 1927 to W. S. Richardson, Fulton county tax collector, as against total payments at the corresponding date last year.

With tax books showing a deficit of approximately $316,000 under the usual figure, when aggregated December 19, the closing date for 1927 ad valorem taxes, an avalanche of last-minute mail boosted the amount well above the normal return, it was revealed when accounts could be posted.

The past year's tax returns brought to light an unusually large number of those who "put off until tomorrow what they could do today," Mr. Richardson said.

On the closing day for 1927 ad valorem taxes, after which fi. fa. costs and interests were imposed, more than 3,000 taxpayers called personally at the collector's office, while the flood of mail, posted in time to catch the December 19 mark, required many weeks of clerical work in its recording.

While on December 19, 1926, $2,333,105 had been paid in on 1926 ad valorem taxes, the following year showed a return of but $2,017,103 on the closing day of 1927, Mr. Richardson said.

The total collection of ad valorem taxes to date is $3,469,109 as payment on 1927 dues, while that of last year was only $3,436,752 at this date, tax records show.

Both county and state ad valorem taxes are collected through Mr. Richardson's office, while the classification carries personal property, real estate, poll and professional taxes.

Heiress on Honeymoon

WEDS FORMER NECKTIE SALESMAN

In $15-a-Week Room

New York, January 28.—(United News.)—Honeymooning in a $15-a-week rooming house tonight were a former hotel clerk, "who looks like a millionaire," and a 23-year-old young woman who will come into an inheritance of $5,000,000 on her next birthday.

Although a French maid who supervised part of the arrival of six large trunks and other necessities of the former Miss Sybil Bayer seemed a trifle shocked at the modest room, the bride, a daughter and granddaughter of multimillionaires, appeared to be as happy there as she had ever been in her father's house.

Miss Bayer, daughter of Edwin S. Bayer, the glove manufacturer, and Vincent Edward Brown, erstwhile tie salesman, hotel clerk and unofficial champion Charleston stepper of Palm Beach, Fla., were married Wednesday after an elopement to Rye, New York.

After Edwin C. Thomas, a justice of the peace at Rye, confirmed the marriage, reporters stormed the Bayer home, but were turned back by the butler, who said the family did not wish to discuss the daughter's affairs.

The couple, motoring in search of an altar, first tried to obtain a civil marriage at Greenwich, Conn., but were disappointed by the Connecticut law requiring a five-day residence in the state. A town official from whom they sought advice said he had believed that young Brown "was at least a millionaire" and that Miss Bayer was a gladsome vision.

Brown and the heiress were said to have met three years ago in France and to have renewed their romance later in Palm Beach and then in New York.

SEE NEW SCANDAL IN U. S. OIL PROBE

Washington, January 28.—(United News.)—The long-concealed story of the mysterious Continental Trading Company of Canada may be revealed to the senate Teapot Dome committee next week by Colonel Robert W. Stewart, head of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, committee members were reliably informed tonight.

Stewart is on his way back from Havana and is preparing to tell for the first time about formation of the company which made $3,000,000 profit in one oil deal—and then lost all its records. He is to appear at the resumption of the investigation Tuesday. This is expected to bring to light a second new chapter in the oil scandals to match the sensational story told this week by M. T. Everhart, son-in-law of former Secretary of Interior Fall.

Explained Liberty Bonds.

Everhart disclosed he had taken $233,000 in Liberty bonds to Fall from Harry F. Sinclair, oil man who leased Teapot Dome from Fall.

Charges have been made by government oil prosecutors that this $233,000 came out of profits of the Continental company—the bonds having been identified as among those purchased by Continental—and now the committee is seeking to ascertain if any of the remainder of the profits went to other government officials or politicians.

Stewart is supposed to have joined with Sinclair and other oil men in formation of the trading company to buy through it $50,000,000 worth of oil.

Made $3,000,000 Profit.

About 11,000,000 barrels were sold at a profit of 25 cents per barrel to make $3,000,000. Some of the men involved have gone to Europe and one has died. Stewart was in South America when he was wanted as a witness during the Cheyenne civil suit of the government which resulted in cancellation of Sinclair's lease.

The way has been opened for him to tell everything by the new Walsh law, which grants immunity from prosecution three years after any overt act. The law was passed by congress to free Everhart from danger of incriminating himself by his testimony. It also applies to Stewart, if necessary.

DRY LAW ISSUE AGAIN THREATENS

tion. Dawes and Lowden are not on record so far as this correspondent can recall.

On the democratic side the launching of Senator James A. Reed's campaign for the nomination promises to direct attention again to this popular subject of American conversation. Reed is labeled by the Anti-Saloon League as a wet.

Corruption Big Issue.

Many politicians think alleged corruption will be a stronger issue for the democrats this year than it was in 1924. That campaign came just after the Teapot Dome and Daugherty investigations, but before there had been any proceedings in the courts.

Republicans were accusing the democrats of political persecution. Since then the United States supreme court has canceled the Teapot Dome and Doheny leases and denounced those transactions and the conduct of former Secretary Fall in language as severe as any democratic senator ever employed. Democratic stump orators expect to make considerable use of the supreme court decisions this year.

Democrats have heard the religious issue raised again in the senate by Senator Heflin, of Alabama. It is too early to judge what the effect of Heflin's activity will be upon the chances of Governor Smith.

Smith's Friends Active.

Al Smith's friends in New York are engaged in high-pressure missionary work for the Texas delegation, feeling that the support of the state in which the convention is held would have a strong psychological effect on other southern delegations.

Tabloiding other political incidents of the week, the fact that the Hoovers were married by a Catholic missionary priest in a California village 30 years ago was hailed by Hoover's enemies as a great political discovery. Mrs. Hoover was an Episcopalian before her marriage and afterward joined the Quaker church, to which her husband had always belonged. Hoover was a young engineer of 25 then, ordered to sail for China the next day.

A group of New York republicans set up a Hoover organization this week but without the support of New York National Committeeman Hilles and State Chairman Morris. Senator Gillett, of Massachusetts, has indorsed Hoover and his campaign has been opened in Minnesota. Hoover himself continued the silence which has made his campaign one of the most remarkable in national political history.

EYES OF POLITICIANS TURN NORTHWEST.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Friends of the leading candidates for president are turning their eyes toward the northwest, since the war a doubtful element in all political speculations.

Out in North and South Dakota, especially, both the republican and democratic camps see interesting political developments on the horizon, for these states take the lead in exercising their preference to national conventions in Kansas City and Houston.

Although the state legislature has pushed up the South Dakota state convention—or "proposal meeting," as it is called there—from December to March 6, that state still is the first in the country to make a concrete move in the 1928 political campaign. North Dakota follows March 20 with a primary election.

Lowden Strength Uncertain.

The interests of the republican centers about the strength Frank O. Lowden will develop in these northwestern farm states, and the question whether he will get by there without a contest with either Senator Norris, of Nebraska, or any other republican candidate.

The democrats foresee a fight between Governor Smith, of New York, and Senator Reed, of Missouri, for the democratic delegates. Both Reed and Smith followers have announced they will enter the contests in both South and North Dakota.

The only other state to select delegates in March is New Hampshire, which has its primary March 13. The voters do not express a direct presidential preference in that state, but on the republican side a slate of delegates favoring Secretary Hoover will be in the field with the backing of Senator Moses.

Twelve Master Farmers of Georgia Are Honor Guests at Atlanta Banquet

Here are the twelve master farmers. These men were selected not only because of their success in organization and management of the farm, and in marketing products, but also because of their possession of those finer qualities manifested in the appearance and upkeep of the farm and home, in the respect accorded them by their neighbors and in their interest in community and general public affairs.

Certificates of excellence in that oldest of callings—the tilling of the soil—were presented Saturday night to Georgia's first twelve master farmers, who were honor guests at an elaborate banquet at the Biltmore hotel, attended by more than 100 prominent business men, agricultural authorities and publishers of farm journals.

The banquet was given Georgia's most efficient farmers by the Progressive Farmer, farm periodical, which, in conjunction with the Georgia State College of Agriculture, selected the twelve best farmers of the state, according to scores compiled by the organizations on competitive cards.

The honor guests, who, with their wives, were presented to the gathering, were J. W. Algood, of Cobb county; S. W. Brown, of Turner county; Cy P. Bullock, of Meriwether county; J. E. Davidson, of Peach county; C. H. Ellis, of Wayne county; W. J. Mathis, of Terrell county; W. E. Morgan, of Harralson county; J. E. McElmurray, of Richmond county; F. C. Newton, of Morgan county; C. E. Oliver, of Chatham county; G. O'Kelley, of Clarke county, and W. H. Smith, of Bulloch county.

A group of speakers, including Governor L. G. Hardman, Dr. A. M. Soule, president of the Georgia State College of Agriculture; Dr. Tait Butler, of Memphis, vice president of the Progressive Farmer, and Mrs. W. N. Hutt, of Southern Pines, N. C., member of the staff of the Progressive Farmer, paid tribute to the honor guests and impressed upon them the singular honor which was theirs.

Congratulations were extended to the Progressive Farmer by Dr. Soule, who commended the officials of the publication for their splendid work in selecting and honoring the finest exponents of agriculture, which is so vital to the prosperity of the nation.

A musical program supplemented the addresses.

COLD TAKES HEAVY TOLL OVER NATION

ed slightly higher temperatures accompanied by west winds and snowfall.

Pennsylvania was covered with a snowfall ranging from one to 12 inches in depth. The snowfall in the national capital was the heaviest in six years, occurring on the anniversary of the collapse of the roof of the Knickerbocker theater, which killed 97 persons. The snow hampered government and business activities.

New England reported snowfalls and temperatures ranging to below zero. The Chicago region experienced below zero temperatures early Saturday. Iowa points reported as low as six below zero, Wisconsin eight below and Duluth, Minn., 18 below. Even southern Indiana experienced sub-zero weather.

Throughout the wide belt of the storm, damage was reported from fires and traffic accidents were numerous.

STORM STARTS TO ABATE IN MIDWEST.

Chicago, January 28.—(United News.)—Cold weather and high winds, which for 36 hours has caused suffering in Chicago and the middle west, showed signs of moderation tonight. Government weather forecasters predicted slightly rising temperatures.

Below zero temperatures in the Chicago region Friday night and Saturday caused the death of seven persons. Six men were found frozen to death in streets. Two were unidentified. An elderly woman was found dead in an unheated bedroom of a rooming house.

BELATED WINTER WAVE SWEEPS NEW YORK.

New York, January 28.—(United News.)—Belated but belligerent, winter rode into New York today on a heavy snowfall driven from the west by a wind that whirled the snow through the downtown canyons and sent the thermometer downward.

Warned by the weather bureau that the fall might reach a depth of several inches, the city's snow-fighting equipment was hastily mobilized and squads of the professional snow-shovelers began forming at street department offices.

SIX-YEAR RECORD SNOW FALLS IN CAPITAL.

Washington, January 28.—(United News.)—The heaviest snowstorm in six years smothered the capital today, hampering government and business activities and preventing one congressional committee from functioning.

On the sixth anniversary of the collapse of the snow-covered roof of the Knickerbocker theater, which killed 97 persons, snow fell to a depth of about 11 inches. The city's snow-fighting facilities, warned by the weather bureau only of a "light snow," were able by strenuous efforts to keep transportation and communication functioning partially.

DEMOCRATIC CHIEF APPROVES BUILDING.

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the democratic national committee, today placed his approval on the plans for the hall to be built in Houston, Texas, for the national convention this summer.

Shaver came from Washington for a few hours to confer with Jesse Jones, democratic national treasurer, on the plans, and at the end of the conference said that for the first time the party would have a hall built to its needs.

Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

AT AGE 83

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit-forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.—(adv.

NICARAGUA PEACE NEAR, ENVOY SAYS

Managua, Nicaragua, January 28.—Charles C. Eberhardt, American minister to Nicaragua, returned today from a trip to the United States convinced that the Nicaraguan situation soon will be cleared up if conservatives and liberals here will "get together on the electoral law" providing for American supervision of election of a new president.

Eberhardt, who landed at Puerto Cabezas and came to Managua by way of the Panama canal, said he had asked that more marines be sent to the east coast of Nicaragua as they were needed for protection of American interests there. For the first time in several months marine corps airplanes today returned from their morning reconnaissance over the El Chipote region with a report of not having seen a single rebel.

AIR SQUADRON LEAVES FOR NICARAGUA.

Norfolk, Va., January 28.—(AP)—A marine observation squadron of 48 enlisted men and two officers under command of Captain William C. Boyd, left here late today aboard the airplane carrier Saratoga en route to Nicaragua. The detachment, brought here from Quantico, boarded the Saratoga just inside the Virginia capes from a navy tug.

The Saratoga is bound to Guantanamo from Newport, R. I., and when she arrives will transfer the marines to another craft which will take them to Corinto.

COUNCIL TO MEET IN EXTRA SESSION

to $410,000, and stated that the session Monday is for the sole purpose of having council ratify the difference between the estimated total cost of $370,000 and the $410,000 which must be provided after the survey.

"I feel that the owners of the property have made a fair concession in view of the additional acreage," the mayor said, "but I do not wish to take the responsibility of signing $40,000 worth of notes more than we thought we would have to sign without sanction of council. That is why I have called the extraordinary session for Monday."

Ratification Assured.

Ratification of the paper by city council was said Saturday afternoon to be only a matter of form, leaders holding that city council could not fail to provide the park, which Fulton county has agreed to help buy and develop. They also pointed to the fact that the owners have cut the original price of $1,000 an acre $19,877, which they contended showed a desire on the part of the present holders to convert it to park use in the city.

"I am sure that the city cannot acquire other acreage as desirable for park purposes as near to the city at much more than the price which is asked," the mayor said.

Councilman John A. White, chairman of the park committee of city council, and other members of the committee will ask city council to ratify the new paper when it is offered Monday.

The tract is located between Sylvan road and Stewart avenue and stretches from Dill avenue to Lakewood avenue.

Itinerate Preacher Seeks Airplane To Win Nomination

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE PROPOSES TOUR OF U. S.

Duncan, Okla., January 28.—(United News.)—An airplane jaunt around the country may be included in campaign plans of the Rev. Alonza F. Workman, itinerant preacher, who admits he is a candidate for the democratic nomination for president.

If the Rev. Workman is able to arrange financial backing he expects to tour the nation by plane, preaching the gospel of "Spiritual Politics," he said in an interview today. Critics of the Rev. Workman were taken to task for insinuations that he is wearing his political bonnet at a rakish angle and that his so-called campaign was designed to attract publicity.

"Nothing of the sort," said the preacher-politician. "I am as serious as Al Smith. I have sought to file my name on the ballots of 17 states having preferential primaries and intend to see this thing through to the end."

He disclosed that he had asked "Billy" Sunday, evangelist, to circulate petitions in his behalf in St. Louis and Illinois.

The Rev. Workman believes that at least one-half of all office seekers are unfit for political positions.

"The presidency of the United States is a spiritual office born of freedom," he said, "and comes to us as an inheritance from our fathers who suffered persecution and privation in the early history of the republic to bring it into existence."

HUNT FUGITIVE WHO FORCIBLY CUT WOMAN'S LOCKS

New Underwood, S. D., January 28.—(AP)—Search was being made today for a man who entered the farm home of Mrs. Klem Korgman, near here, late yesterday, bound the 74-year-old woman to a chair and shortened her hair and skirts with a pair of scissors.

Took Soda 20 Years for Gas---Stops Now

"For 20 years I took soda for indigestion and stomach gas. One bottle of Adlerika brought me complete relief."—J. B. Hardy.

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years' practice, I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."

J. E. Puckett: "After using Adlerika I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated."

It will astonish you the great amounts of poisonous matter Adlerika brings out—matter you would never believe was in your system. In chronic constipation, gas bloating, sour stomach and sick headache, just ONE spoonful Adlerika brings wonderful relief. At leading druggists.—(adv.)

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, writes: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing, checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and bacilli."

Compare CHRYSLER "72" against the field ... Bar none

In all the brilliant chronicle of Chrysler, no car has so keenly delighted a great and growing host of owners as the Illustrious New Chrysler "72"—a car so remarkable in quality and performance that, at its low price, nothing like its value can be found anywhere.

In Chrysler's triumphant march from 27th to 3rd place in sales in 42 months, the "72" has played a most significant part.

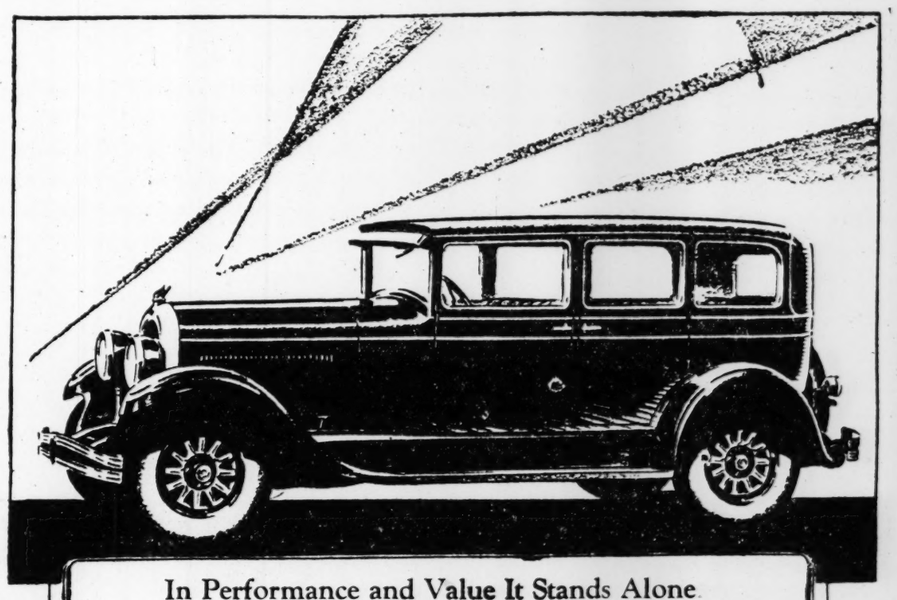

In the Illustrious New Chrysler "72"—longer, roomier, faster, handsomer—Chrysler Standardized Quality excels even Chrysler—in performance, in comfort, in appearance, in appointments.

The 75 horsepower engine—with counterweighted seven-bearing crankshaft—delivers 72 and more miles an hour with ease. It flashes instantly away in traffic. Mountain grades flatten out before this phenomenally powerful car. Equipped with rubber shock insulators in place of metal shackles, it rides with a new measure of comfort, safety and smoothness over the roughest roads.

Test the Illustrious New "72" in every conceivable manner—and bear in mind that all this added speed, length, roominess, riding ease, dependability, long life and beauty, are brought to you at a remarkably low price.

Then you will appreciate just how much wider is the gap which the Chrysler "72" places between itself and all others selling within hundreds of dollars of its price.

New Chrysler "Red-Head" Engine—designed to take full advantage of high-compression gas, giving 12% greater torque with greater speed, power, hill-climbing ability and fuel economy, is standard equipment on the roadsters of the "52," "62," "72" and on all models of the New 112 h. p. Imperial "80." It is also available, at slight extra cost, for all other current body types. For a reasonable charge it can be applied to earlier Chrysler cars now in use.

In Performance and Value It Stands Alone

Illustrious New Chrysler "72"—Two-pass. Coupe (with rumble seat), $1545; Royal Sedan, $1595; Sport Roadster (with rumble seat), $1595; Four-Passenger Coupe, $1595; Town Sedan, $1695; Convertible Coupe (with rumble seat), $1745; Crown Sedan, $1795.

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax. Chrysler dealers are in position to extend the convenience of time payments.

Tull Company Takes Over Local Disston Saw Branch

A development of interest to sawmill men, carpenters and other mechanics took place in Atlanta last week as the result of a visit of D. W. Jenkins, salesmanager of the Henry Disston & Sons, Inc., well-known saw manufacturers of Philadelphia. Mr. Jenkins' visit here was for the purpose of conferring with J. M. Tull, president of the J. M. Tull Rubber company, of Marietta and Earle streets, and at the end of the conference it was arranged for the Disston Saw company to give up its local salesrooms at 130 Marietta and move in with the J. M. Tull company. Hereafter the Atlanta branch becomes a unit of the J. M. Tull Rubber company.

This arrangement is considered by both firms to be of mutual advantage. The Tull company has a model sales supply building and ample room to take care of the large stocks carried by the Disston company, and as both have been dealing with the same customers for the last few years, this local merger will assure better service to customers of both firms.

This merger is only for the state of Georgia and does not displace any one connected with either firm. The local Disston saw organization, as a whole, will be located in the Tull building, and the only difference to the public is that Disston-made saw and mill supplies sold in Georgia will hereafter come from the J. M. Tull company.

The southeastern sales manager, J. W. Sheedy, who lives in Atlanta, will have his office in the Tull building and will travel and direct sales as he has heretofore done in Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia. Every branch of the work will be carried on in the Tull building, including the local repair shop, and all customers of the Disston Saw company are being informed that they will receive the same good Disston service in the new location.

X-RAY ADVOCATED TO CHECK CRIME

Wheeling, W. Va., January 28.—(AP) A sentence of "under the X-ray" instead of the gallows or drab jail would be meted out to criminals if a group of Wheeling physicians make practical their theory of combating crime through the medium of the X-ray.

The experimenters, headed by Dr. R. J. Hersey, have revealed they have for some time been studying a method to cure crime, the method consisting of dissolving the thymus gland with the X-ray. Dr. Hersey said their work tended to show there is a certain gland near the throat of small children which should vanish as the child grows up, but they found it in many criminals and insane persons. It is their theory this ductless gland causes such persons to be abnormal, and that the trouble can be eradicated with the X-ray.

Could Have Saved Couple.

Dr. Hersey said he believed he could have prevented Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray from being executed had he been able to use the knowledge he has accumulated in the 18 years he has been studying the subject.

He said he felt, after comparing their faces with gland cases he had known, he could have convinced authorities that Mrs. Snyder and Gray were victims of abnormal thymus glands, and that the presence of this gland caused them to slay the woman's husband.

After studying the faces of Nathan Leopold, Richard Loeb and others, Dr. Hersey said he found in all of them the tell-tale characteristics of gland cases.

In his opinion, such persons, perhaps normal in other respects, fall prey to the temptation to do wrong because they have what he calls the "persistent thymus gland."

HEWLETT ENTERS COMMISSION RACE

Sam D. Hewlett, for the past 25 years a practicing attorney in Atlanta, Saturday entered the race for Fulton county commission, qualifying under the rules of the primary slated for March 7.

SAM D. HEWLETT.

In making his announcement Mr. Hewlett declared he will stand for a conservative and judicious expenditure of county funds. His formal statement follows:

"I beg to announce myself as a candidate for one of the places on the board of commissioners of Fulton county. I have paid my entrance fee.

"I have practiced law in the city of Atlanta and in my present location for almost 25 years. During that time it has been my pleasure to represent many people, who are my friends. I am not now, nor have I ever been, affiliated with any interests that conflict with the duties of commissioner.

Assistant City Attorney.

"In 1917, 1918 and 1919 I was assistant city attorney for the city of Atlanta under James L. Mayson, during which time the city of Atlanta ran short of money and could not pay its policemen, firemen or school teachers. I was instrumental in securing the money from the Fourth National bank to meet this emergency. The Fourth National bank loaned the money to the city without any charge of interest and the policemen, firemen and teachers received their pay. The interest of our policemen, firemen and teachers should be safeguarded and looked after, and our first duty is to them.

"I have studied conditions in Fulton county. There has been too much unnecessary expenditure of money. The county at this time is heavily involved and only recently had to borrow $200,000 to meet emergencies. This should never have been necessary had the affairs of the county been handled conservatively. At the end of the county's fiscal year there will be a deficit of $2,000,000. This should never occur in a county with the wealth of Fulton. When I take office I expect to insist upon more conservative administration of the affairs of the county and until this deficit is met new work should not be taken on.

Demand for Change.

"I have canvassed Fulton county and find that there is a demand for a change on the board of commissioners. The people feel that these commissioners have not been conservative in the administration of the county affairs, and it will be my endeavor that this conservatism shall prevail.

"I expect to see that the north half and the south half of the county and the east and west sides shall share equally in schools and improved roads. Too much has been done for certain sections to the detriment of other sections. This shall not continue when I am elected. There shall be no special privileges granted to any person of any kind and equal rights and benefits shall be granted to all.

"Many of my friends urged me to enter the race long before I did so, and after canvassing the county, I find that the voters of the county are with me, and when I am elected as county commissioner of Fulton county I wish to assure you that you and each of you and every section of the county will receive the same hearty cooperation and consideration that I have given the people during my life's work.

"I would appreciate your support and votes."

FLUSH THE KIDNEYS BEFORE BREAKFAST

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessnes and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.—(adv.)

NYE 'WARNS' EAST OF FARM COMBINE

New York, January 28.—(AP)—A warning of a new political alignment between the west and south unless the east gets behind farm relief legislation was sounded by Senator Nye, republican, North Dakota, in a speech tonight before the Westchester County Bankers' association.

Declaring that eastern representatives in congress make it impossible to pass farm legislation "above the head of the president and power of veto," Senator Nye predicted that if the west and south unite to form a new party "the new alignment created out of bitterness, will, if successful, have little regard for the interests of those institutions which have stood opposed to them through recent years."

Did Not Specify Relief.

The North Dakota senator did not specify any particular farm legislation which he said the east has opposed but he has been among the staunch supporters of the McNary-Haugen bill vetoed last session by President Coolidge and again before congress in somewhat revised form.

During his address, Senator Nye assailed American intervention in Nicaragua, "excessive" campaign contributions and the administration's claims of prosperity.

"It is not unreasonable to prophesy," he said, "that unless the agricultural condition is properly met and remedied there will be in these United States a new political alignment which you people of the east seem to believe to be impossible.

Outlines Rural Problems.

"With the south and the great west battling a like problem there might easily be born a new understanding. Indeed, there is being born a new understanding that will bring about the birth of a political force which you eastern folks are going to have to reckon with.

"You may call us radicals, or bolshevists, or whatever you will. You may call us mistaken in our partisan irregularities. The fact of the matter is that we are but trying to win a fair economic balance for ourselves and a fair distribution of the favors of government."

The North Dakotan said he believed the purpose actuating the Nicaraguans led by General Sandino, whom the marines are fighting, might have been the same as that which led "our forefathers to revolt against the dictates of another world."

Women Starving To Wear Finery, Says Salesman

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

"Women of America are starving themselves to death to buy silk hose, fur coats and cosmetics and the men are denying themselves proper nutrition to purchase radios and automobiles."

In these words, E. F. Johnson, specialty salesman engaged in distribution of groceries, Saturday aimed a fusillade at the age-old hypothesis that the American people are "eating themselves to death," and branded the assumption as a colossal fallacy. Mr. Johnson's address was made before the regular weekly meeting of the City Salesmen's association, W. W. Moore, president, presided over the session, which was held in the city council chamber.

"In 1914 there was one pair of silk hose to every 4.5 women in the United States, according to statistics compiled from the most reliable sources, and now there are 4.5 pairs to every woman and young girl in the entire country," Mr. Johnson declared. "Practically the same thing is true of the men, who are spending enormous sums for radios and automobiles to the detriment of physical well being. Women also spend staggering sums for fur coats and in beauty parlors. A recent estimate has placed the amount spent daily on cosmetics at $5,000,000.

Mr. Johnson's address was one of three to be given as a feature of the educational programs being staged by the association each week. O. T. Camp and B. H. Messer were the other two speakers. They spoke on "The Specialty Salesman and How He Can Best Serve the Jobber and Retailer."

TECH NAVAL UNIT TO ENJOY CRUISE ON U. S. FLAGSHIP

Students of Georgia School of Technology belonging to the Tech unit of the naval reserve officers training corps will join with members of Yale, Harvard and Northwestern university units in making a summer cruise on the flagship of the scouting fleet, the U. S. S. Wyoming, it was learned here Saturday. The ship will leave New York on June 14 for Charleston, S. C., where the unit from Georgia Tech will be embarked.

From Charleston the Wyoming will proceed to Boston to take on units from the other three institutions. The first port to be visited will be Halifax, where several days will be spent.

The trip in June will be the first time that students of these four institutions will have cruised together since establishment of the naval R. O. T. C.

THREE STANFORD CO-EDS ISOLATED; PARALYSIS FEARED

Stanford University, Cal., January 28.—(AP)—Three girl students of Stanford university, living in Roble Hall, girls' dormitory on the campus, were removed to the isolation ward of the Stanford hospital today with an ailment diagnosed as infantile paralysis.

Mary Yost, dean of women, said she believed there is no cause for alarm as the cases are apparently not related and there is no indication of a general outbreak of the disease.

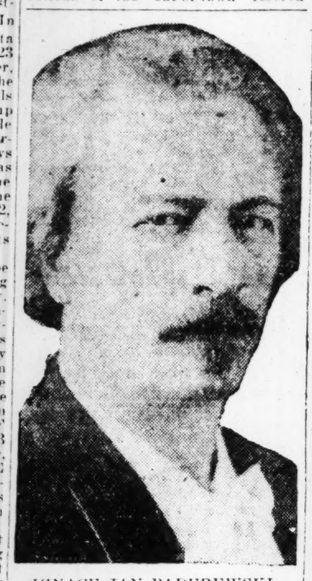

Paderewski Will Give Sixth Concert Here on February 1

The concert of Ignace Jan Paderewski on Wednesday evening, February 1, marks the sixth concert the pianist-statesman has given in Atlanta. In a scrap book started by the Atlanta Music club in the season of 1922-23 with Miss Irene Smillie, the compiler, there is an interesting story from the pen of Miss Nana Tucker. She tells a little romance of another scrap book with clippings on the memorable event of Paderewski's first appearance in Atlanta. It was in the days when the Grand Opera house was the mecca for concert-goers, the shrine and center of art in Atlanta. The concert was given on January 22, 1896, one of the coldest nights on record, and the Grand was taxed to its capacity.

And now the sixth concert will be given on February 1, 1928, taking place in the Auditorium-Armory. The program will open with Symphonic Etudes, Schumann, followed by Sonata, C sharp minor, Opus 27, No. 2, Beethoven, and a group by Schubert-Liszt, Barcarolle, "Auf Dem Wasser Zu Singen," "Soiree de Vienne," serenade, "Hark! Hark! the Lark!" and Erlking. Then a Chopin group, Ballade, G minor, Nocturne, F sharp major; three Etudes, Nos. 4, 3 and 5, Opus 10; Mazurka, A minor, Opus 17; Grand Valse Brilliante, E flat, Opus 10. The two closing numbers are Melodie, B major, No. 3, Opus 8, by Paderewski, and the Hungarian Rhapsody, No. 6, by Liszt.

Mr. Paderewski is making this visit to Atlanta through choice, according to Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Music club, under whose auspices the concert is being given. Mr. Paderewski said he would not go anywhere else in the south, because the Atlanta audience was the third largest ever to greet him on his American tours. And from the indications of the out-of-town reservations and the local demands, this audience on February 1 will tax to capacity of the house.

IGNACE JAN PADEREWSKI.

Hog Production in Georgia Shows 20 Per Cent Increase; Other Live Stock on Upgrade

Swine, for the First Time Since 1919, Registers Material Gain Over Previous Year.

Twenty per cent increase in Georgia hog production and material gains for all other classes of live stock in the state, with the sole exception of horses, are shown in the annual live stock report of the Georgia cooperative crop reporting service, made public here recently. The figures represent the numbers of live stock on Georgia farms January 1, and comparisons are made with similar figures gathered on the same date in 1927.

For the first time since 1919, the report revealed, swine have materially increased over the previous year, estimated numbers on farms amounting to 1,424,000, as compared with 1,187,000 recorded last year—a gain of 20 per cent. Until 1926 Georgia hogs had been steadily decreasing in numbers since the 1920 census year, said the report, but with a 7 per cent recovery recorded last year plus the present increase of 20 per cent, hog production is making considerable progress in regaining its former footing.

The survey also pointed out that a considerable increase in number of pigs for the coming spring, as compared with the number last spring, now seems assured.

Cattle showed a slight increase over last year's report, the estimated number being 863,000, as against 854,000—a gain of about 1 per cent. Heifers one to two years old kept for milk numbered 81,000, as compared with 77,000, and milch cows 346,000, as compared with 343,000 in the previous estimate.

Horses decreased, the report showed, from 46,000 to 41,000, or 10 per cent during the year, while mules more than offset the reduction, gaining from 347,000 to 357,000, or about 3 per cent for the year.

Number of poultry on farms showed a gain of about 8 per cent over the estimate of one year ago. Increased interest has been attached to this phase of live stock production for several years, and the industry bids fair to continue its growth, the report said.

GEORGIAN GIVEN POST ON KENTUCKY GOVERNOR'S STAFF

Frankfort, Ky., January 28.—(AP) Barrett Waters, 36-year-old sportsman and world traveler, of Augusta, Ky., and Albany, Ga., today was commissioned a colonel on the staff of Governor Flem D. Sampson.

Mr. Waters received his commission almost on the eve of his marriage and departure for Africa on a honeymoon hunting trip. On next Tuesday Mr. Waters will be married to Miss Elizabeth Bradford at her home at Augusta. The couple will leave at once for New York and sail from there on the Olympic for Southampton, thence to Capetown.

FINAL RITES TODAY FOR AUTO VICTIM

Funeral services for James H. Daoulis, of 475 Ponce de Leon avenue, who died of injuries inflicted by a "hit-and-run" driver Friday at Peachtree and Baker street, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Greek Orthodox church. Mr. Daoulis was a prominent member of the local Greek colony and an honorary escort for the body will be furnished by the Panageakas society.

Mr. Daoulis operated a restaurant and fruit store at Ponce de Leon avenue and Boulevard. He was an American citizen and a resident of Atlanta for 23 years. Police Saturday were seeking the driver of the death car.

SHOALS HEARINGS ENDED BY SENATE

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—A decision next week on Muscle Shoals legislation was ordered today by Chairman McNary, of the senate agriculture committee, in closing hearings on the bill of Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, proposing a lease of the property to the American Cyanamid company.

Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, put forward again today his resolution calling for government operation of the plant after denouncing the Willis measure as a "power" bill rather than one in the interests of fertilizer manufacturers as contended by Chester Gray in behalf of the American Farm Bureau federation.

Asks Concerning Funds.

In a heated exchange with Gray, during which he questioned where the federation gets its funds for "sending propaganda far and wide," in the interests of the Cyanamid bill, Senator Norris finally agreed to provide in his resolution that the Cyanamid company be given nitrate plant No. 2 for manufacture of fertilizer, free of rent and taxes and with prior right on power.

The offer of Norris came as a surprise. The Nebraska senator defied Gray to accept it. Gray replied that it was in effect the Willis bill, and asked for support of it.

Both Senator Norris and Senator Frazier, republican, North Dakota, examined Gray about the distribution of "propaganda." Gray, who is legislative representative of the farm bureau federation, said he knew little about this, and explained that publicity was distributed in behalf of his organization by an arrangement through the National Agricultural Publishing company.

FEAR MISSING EXPERT VICTIM OF FOUL PLAY

Lexington, Ky., January 28.—(AP)—Foul play is feared by the family and business associates of Harold J. Berney, 35, of Miami, Fla., outdoor advertising expert of whom no trace has been found following his departure from Lexington a week ago Friday, it became known today.

Police departments of Lexington and Miami have endeavored to learn of his movements after he checked out of a hotel here the night of January 20. That day he had a conference with L. H. Ramsey, vice president and general manager of the Ramsey Sign Service company here; discussed a $100,000 deal involving purchase rights from the Lexington concern of outdoors advertising privileges in Florida and had planned to return to Miami to make final arrangements with his associates regarding the deal, Ramsey said.

Berney showed no signs of fear or distress, either mental or physical, Ramsey said.

'LINDY' TO HOP OFF AT BOGOTA TODAY

Bogota, Colombia, January 28.—(United News.)—Another highest decoration was added to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's international collection when he visited President Abadia of Colombia today.

Streets jammed with cheering crowds greeted the good will ambassador from the north when he called at the executive offices and the ministries of foreign affairs and war. After President Abadia had pinned on the American flier's coat the cross of Boyaca, first class, he and Lindbergh talked.

While accepting from the Colombian people the same honors that have greeted his world-wide pilgrimages, Lindbergh planned the last trips of his Latin American tour.

His Colombian visit will end tomorrow when he takes off for Caracas, Venezuela.

He is expected to fly in a straight line, leaving early in the morning and arriving at the Venezuelan capital in the afternoon. From Caracas he plans to go to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, January 31; Porto Rico, February 2; Santo Domingo, February 3, and Haiti, February 6.

BROOKS SET RECORD IN FLIGHT.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Although he failed in his attempted non-stop flight from Detroit to Miami, in a Ford tlivver plane, Harry J. Brooks established a new American distance record for light planes. The award was announced today by Porter Adams, president of the National Aeronautic association, after a meeting of its contest committee.

When forced down at Asheville, N. C., several days ago Brooks had flown 472 miles. This, however, is scarcely more than half the distance covered by the present holder of the world's record, Max Knipping, French airman, who made a non-stop flight from Paris to Konigsberg October 30, of last year, a distance of 870 miles.

Brooks is waiting here for favorable weather to return to Detroit. He has indicated he again will attempt a non-stop flight from that city to Miami.

Dr. Garner also will conduct two round-table discussions on "American Citizenship."

He is associate editor of the Journal of International Law and is past president of the American Political Science association. Many articles by him on political and legal subjects appear in the New International Encyclopedia, the Encyclopedia of American Government and the Encyclopedia Americana. Impetus to the movement to have the southern air mail line from Chicago pass through Atlanta was given by officials of the department of commerce, it was learned here Saturday with announcement that Senator William Harris, of Georgia, had received a letter from William P. McCracken, Jr., assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics, pledging the department's cooperation.

Flonzaley Quartet Concert Entrances Large Audience

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

In a superb concert at the Woman's Club auditorium Saturday afternoon the Flonzaley quartet appeared before one of the largest crowds of the season for the Atlanta Music club's attraction and scored probably one of the biggest successes this famous organization has won during the many visits it has paid to Atlanta.

For the Atlanta engagement the musicians selected a program which included Brahms, Erwin, Schulhoff and Donnanyi and from these composers delighted and entranced the audience every moment of the concert.

Playing as if one mighty hand were fretting the four stringed instruments and as if one great bow were being swayed, Messers. Adolfo Betti, first violin; Alfred Pochon, second violin; Iwan D'Archambeau, violoncello, and Nicolaas Moldavan, viola, gave a finished and perfect interpretation of some of the classics which have made Brahms, at least, immortal and which have brought musical luster to the names of the two more modern composers.

In the first group, from Brahms, a quartet arrangement in B flat major, opus 67 in four movements, the Flonzaley artists quickly won the appreciation and admiration of the audience of musicians and music lovers present. Every conceivable tone is found in these movements. Now as soft as a lute, now swelling to the volume of a cathedral organ, back and forth ranged the golden stream of music and the audience sat entranced.

Next came two compositions of Schulhoff. The first was a masterly assemblage of grotesque tones. It suggested now the swishing of a breeze through pine trees and swelled to a whistling winter gale. One could almost see goblins and hear them hissing in the tonal winds. As an encore the quartet played Borodine's soporific nocturne with the same masterly perfection.

Final numbers were three movements from Donnanyi's quartet in D flat, major, opus 15 in three movements. Here the musicians met the heaviest test on the program and they responded with as finished work as they have perhaps ever done in their creditable careers. As an encore they offered a delicate number, a medley, with negro spirituals as the theme. It was decidedly one of the most pleasing concerts of the Music club's season and was thoroughly enjoyed throughout.

DRY CHIEF ORDERS NEW LIQUOR PRESCRIPTIONS

Washington, January 28.—(United News.)—New physicians' liquor prescriptions, proof against counterfeiting and designed like government bonds, were ordered engraved by Prohibition Commissioner Doran tonight.

Because a number of bootleggers were forging doctors' prescriptions and druggists were having difficulty in keeping records of legitimate transactions, Doran ordered that hereafter all prescriptions be issued in duplicate.

The new prescriptions will be elaborate. The original will be on white paper with green engraved work, and the duplicate will be on white paper with red engraved work.

UNDERPASS BANDIT HOLDS UP AUTOIST, ESCAPES WITH $138

C. F. Pierce, of 501 Greenwood avenue, was held up by a bandit Saturday night while driving through the Boulevard underpass, near Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills, and robbed of $138 in cash. Mr. Pierce is an employee of the Star Provision company, to which $131 of the money belonged.

According to report of the robbery filed with police, Pierce was entering the underpass when a man jumped upon the running-board of his automobile and ordered him, at the point of a pistol, to stop. There was a large touring car parked just across from the scene of the hold-up, the report stated.

The case was being investigated late Saturday night by City Detectives B. E. Blair and Charles H. Grant.

The Association of Georgia Colleges, which was organized some 20 years ago, has for its object the improvement of all member institutions, particularly standardization of requirements for entrance and graduation and a system for coordination of certain records and research of the members.

H. H. Caldwell, of Georgia Tech, retiring president, was given a vote of thanks by the association for his work during a successful year of the organization.

SPANISH NOVELIST DIES FOE TO SPAIN

Mentone, France, January 28.—(AP)—Vicente Blasco Ibanez died here today in voluntary exile and will be buried Tuesday in the town cemetery in accordance with his last wishes.

The famous Spanish novelist, a victim of diabetes and bronchial pneumonia, raised himself in bed to express the wish to his family gathered about him, then rested his head on his wife's shoulder and expired at 3:30 a. m. The tumultous career of the writer, of which Anatole France said to him, "Your greatest work is the romance of your own life," in recent years made him appreciate peace so much that he was inspired to make his home a refuge for other authors.

Ibanez' 40 years of maturity were crowded with both physical and mental activity. Throughout his dramatic manhood he fought with both pen and sword. He saw nearly all countries of the world and through his books, lectures and movies he gathered gold from most of them.

Although he is said to have been active in opposition to the Spanish government at the age of 20, some say even mingling in revolutionary circles, he was not exiled until after the World war.

HOPED FOR DAWN OF WORLD PEACE.

Mentone, France, January 28.—(United News)—Blasco Ibanez, whose "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" made Rudolph Valentino famous, hoped that the book's sequel, to be known as "The Fifth Horseman," would herald the dawn of world peace.

While word came from Geneva that the internationally famous author had informed League of Nations officials of his plans to promote universal brotherhood, his death was the cause of a hysterical scene on the part of his family. A family disagreement, participated in by Senora Ibanez, her daughter and her two sons, occurred on the arrival of the widow there soon after the death of the author.

Ibanez had bitterly opposed the present regime in Spain, his native land, and at the time of his death was a voluntary exile there. Senora Ibanez, for that reason, demanded that he be buried in his adopted land, and it seemed likely, after a bitter family discussion, that her wishes would prevail. The three children had insisted that the body be returned to Spain.

University of North Carolina Glee Club, Famed Organization, To Sing Here Monday

The University of North Carolina Glee club, famous college organization, which will sing here Monday night in the Woman's club auditorium.

One of the best known groups of college singers in the country, the University of North Carolina Glee club, will appear Monday night at the auditorium of the Woman's club on Peachtree street, presenting the program which has placed them at the pinnacle of college vocal organizations, according to critics of both America and Europe.

The club toured Europe last summer, winning unstinted praise wherever they appeared. After a concert given at Stratford-on-Avon, England, for the benefit of the Shakespeare Memorial Foundation, the Evesham Journal and Four Shires Advertiser, said of their production:

"The enunciation was particularly clear throughout, the breathing was that of practiced singers, and the low notes were never mumbled. The North Carolinians sang as though they enjoyed doing it, and that is the time when and manner how singing should be . . . . The negro songs were given in the true manner, solo leader commencing and chorus following with the refrain."

"Musical America," following a concert in New York last year, had this to say:

"They showed the results of excellent training. Their singing was smooth, mechanically finished and marked by an evident unity of spirit. Their rhythm, especially in the spirituals, was notably good for a group of singers."

Paul John Weaver is director of the Tar Heel singers and it is chiefly through his work that the organization has jumped, during the past three years, to recognition throughout the nation. Its rise to fame within so short a period has been little short of phenomenal.

The concert on Monday at the Woman's club will start promptly at 8:15 p. m., it is announced. Tickets are now on sale and may be obtained either at Phillips & Crew Piano Co., or at the Woman's Club.

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION ENDS CONVENTION HERE

The southeastern section of the Portland Cement association has just closed its ninth annual convention in Atlanta, all of its other eight conventions also having been held here, according to the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau. There were about 75 men in attendance and a feature of the convention was the school of instruction under the direction of W. E. Barker, of the home office in Chicago.

This association was organized in 1902 when about 20 eastern cement makers, seeing the possibilities for cooperation in promotion of concrete-to-users, formed the association which soon became national in scope and now has as members the 87 most important companies of the United States and Canada. Over 45,000 tests are made annually in the association's laboratories. The accident prevention bureau, another department, reports that since 1920 accidents in cement mills have been cut practically in half.

Represented at the Atlanta convention were engineers and field men from Birmingham, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Richmond and Nashville.

Activities of the Week in Atlanta's Schools

EDITED by RICHARD CLARK

A Message From Superintendent Sutton

Dear Boys and Girls:

We are beginning a new semester and I have been wondering what I would do if I were starting to school again, and I have decided that the following sentence contains the big things that I would do if I were beginning school anew:

"If I were going to school I would go with a smile on my face, with a song in my heart, and with the determination to play hard and fair, to study thoroughly, and love sincerely."

The smile on my face would indicate my attitude towards the outer world, the song would express my appreciation, and the determination to play hard and fair would tell of health and fair dealing. The determination to study thoroughly would show a mind trained for mastery, and the determination to love would show a soul preparing itself for the highest ideals and service.

Read over this sentence and think of how you may apply it to your own life during the next semester.

Always Your Friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent Atlanta Public Schools.

Boys' High Club To Offer 'Three Live Ghosts' Feb. 10

Semi-final examinations are over at Boys' High now, reports for the semester have been delivered, and new schedules are beginning to function properly, so that the school is rapidly regaining its pre-exam appearance. The hustle and bustle of those last days before the tests is gone, and students are settling down for the final lap before the term end. Seniors are preparing for graduation, and many new courses are being included in the study routine of these upper classmen.

Many junior high products will make their appearance at the school Monday, for then the second semester officially begins. Boys' High will receive its share of raw material, and will enroll a fine mid-year freshman class. The school enrollment will then be well over 650, a record for Boys' High.

The Dramatic club will present "Three Live Ghosts" at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium on Friday evening, February 10. This performance has been eagerly awaited for several weeks, and the announcement of the date of production is of interest to all the students and to the public at large. The club has an enviable reputation among amateur circles for performances of professional smoothness and the production of "Three Live Ghosts" promises to be the best the club has ever done. The cast includes Carlos Lynes, Walter Paschall, Richard Clark, Randolph Echols, Henry Kingdon, William Bailey, Walter Anderson, Lee Lancy, Ben Read, and Charles Wagner. M. H. Davis is the club's director.

Plans will be formed at this meeting for the inter-school frolics to be held in March in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Junior Red Cross, a celebration which will be of interest to the thousands of children who are active members and the grown-ups at large, who through the children have become acquainted with the splendid work which this organization is doing.

The Junior Red Cross has affiliated with the federation in their movement sponsoring Georgia products and for this occasion a class at Girls' High school, under the direction of Miss Clara Lee Cone, supervisor of domestic arts, Atlanta public schools, will prepare a menu for the dinner composed of Georgia products. NATURE PICTURES SHOWN AT LEE

On Tuesday morning the pupils of the Street school had the privilege of seeing some wonderful pictures of animal life and beautiful scenery in the Canadian Rockies.

Miss Rainwater brought out Dr. Travis, who made these pictures and lectured about them. It was a rare treat for all of us.

Low three pupils are very much interested in their geography. They are studying Holland and the Dutch.

High three is to furnish the assembly program for Friday. It will be the last program they will give in the high three.

Low four pupils are studying about milk. They won the savings banner this week. They are trying hard to be 100 per cent in attendance.

The low five class have finished their milk posters and have some very pretty ones.

Promotion day is near and low six pupils are looking forward to the time when they will be the senior class in school and take over the duties of monitors.

ERNEST LYNN HARMON.

MR. SUTTON SPEAKS AT MORELAND SCHOOL

Our school had a fine attendance at P.-T. A.

Mr. Sutton attended the meeting and gave a very interesting talk on citizenship.

High first children regret leaving Miss Harris for they will soon go to low two.

Low first has been enjoying the drawing very much. They have drawn yellow elephants with pretty blue blankets upon their backs.

All the sets of teeth in high two are now nice and clean, for this room has succeeded in getting 100 per cent perfect teeth and the many troops of germs have moved quite away.

Another point in health will soon be gained, for all the children are drinking good fresh milk and make health posters to interest the children who won't drink milk.

Many children are getting ready to go another step in education by being promoted, and high six will go to junior high. They had their graduating exercises on January 27.

The program was as follows: Welcome, by Willis White; class song, by class; paper on cooperation, by George Wilkinson; cradle song, by class; class prophecy, written by Clark Rogers and read by Harry Kraan; class will, by Frances McCoy; delivery of certificates, by Mr. Hunter; Londonderry air, by class.

Low six has welcomed a new member, Edmund Leake, who came from Albany, N. Y. They also have 100 per cent perfect teeth.

Low six has a beautiful new border around their room. They are studying insects and find it very interesting. The children have been studying hard on examinations. They had a good program on Robert E. Lee's birthday.

The attendance banner was won by low four one.

North Avenue Junior High Pupils Named for Responsible Positions

Junior high school activities at North Avenue Presbyterian school were the outstanding events at that institution last week, when officers for their assembly and the new editor of their publication, "Snappy News," were named. St. John Barnwell, who edited the last term's number, was succeeded by Callendar Wightman. Dorothy Brumby was named president of the assembly, with St. John Barnwell, Emma Sue Wright and St. Julienne Pringle, vice president, secretary and treasurer, respectively.

The assembly holds weekly meetings at North avenue and every Wednesday the group assembles for a program of readings, recitations, musical numbers and entertainment of like nature, in addition to the regular business meeting. The programs have become a vital part of the school life of the pupils, who look forward with great eagerness to the Wednesday programs.

"Snappy News" is a publication unique in its class. The editor is a different student each term, and at the end of the year four girls will have served in this place. The material for each issue is contributed by students from all the junior high grades, and after careful selection by the editor is entered in the magazine. Each issue expresses the individuality of the editor fully, as the form of presentation and the method with which the articles are handled are left entirely up to the editor. "Snappy News" is an unusual type of publication, one that is worthy of its name in both appearance and content.

BROOKHAVEN SCHOOL GIVES LEE PROGRAM

The pupils of Brookhaven Junior High gave an enjoyable program on Thursday afternoon, January 19, in honor of the birthday of Robert E. Lee.

The exercises were in charge of Mrs. Z. W. Jones, principal of the school. The program was opened by "Dixie Land," sung by the student body. Then Mrs. Jones asked each teacher to give a few thoughts about Lee. These short talks praised his ability as a general, but most of all his strong character, his kindness to animals, his sympathy for his fellowman, his courtesy and his ability to stand firmly for what he believed to be right. Each urged that the boys and girls keep before them his qualities and practice them in their daily contacts.

After these talks the following program was given: "The Birthday of Robert E. Lee," Enid Bryant; "The Sword of Lee," Estelle Wehunt; "Robert E. Lee, a Gentleman," Lucile Coleman; songs, "The Bonnie Blue Flag" and "Yankee Doodle;" "Robert Edward Lee," Zellama Little; "The Life of Robert E. Lee," Estelle Harris; "Facts About Lee," Ruth Gower; song, "Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!" "Robert E. Lee's Letter to His Daughter," Harriett Craft.

After our southern hero had been honored in this manner, the entire student body gave the salute and pledge to the Stars and Stripes. Then all joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner," after which they marched quietly to their class-room to the tune of "Dixie Land."

Tom Holland Is Named Captain By Marist Team

At the Marist college football banquet Wednesday night at the Athletic club Tom Holland was elected captain of the '28 team by members of the departing '27 team. Short speeches were made by Dr. Dagneau, principal of Marist; Robert Martin, Joe Bean and Al Doonan. Coach Bean was presented with a handsome pen and pencil set, a gift from the squad.

The examination for cadet major at Marist was held Friday but results will not be known for quite a few days.

Study of Milk Features Work At Georgia Ave.

Georgia Avenue proved to the many people who came on Friday night that this school can put on a most interesting entertainment, for we entertained them with many different kinds of stunts for about two hours.

We were delighted to have Mr. Hunter and Mr. Kimberly, of Hoke Smith Junior High, visit our high sixth grade last week.

At the end of this week our high sixth will leave us for Junior High, and as they go from this school we want to assure them of our love for them and our interest in their work as they go on through life. This grade will have their promotion program on Friday and are inviting their mothers and all others interested in them to attend.

High six is studying the cloud and weather. They are also very interested in the study of tadpoles. They have one large one that has hind legs and is developing its front ones.

Low six has had 100 per cent in banking for the last nine months. We were glad to welcome a new pupil, Maurice Pinkston. The entertainment was a great success. Low six is sorry that James Cooper cannot come to school on account of illness with mumps.

Last week the high five started on their milk posters. Some have not finished but they hope to finish them before they go to low six. Five of our class are to receive Palmer method buttons.

Low five is making lantern slides on milk.

High four has a new pupil again. Kirk Worster. They also observed Robert E. Lee's birthday.

Low four is going to make some lovely milk posters. They are also going to have a play.

High three is learning a milk song. Low two made milk posters and decide to drink a lot of milk.

J. C. HARRIS HOLDS PROMOTION EXERCISES

Last Tuesday was our regular Parent-Teacher meeting and as it was so near Lee's birthday we had a very interesting talk on Robert E. Lee by Dr. Carter Helm Jones, of the Second Baptist church. He spoke of some personal incidents in the life of Lee, as when he was a little boy he had the pleasure of knowing Lee. Bernice Martin gave two instrumental solos and Mrs. Douglas two vocal solos. They were both very much enjoyed.

Friday is our promotion day and 35 pupils left us and went to some junior high. They had a very nice program, which is as follows: Processional; piano solo (Rheinberger), "The Chase," Josephine Johnston; welcome, Nell King; song, "The Song of the Gondolier," the class, with Paul Hughes, violin; Howard Loveless, violin; Josephine Johnston, piano; report of committees; class poem, Mabel Ward; piano solo (Vanderbeck), "Eloise Glide," Nell King; delivery of certificates and athletic badges, Miss Mary Postell, assistant superintendent of schools; class song, the class.

Low six-two has two new pupils, Pauline Norman, from Athens, and George Alexander, from Columbia, S. C.

Low six-two had a very nice Lee program on his birthday. At this time Elizabeth Anne Davis presented to the class two pictures, one of Lee and one of the Stone Mountain memorial, that were secured by her mother, Mrs. Davis, from Hollins Randolph.

We had a paper sale last Monday and low-four won the prize for having the most papers and magazines.

All of the grades are working hard on the milk campaign. High-two is making milk posters and high-three is writing rhymes and poems. Low-one is working hard to drink three cups of milk daily.

The P.-T. A. gave the kindergarten a slide for their room, which they take turns in using, they are having such a good time with it.

HARRIET MOORE.

ONE HUNDRED EIGHTY TO ENROLL AT BROWN

Joe Brown is going to receive about one hundred and eighty new pupils from the various grammar schools. Forty pupils are to be promoted, leaving an additional enrollment of 140, which will require three new teachers. These teachers are Miss Spence, who teaches mathematics; Miss Walker, teacher of social science, and Miss Coile, who will teach English.

We are missing one of our fine teachers, Miss Mills, who has taught at Joe Brown for over three years. Miss Mills inaugurated the art work and made this department a success. Her place has been filled by Miss Carmichael.

EVELYN MATHIEU.

G. H. S. Literary Supplement Features Recent 'Hi-Times'

A new standard in literary excellence at Girls' High was set with the publication of the semi-annual literary supplement to our school publication, the Girls' High Times. In the issue of January 19 all prize winners were announced and the prize-winning writings were published in the supplement with other literary works of merit. Prizes were offered for the best poem, short story, essay, feature story and freshman contribution. These five prizes were won by four girls. They were as follows: Best poem, Sarah Cousins, "A Winter's Tale;" best short story and best freshman contribution, Marian Matthews, "Mirandy's Christmas;" best essay, Margaret Harris, "On Dogs in General and Mine in Particular;" best feature story, Margaret Ridley, "The Final Hegira." All of the contributions to the supplement are splendid examples of Girls' High's progress along literary lines and have set a new standard for us to measure up to.

Miss Smith, of the home economics department, and her home economic IV class entertained the members of the Girls' High faculty at a most attractive luncheon on Tuesday, January 24, at the noon lunch hour. The purpose of the luncheon was not only to entertain the teachers, but to give them a chance to inspect the little model apartment operated by the home economics department on the second floor of our school building. New pictures and lamp shades, the work of the students, have been added to the furnishings of the apartment. The delicious little luncheon, prepared by the girls and Miss Smith, was served in the dining room of the apartment and in the cooking laboratory.

The last half of the school year begins Tuesday, January 31, and on that day new schedules will go into effect. Report cards are to be distributed on Monday, January 30. The new half year is an impetus for a fresh start and great things are expected of the girls for the last half of the year.

WINIFRED HUBBARD.

FAITH STUDENTS DRAMATIZE STORY

Low kindergarten had a wonderful trip to Mathen's dairy last Monday. Mr. McGhee from Decatur and F. C. Law, of Atlanta brought their cars and went with the children and teachers. They went through the entire plant and came home with a greater appreciation of the milk they drink daily. Friday they made butter from milk they had bought on Wednesday. Miss Frances Law had charge of the work for the week.

Low one has been studying about health and are planning to make health charts.

Low one-two was glad to have Bob Roby back at school after a long illness.

High two studied with much interest about the health rules connected with safety. High two visited low two to hear what they had learned about our Eskimo neighbors. We learned a great deal. Each group has dramatized a story for our class and we are working to play one well enough to play it for another grade.

Lucille Gresham and Rebecca Hollingsworth of low three made A in every subject this quarter. We are proud of them.

High three won the P.-T. A. prize. We are all trying hard to pass in high four.

We are having such a good time in high five getting our room decorated prettily for the new class coming. We are making a Valentine border which we hope they're going to like very much.

Low six is making health posters on milk. We are enjoying playing dodgeball.

High six is working very hard to get promoted to Junior High.

The ungraded low class has completed a milk chart. We have adopted the following motto:

"Drink milk at least a pint each day,
Instead of coffee or tea,
'Twill help us grow and make us strong,
And we will healthy be."

Eruption Declines.

Batavia, Java, January 28.—(AP)—Eruption of the famous volcano of Krakatao, which has been violent in recent days, apparently was dying out today. There has been only the exhalation of fumes and gas for the past 12 hours. The submarine rumblings, however, continue.

Toronto, January 28.—(AP)—Admission of women to the ministry of the United Church of Canada is recommended in a report of a special committee of preachers and laymen which will be submitted to the next general council of the church.

Professor H. A. Kent was the only member of the committee to oppose the recommendation. He said the innovation, if applied to married women, would lead "to the unedifying spectacle of the husband keeping house while the wife is engaged in public duties." The report was the result of a two-year study of the problem. It recommended that women be empowered to perform all duties of a minister except the communion service.

WAR DEPARTMENT ADOPTS NEW PLANE DEFENSE WEAPON

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Official adoption of the 105-mm. anti-aircraft gun, the longest snouted shooting iron of that size ever built in America, was announced today by the war department. The weapon will be the standard equipment for fixed anti-aircraft defenses, supplementing the 75-mm. and 50 and 30-caliber machine gun batteries.

The 105-m., which means a gun of approximately 4.1-inch bore, is a 60-caliber, or 60 times 4.1 inches in length, a little more than 20 feet. It fires a 33-pound projectile to a straight-up altitude of more than 12,000 yards, almost eight miles, and has a horizontal range of 20,000 yards. Shells leave the muzzle at a speed of 3,000 feet per second, much faster than a military rifle bullet travels, and, using fixed ammunition, that is prepared cartridges like rifle cartridges, and a compressed air rammer and semi-automatic breech lock, the gun can be fired 15 times a minute.

ORDINANCE VIOLATION CHARGED TO GINSBERG

Abraham Ginsberg, 71, pawnbroker, of 130 Decatur street, was charged Saturday by Detectives Cody and Ellis with violation of the pawnbroking ordinance by failing to report the purchase of a suit of clothes from a negro, and offering the suit for sale before the expiration of the required ten days. Detectives said that the owner of the suit of clothes happened along in front of Ginsberg's store and recognized his suit, which he claimed had been stolen, hanging on a hook in front of the pawn shop.

Fort Valley-to-Perry Bus Service Is Inaugurated

A modern, specially designed and built bus providing motor transport service for passengers, mail, baggage and express between Fort Valley and Perry, Ga. The bus service was inaugurated a week ago by the Central of Georgia railway.

The Central of Georgia motor bus, which has replaced steam service of 52 years' standing between Fort Valley and Perry, Ga., is an innovation in both type of equipment and service. The bus is a standard 25-passenger Mack, but is fitted in the rear to provided for carrying of express, baggage and mail in a locked compartment. The design of this bus is unique and is probably the first one built to replace steam service which provides adequate comfort for passenger and such security for mail and express service that it has met with favor with inspecting officials of these services.

The idea was conceived by the progressive Central of Georgia Railway company, which organized the Central of Georgia Motor Transport company to handle its business of this type. While it has only been in service a week, officials say, it has not only met with approval of passengers served, but has thoroughly satisfied railway heads in its convenience, efficiency and economy.

They believe that this type of equipment will replace many short-line steam operations, since it will permit railroads not only to meet obligations of their franchise, but to provide rapid, convenient, modern transportation which will be profitable in operation.

Victor Hyde, Noted Director Will Arrive Here This Week

:: LIKES TO DIRECT AMATEURS, HE SAYS ::

VICTOR HYDE.

Victor Hyde, nationally known figure in stage producing circles, who has been engaged to direct The Constitution-Loew's Grand Frolics, to be staged at Loew's Grand theater the week of February 13, with a cast of local young people, will arrive in Atlanta sometime during the coming week for selection of the cast.

The definite date will be announced in The Constitution later in the week. Applications for positions in the cast are still being received at Loew's Grand theater. Regular application blanks may be obtained from the theater.

Mr. Hyde, in his letter of acceptance to Thomas H. James, manager of Loew's Grand, said:

"Associate stage directors are curious to know why I always accept engagements to school amateurs for the musical comedy stages when there is so much work to be had in New York. Contrary to the general belief, there is always more work than directors in New York, because of the many sacrifices one must make before he becomes a recognized producer, and my colleagues cannot understand me dropping all professional work to come here.

"With an amateur group you have the very essence of ambition. You have a group of young people who are trying every minute to succeed, to do the unusual and to attract attention. With amateurs you don't have to wait at rehearsals. They are here at the moment they are called, and you don't have to wait on the termination of some star's dinner engagement.

"Another reason is that I love real talent and the discovery of it. Despite my dancing career, I believe I should have been an explorer. I love to explore for hidden talent. I really enjoy bringing a voice from an amateur throat almost paralyzed with fear; to send a pair of legs on a dancing errand when they look as though they are about ready to cave in from fright. When the fright has passed from the amateur every sort of talent lies before the director.

"Local revues are wonderfully inviting to the ambitious but a terrible shock to the stage-struck. The latter element lasts one rehearsal. They automatically weed themselves out. They are dreamers, not workers. In this city I am looking for workers. I'll find the talent and theater-goers will have the surprise of their lives awaiting them. Come on amateurs, work with me."

Says Companionate Marriage Prolonged Petting Party Only

Jacksonville, Fla., January 28.—(AP)—Companionate marriage is only a "sort of prolonged petting party," and is no solution for the present divorce evil—"a disease of the body of society which will have to run its course and heal itself."—in the opinion of Judge D. A. Simmons of the circuit court.

Judge Simmons today replied to a proposal of Dr. James C. Coleman, minister of the United Liberal church of Jacksonville, that the circuit judges of Florida confer together on the divorce problem and endeavor to effect some remedy. A study of the companionate marriage plan was suggested.

JUDGE DECLINES TO SEPARATE PAIR WEDDED AT SEA

Chicago, January 28.—(AP)—Annulment of the marriage of David M. Mainard to Willa Evans Mainard, of New York, upon the sole plea that the ceremony had been performed by a ship captain was refused today by Judge Joseph Sabath. He did not dismiss the bill, however, and told the attorneys for the complainant to produce more law.

Judge Sabath indicated he was not in favor of setting a precedent because of the effect it would have upon thousands of marriages performed on the high seas.

CHANGE OF VENUE IS GRANTED COUPLE HELD FOR MURDER

Greenup, Ky., January 28.—(AP)—Robert H. Pitts and his housekeeper, Mrs. Marie Frazier, both charged with the murder of Pitts' 3-year-old daughter, Mary Magdalene, on December 29, 1927, were granted a change of venue today by Circuit Judge W. C. Halbert.

The case will be tried on February 29 at Vanceburg, Lewis county.

NEW PHOTO-ENGRAVING TEXT COMES OFF PRESS

"Achievement in Photo-Engraving and Letter-Press Printing, 1927," a book of 870 pages, published by the American Photo-Engravers association and heralded as the most elaborate undertaking of its kind ever attempted, is just off the press, it was learned here Saturday.

The purpose of the book, which is being sold for what is said to be one-tenth its actual cost to the publisher, is "to demonstrate, instruct, educate and help those who use printed illustrations as well as those who make them." The book avoids involved theorizing and dogmatic declamation and deals with all phases of the subject from the standpoint of practical experience and demonstrable results. It is an immense exhibition of direct evidence.

"As a direct guide to finished results, it will occupy first place in the minds of all who have to do with the preparation and execution of illustrated printed matter," the announcement states. "Those who are seeking the unusual in technique and effects will find in 'Achievement' the greatest collection of specimens obtainable and instantly accessible; composed of materials that will preclude costly adventures and experiments resulting in failure."

"FOLLIES" BEAUTY GRANTED DIVORCE FROM BENESCH

Chicago, January 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Helen Henderson Benesch, former "Follies" girl, today won a divorce from Aaron Benesch, elderly, wealthy, retired business man of Baltimore, on the uncontested allegation of physical cruelty.

Judge Joseph Sabath, who issued the decree, questioned her at length as to whether she was a resident of Illinois, and her attorney replied that since the charge was cruelty in Illinois, it was not necessary to prove residence here. Benesch was not represented, a stipulation being presented that he was not contesting action.

They were married September 27, 1927, and separated November 11, 1927.

SHOE CRAFTS VOTE DOWN PROPOSAL TO RESUME WORK

Haverhill, Mass., January 28.—(AP) A plan of a citizens' committee to restore peace in the Haverhill shoe industry failed today when all seven of the local shoe crafts of the Shoe Workers' Protective union voted down a proposal that 5,000 striking workers return to the factories pending a rehearing of the wage controversy.

The strike went into effect ten days ago and was called as a result of a wage reduction which was imposed January 1. The entire shoe industry in the city has been tied up as a result. Spokesmen for the workers said they would not return to the shops unless the 1927 wage schedule was restored.

TWO AMERICAN SHIPS ON FIRST VOYAGES

New York, January 28.—(AP)—The sailing today of two American liners on their maiden voyages was said by shipping men to mark the first such event in many years.

The vessels were the California of the Panama Pacific line and the Dixie of the Southern Pacific Steamship company. The California is the biggest commercial ship ever built in an American yard and the largest vessel in the world equipped with an electric drive. The Dixie, in the opinion of shipping men, is one of the finest vessels in coastwise trade. The California is bound for San Francisco through the Panama canal and the Dixie is headed for New Orleans.

MONROE DOCTRINE UPHELD BY WILLIS

Columbus, Ohio, January 28.—(AP) Defense of the Monroe doctrine and the United States' position with relation to Nicaragua were the dominant points made by United States Senator Frank B. Willis here tonight in his first public address in behalf of his presidential candidacy.

Speaking before the Republican Glee club at its celebration of McKinley day, Senator Willis declared, "There is not now and never has been any purpose on the part of the American government to interpose in any manner in Central or South America except to aid the people of those countries in developing progressive government, maintaining peace and advancing prosperity."

Upholds Nicaraguan Policy.

Taking cognizance of certain opposition to the government's Nicaraguan policy, Senator Willis declared that "to withdraw from Nicaragua under present conditions would be not only an act of cowardice but an invitation to every nation in Europe to interfere in Central America and to destroy the Monroe doctrine."

Willis contended it is the duty of the United States to see that stable government is established in Nicaragua, and that our canal rights there be protected as well as rights of foreign countries under the Monroe doctrine.

Extolling the governmental policies of the McKinley administration, he said the protective tariff doctrine established then not only is now, but must remain one of the cardinal doctrines of the republican party.

Opposes Debt Cancellation.

Reiterating his stand against cancellation of war debts, Willis said, "Those who clamor in foreign countries for cancellation of the debt would carry greater weight with their arguments if they acted more in good faith."

Pointing to France, he said that country "has been pursuing a most peculiar policy." She had been unwilling to enter into final settlement of her war debt. Yet at the same time she seems to have funds to finance Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and Poland in their warlike preparations.

2 NEW ASPIRANTS IN COUNTY RACE

headquarters in room 303 of the Thrower building. Mr. Harwell is a native Atlantan and has served the city as marshal for the past ten years. Mr. Johnson is a veteran member of Fulton county commission and at present is chairman of the public works committee of that body.

Three women are entitled to fight it out for the position of Fulton county treasurer, with the prospect that at least one man will be in the field before entries close at noon Tuesday week, February 6.

3 Women in Race.

They are Mrs. Mabel Abbott MacNeill, daughter of William H. Abbott, tax receiver; Mrs. Beulah Manston, sister of Paul Donehoo, coroner, and Mrs. J. R. Wakefield, prominent Atlanta woman.

J. C. Harrison, former member of the Atlanta city council and ex-president of the City Salesmen's association and local post "B" Travelers' Protective association, is an avowed candidate for the post and will qualify, it is said.

Sheriff James I. Lowry, for the past 11 years incumbent, is opposed for reelection by A. M. Corrie, railroad man. Both are qualified and will make a spirited bid for votes of Fulton citizens, their campaign headquarters announce.

One of the hottest and probably one of the shortest campaigns waged for Fulton county offices in recent years is in the offing, according to predictions Saturday of political observers. This week is expected to be comparatively quiet, with practically all those who expect to qualify for jobs subject to the primary taking the field.

Registration Closes February 6.

Registration and qualification books close at noon February 6, Tuesday week, and after that the fight for votes will be launched in earnest. Those contending the positions in the primary will begin active campaigns after the registration books close, and before the end of next week each candidate will have his or her plans definitely shaped.

Those who have qualified for the races to date follow:

For county commission, Walter B. Stewart, Captain George M. Hope, Dr. A. H. Cochran, Edward H. Inman, Sam D. Hewlett; for tax receiver, Edwin F. Johnson and Walter E. Harwell; for solicitor criminal court of Atlanta, Carlton W. Binns and John McClelland; for sheriff, James I. Lowry and A. M. Corrie; for treasurer, Mrs. Mabel Abbott MacNeill and Mrs. Beulah Manston and Mrs. J. R. Wakefield; for tax collector, W. S. Richardson, incumbent; for ordinary, Thomas H. Jeffries, incumbent; for superintendent Fulton county schools, Jere A. Wells, incumbent; for judge criminal court of Atlanta, Judge Jesse M. Wood, incumbent, and R. E. Church; for clerk Fulton county superior court, Thomas C. Miller, incumbent; for coroner, Paul Donehoo, incumbent.

Suicide Thwarted.

Edwardsville, Ill., January 28.—(AP)—Sentenced here today to be hanged February 18 for murder, Mike Kurant, 29, attempted to end his life in a 40-foot plunge from a balcony in the Madison county courthouse.

DANDRUFF
A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—(adv.)

'Bad Boy Mayor' of Village

TELLS WORLD WHAT HE THINKS OF CURFEW

Struts His Stuff on Broadway

New York, January 28.—(United News).—The Hon. Bossy Gillis, goodwill ambassador from Newburyport, Mass., arrived in town today and got a room at the McAlpin hotel.

He had one disappointment after another. Tex Guinan's place, he learned, was closed "and that's a gal I'd rather meet than anyone in your whole burg." Mayor Jimmy Walker was not at his office because this was Saturday, so Bossy couldn't be received in state at city hall. Then, too, it was snowing and sightseeing was uncomfortable.

Thus there wasn't much to do but lean back in a chair, deposit No. 10 shoes with turned-up toes on Mrs. McAlpin's starched counterpane and talk with reporters.

"Well, boys," said the mayor of Newburyport, "I'm here to fix up some national business. That's all you need to know."

Further than that, concerning the cause of his visit, deponent would not speak. It was understood, however, he came here in connection with syndicated articles on municipal problems, which were contracted for after Bossy, the former gob and village "bad boy" came to political power.

The Massachusetts celebrity will remain here until Tuesday. On Monday he will call on Mayor Walker and a few days later proceed to Chicago to meet Mayor Thompson.

"You know there are only three mayors in the country—Gillis, Walker and Thompson," he commented. Then he thought a minute before he added solemnly, "in the order named."

Bossy's anguish at Tex Guinan's encounters with the law was intense. "They got a nerve closing her up," he commented.

Bossy arranged for tickets to a girl and music show and admitted that he hoped he would be taken back stage after the performance. Attendance at the Frivolity club was on the program for the early morning.

"Don't you believe in a curfew?" Gillis was asked.

"Nope; no curfew for mine," he replied. "Let the people raise hell and be merry."

ATLANTA CHEVROLET PLANT HEADS REGION

parts warehouses which will serve parts to the entire south.

More Production Needed.

"The reception of the new 'bigger and better Chevrolet,' which was announced on January 1 of this year has been so enthusiastically received on the part of the public that the production from the Atlanta plant is needed very badly at this time to assist in filling the large number of unfilled orders that have accumulated since this announcement and everything possible that can be done is being done to rush completion of the Atlanta plant," the announcement said.

Mr. Costley is a native of the south, having been born and reared in Georgia. He is thoroughly familiar with the southern automobile trade, having just completed an extensive trip throughout the southeastern states and he says that in his experience he has never seen conditions, generally speaking, better than they are at the present time fundamentally. He anticipates even a greater growth in Chevrolet business during 1928 than has taken place in either 1926 or 1927.

"Dealers report constantly growing list of unfilled orders in the face of the fact that Chevrolet has delivered more automobiles during the month of January, 1928, than in any January in its history," he stated. "In fact, the accomplishment of Chevrolet in changing over to its new model is one of the outstanding accomplishments in modern industry, having closed the plants on November 15, starting back with the new model December 12 for the purpose of sampling dealers prior to January 1, then immediately stepping into January with a production schedule of 60,000 cars and February with 100,000 cars running capacity from February 1."

Formerly of Ohio.

Mr. Gibson was formerly connected with the regional office in Norwood, Ohio, as regional organization manager. He has been with Chevrolet for the past three years and is thoroughly familiar with southern territory, having worked considerably in the south during his connection with the Ohio plant. He now is permanently connected with the new southeastern region and will have charge of the analyzation of territory and the perfecting of the proper organizations.

Mr. Landrum, formerly zone car distributor for the Columbia, S. C., zone, acted in a similar capacity at the Charlotte and Columbia offices and comes into this new position well qualified.

Mr. Gage comes to Atlanta from Jacksonville, Fla., where he was connected with the Jacksonville zone office in the capacity of zone accounting manager. His career began with Chevrolet in Los Angeles, having been with the company for the past five years. Mr. Gage will assume the accounting responsibilities, the promotion of good accounting with Chevrolet dealers, proper analyzation of departments for the dealers in the southeastern region, working through the zone sales offices established at Birmingham, Charlotte, Columbia, Jacksonville and Atlanta.

Mr. Heath is a native of Texas, having been connected in Dallas as a Chevrolet retail salesman, then as a Chevrolet factory representative, coming to Atlanta in the early part of 1927 to assume similar duties. At the opening of the new southeastern region in Atlanta on January 1, Mr. Heath was promoted to the position of regional sales promotion manager, which from his past retail experience he is well qualified to fill. He will have charge of all sales promotion activities over the southeast.

Mr. Nettleton needs no introduction to the southern automotive industry, having a few years ago filled the position of the Atlanta zone parts and service manager. He was promoted to the regional position at Norwood, Ohio, about two years ago and has now been placed in charge of all service and parts operations in the southeast. Mr. Nettleton has been connected continuously with Chevrolet for the past 12 years and is thoroughly qualified to meet the needs of Chevrolet users.

Construction work on the new Chevrolet plant here now has progressed to a point where the hugeness of the project is visibly apparent. The local plant, officials said Saturday, will employ between 1,200 and 1,400 people and will turn out a maximum of 350 cars per day.

The plant will be 900 feet long, with commodious side tracking facilities covering 32 1-2 acres. The units of the great plant themselves will cover 20 acres of ground and will include a complete test track one mile long on which the assembled cars may be given thorough trials for accurate assemblage before going to dealers.

In connection with the rank and file of its more than 1,000 workers, officials point out that Atlanta will derive tremendous benefit from location of the plant here in that less than 50 persons will be brought here from outside plants, the great rank and file of employees being recruited in Atlanta.

The plant has a storage capacity of 200 box cars, and material shipped here in these will be unloaded under cover from the cars directly to their proper place on the assembly line.

The Fisher Body corporation, a unit of General Motors, will have a plant on the industrial site, where will be manufactured Fisher bodies for the Chevrolet cars assembled here. As stated above, the plant also will include a handsome three-story office building to house the various executive offices. In addition, a big parts warehouse will be included, where parts to stock and serve dealers throughout the new regional zone will be stored. Officials state that this great parts department will have a stock of three-quarters of a million Chevrolet parts.

A feature of the plant will be the fact that ample conveniences will be provided for parking cars of employees and visitors, an eight-acre parking ground now being in course of preparation.

MOODY STARTS CRUSADE TO HOLD PARLEY ON COTTON

Austin, Texas, January 28.—(AP)—Favorable responses to overtures having been made, Governor Moody today wired the respective governors of the south's cotton producing states suggesting a conference at Jackson, Miss., February 20, to organize for the reduction of cotton acreage and to battle "propaganda."

Five governors—Graves, Alabama; Johnston, Oklahoma; Simpson, Louisiana; Hardman, Georgia, and Bilbo, Mississippi, already have promised cooperation and support to such a movement. Governor Martineau, Arkansas, is out of the state.

Collieries Idle.

Hazleton, Pa., January 28.—(AP)—Nineteen of the 38 anthracite collieries on the Hazleton and Mahanoy division of the Lehigh Valley railroad were idle today because of slack market conditions.

FATE OF HEIRESS TERRORIZES GIRLS

(Copyright, 1928, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Northampton, Mass., January 28.—After days of kowtowing to the Smith college faculty, a real, systematic hunt for the missing student, Frances St. John Smith, was under way today.

The new search will be conducted by grim men, Boston detectives, reared in a rough school, and they will brook none of the high-brow dictation that so far has persistently impeded the progress of the local investigators.

Students Are Terrorized.

Meanwhile a state of mind bordering on terror has taken possession of a vast majority of the student body of 2,500, many of them immature, impressionable young girls.

Fear of the unknown is gripping these young women, and the change in their demeanor is readily apparent to the townspeople.

Before the disappearance of Frances Smith the streets up to 9 or 10 o'clock at night were swarming with happy, laughing groups of students, who went from shop to shop, chattering gaily, girl-fashion, or singing college songs. Now, as twilight settles over Northampton hardly a college girl is to be seen.

The silence policy of Smith has reacted on the college as a boomerang. In ordinary years more than 4,000 applications for registry for the following year are recorded at this time. It was revealed today that fewer than half of this number have been received.

SEARCH HOSPITALS FOR HEIRESS.

Jersey City, N. J., January 28.—(United News.)—Instructions to search for Miss Frances St. John Smith in hospitals and asylums throughout New Jersey were included in an order issued by Governor A. Harry Moore today, adding New Jersey's police force to those of other states in the hunt for the missing Smith college girl.

U. S. Road Fund.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Creation of a $407,300,000 fund for use in federal highway construction was proposed in a bill drafted by Representative Browne, republican, Wisconsin.

LIVESTOCK TRADE IN GEORGIA GROWS

and Alabama. The territory served by the Atlanta Union Stock Yards includes ten states in the large southeastern area, extending from Virginia to Louisiana. The stock comes from farmers to the stock yards and passes through them to the commissioners. For this reason the yards indicate the trading going on and show the productivity of the farmers and the marketing conditions. In addition to the farmers of this section producing more cattle they are now being paid a higher price for it than has been the case in five or six years.

Another aspect of increased business shown by the local stock yards is seen in the handling of all classes of live stock over the railroads, Mr. Brooks remarked. The Atlanta Union Stock Yards are recognized by the railroads as a public stock yards, enabling them to unload, feed and reload cars of live stock passing in transit through Atlanta. A great bulk of this business comes from the west.

The local stock yards were established 25 years ago and have been operated by the Brady-Miller interests as the Miller Union Stock Yards until the old charter expired about a year ago and the business was purchased by new interests. Officers of the Atlanta Union Stock Yards are Asa Candler, Jr., president; Mr. Brooks, secretary, and John F. Clegg, treasurer. Mr. Brooks, who manages the yards, has been connected with them for about 23 years and is recognized as one of the outstanding experts in this field.

Largest Mule Market.

One notable feature of the Atlanta live stock markets is that it has been regarded as the largest mule center in the world for several years, while over a long period of years it has always ranked among the first three. The present growth in all kinds of live stock is rapid. Last week and the week before, although the yards had a big run of cattle, the supply was not sufficient to fill the demand in either week, Mr. Brooks stated. The following figures of the Atlanta Union Stock Yards were cited by Mr. Brooks as showing the trend in this field.

In 1927 the yards handled directly 53,200 head of cattle and calves, while in 1926 they handled 35,451 head. In 1927, 125,357 head of hogs were handled as against 123,686 in 1926. The head of sheep handled in 1927 was 6,067 compared with 2,650 the previous year. In horses and mules the yards handled 14,596 in 1927, while 12,707 were handled in 1926. Another indication that the trend is rapidly upward is seen in the high percentage of increase for each of the late 1927 months, while business increases for the current month have mounted still higher.

Fate of Potential Russ Czar

AMERICAN GIRL IS MOTHER OF BABY PRINCE

Hinges on Future of Sovietism

London, January 28.—(AP)—One day-old Prince Ilyinski, potential heir to the Russian throne, probably would have been born in America but for the intervention of small commonplace incidents.

Both his mother, the former Audrey Emery, daughter of the late John Emery, American millionaire, and his father, Grand Duke Dmitri, expected the baby to see his first daylight in the United States, but they delayed their plans until autumn and then physicians advised against an ocean crossing in the face of stormy weather as the princess is a very poor sailor. Much thought was given to the matter by other members of the old Russian imperial family as well as the parents, since the prospective baby was to be the first child of a grand duke in direct line of the Romanoff succession and therefore some day might be the titular czar of Russia.

"We are the happiest parents in the world," said the grand duke as he beamed with pride. "It was our dream that the baby should be a boy—a little prince—and our dream has been gratified, for which we are most grateful."

The duke, a tall, slender, smooth-shaven man of thirty-five, immaculately attired and with a suggestion of seriousness in his voice, then talked about plans for the future. His plans concern the life of the new prince as much as the lives of the duke and princess themselves.

"Upon Russia's future, perhaps, depends the boy's future," said the duke. "Who knows?" Then after a moment's hesitation, he added: "In ten or twenty years many things may happen in my great country."

The grand duke and his princess are planning to visit the United States next summer, taking the baby with them.

Jingle Contest Winners Will Be Announced Soon

Winners of the recent jingle contest conducted by The Constitution and the Georgia College of Agriculture will be announced within the next few days.

It had been planned to announce the winners in this morning's issue of The Constitution, but the judges chosen to make the decision at the last minute asked for more time to reach a verdict.

More than three hundred persons from Atlanta and other cities sent in papers to the jingle editor, and many of them proved of unusual worth. According to the rules of the contest, all of the jingles had to be written with the idea of boosting the value of milk.

The papers were sent in to The Constitution and then forwarded to Athens, where they were placed in the hands of three judges with instructions to select the best ten, three to receive prizes and the last seven honorable mention in the contest.

RABBI DECLARES "NEW MARRIAGE" IS SEX SHOPPING

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Companionate marriage was called "sex shopping and a form of dancing down the primrose path of sex dalliance" by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise tonight in a debate on that subject with Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of Denver, Colo., at Carnegie hall.

A large audience heard the two opposing leaders discuss the subject of "companionate marriage" and the topic of birth control as well.

SEEK TARIFF RIDER ON TAX SLICE BILL

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—The coalition of senate democrats and republican independents which upset administration forces twice this week is laying plans to attach a tariff bill to the tax reduction measure when it reaches the floor.

Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, spokesman for the democrats on revenue legislation, today predicted support from democrats for a tariff rider to the tax bill, while Senator McMaster, republican, South Dakota, announced he was considering introduction of tariff amendments to the revenue proposal.

Tax Cut Still Remote.

A stumbling block to the plan which has progressed so far only in private conferences of leaders of the two groups lies in the unwillingness of the republican independents to support the effort of the democrats to force early action on the tax bill or to support the proposal for a reduction in the corporation levy.

In fact, this obstacle in the negotiations appeared so great today that Senator Simmons said this and the determination of administration leaders to delay the tax bill until after March 15 made the outlook for any tax revision at this session "very foggy."

Administration republicans hold the whip in the senate finance committee, where the tax reduction bill is now shelved, and they will be able to check any move there for a tariff rider in committee.

Real Battle Expected.

But the announced stand of Senator Simmons for tariff revision in connection with tax reduction gave new promise for a real tariff row.

Democrats and the republican independents previously put through by an overwhelming vote the resolution of Senator McMaster asking for immediate downward revision of "excessive" tariff rates. This was shunted aside in the house, where tariff legislation must originate, but actual tariff revision attached to the revenue bill would force house consideration.

Mercer Bears Snowed Under 54-21 Count

Smooth Working Club Five Proves Too Much for Invading Quint.

BY DICK HAWKINS.

If one were inclined to engage in the passing of puns one might wonder how the Mercer Bears could bear it—"it" being a sound thrashing at the hands of the Atlanta Athletic club basketball five. The score was 54-21 and it is not entirely impossible that the charges of Gentleman Joe Bean could have dropped a few more points if the diminutive mentor had not chosen to have his second team on the floor at least half the game.

It was a losing flight from the very beginning for the Orange and Black of Mercer. Their initial nemesis goes by the name of Mr. Pat Stephens and he plays at forward for the club. Saturday night he celebrated the first 30 seconds of play by dropping one basket and followed this with another within the first minute. Speaking in the language of Flaming Youth Pat might have been termed "hot" and his teammates were but slightly cooler.

Smooth Passing.

The passing of the Clubbers was the best seen on the club floor this season. They were deadly and they were speed personified. The guarding of the Bean boys forced the famous "Phoney" Smith and his comrades to shoot from all angles and distances with the result that their tosses were dropping over, under, around and everywhere but in.

Smith and Mallard, the only veterans on the Mercer squad, played basketball and the passing as well as the floor work of the little football star was worth watching but they could not crash the club defense.

Brewer, blonde running mate of Stephens, pushed the club star for honors, scoring 11 points to 14 for Pat. Bell continued to demonstrate that he is the best center the club has had for some time.

The game started with Stephens and Brewer dropping 'em in from all angles and before the half had more than reached the middle distance the club had pile up 18 points to two for the invaders. The shooting of Stephens gave the fans the thrills but the passing of the club was the fuse that set off the dynamite in Stephens' nimble hands. They were uncanny in getting the ball into the hole. McCrory and Ridgeway effectively stemmed the tide of points from the Orange and Black.

Pat took the spotlight by shooting the first four baskets for the club, then Brewer dropped one and Bell batted two in after McCrory and Brewer had rimmed the basket.

Mercer Bears First.

After Pat cooled off a bit Mercer scored its first blood when Mallard dropped one from the center of the court. Shortly after this Smith also hooked a couple of points from outside the circle and it seemed that the visitors might be playing an active part in the game. But this supposition was short lived for Brewer and McCrory dropped a couple more in rapid succession while the Bears were missing snow birds galore.

At the end of the half the die was cast. There was no chance for the invaders. They were being outpassed and outshot from every conceivable angle. The fact that the club didn't shoot 100 points is a tribute to the guarding of little Phoney Smith and his running mates. Never this season has the club broken out with such a passing and shooting attack as they showed Saturday night.

CADET QUINT BEATS CAGERS OF SAVANNAH

Flashing a passing attack beautiful to watch and hard to break up was almost the cause of Savannah High school basketball team downing the G. M. A. Cadets on the College Park floor Saturday. The Cadets stuck to their guns, however, and eked out a 40-to-37 victory over the Savannahans.

With but two minutes before the final gun sounded, Worley, of G. M. A., had come within one point of tying the score. Then Cadet Phillips took matters in his own hands. Time was flying. Seconds were precious. He secured the ball and flipped it through the air. Into the basket it went, rolled through and out the bottom. Two more points.

But this avaricious cadet was to do more. He got hold of the ball again and repeated. Two more points. Shortly afterward the game ended.

The Cadets looked like an improved club from the other games, which was due mostly to fine work by the two players mentioned. Sorrell, a sub guard, looked good in the time he was allowed in the fracas. He was the only sub sent in by either team.

Savannah's passing attack was built around Raines and Roberts, the forwards, and Todd, center. Roberts is a smooth-working forward, good passer and shooter. His 21 points made him high man of the game. He was guarded closely throughout, which made it the more remarkable. He could break through and get his points.

This week the Cadets will battle Fulton and Boys' High. Fulton plays Tuesday and Boys' High Thursday. On Saturday night they journey to Macon for a return engagement with Lanier's Poets.

'Flying Five' Cuts 46 Hours From Journey

Hays, Kas., January 28.—(AP) Airplanes today carried athletes of Wichita university from Wichita to Hays to keep a basketball date, doing in two hours what heretofore ordinarily took two days by train.

The distance is only 200 miles but the railroad connections are out-of-the-way. Figuring that in making the round trip by train they would lose four days in classes, the collegians hit upon the airplane idea.

Townspeople cheered the "flying cagers" as they climbed out of their five airplanes and shook out the kinks. None seemed affected but their cautious coach, L. H. Umnus, hurried them to a hotel where complete rest was prescribed.

"If we keep this up, the time will come when we won't have to take a nerve rest," said the coach. The Wichitans came for a game with Hays Teachers' college.

Bulldog Grid Work Begins On February 6

Harry Mehre Will Start First Work as Head Coach.

BY BOB SHERROD.

Athens, Ga., January 28.—February sixth is the date set by Coach Harry Mehre for the opening of Georgia's spring football training season. The gridiron activities will last for six weeks.

Seven letter men of 1927 will be missing when the football roll is called. The seven lost by graduation are Nash and Shiver, ends; Morris, tackle; Smith, guard; Broadnax, quarterback; Estes and McTigue, halfbacks.

The center and fullback positions are left intact, as well as one guard and one tackle. It is expected that the spring roster will be rather small as last year's candidates were the smallest in several years and the freshmen team of 1927 was light and weak.

Look to Rats.

However, several of the Rats may develop into varsity material, especially Waugh, Dickens and Maffett.

The spring activities will see Harry Mehre in his first appearance as head coach, he succeeding George Woodruff, who resigned at the close of the 1927 season.

The returning letter men are Boland and Lanford, center; Haley and Jacobson, guards; Lautzenhiser, Stelling and Frisbie, tackles; Palmer, end; Johnson, quarterback; Hooks and Dudley, halves; McCrary and Rothstein, fullbacks.

The 1928 team will be jointly captained by Roy Jacobson, guard, and Glenn Lautzenhiser, tackle.

WAR EAGLE COPS $50,000 TURF CLASSIC

New Orleans, January 28.—(AP)—War Eagle, one of the E. B. McLean's candidates for the $50,000 New Orleans handicap to be run February 3, clipped three-fifths of a second from the fair grounds track record for a mile and a furlong today by winning the Monus handicap for 3-year-olds and up, in 1:51 1-5. The old record was established in March, 1908, by Meclick.

War Eagle, with Jockey Nick Huff, up, won by half a length from Boon Companion. Bob Rogers was third. The event was for $2,500 added and was worth approximately $1,800 to the winner.

To holders of $2 mutuel tickets, War Eagle paid $8.74 to win, $5.08 to place and $3.48 to show. Boon Companion paid $10.66 to place and $4.78 to show, while Bob Rogers paid $7.28 to show.

Peltzer Is Rushed By Friends Upon Return From Cal.

Chicago, January 28.—(AP)—The claims of German club leaders and educational groups upon the time of Dr. Otto Peltzer, noted Teuton middle-distance runner, left him little time today to prepare for his debut in American athletics when he arrived to complete arrangements for his appearance in the Illinois Athletic club's annual indoor track meet February 10.

He did get a brief moment to exercise on the I. A. C. track as soon as he came, to work off the train stiffness of his journey from California. There was barely time to dress for a luncheon and then his program was full.

Dr. Peltzer had no comment to make on the ruling of the A. A. U. which sanctioned his participation in three meets next month, two in New York and one in Chicago.

A visit to half a dozen public schools in Chicago has been arranged for Dr. Peltzer on Monday. Despite the hardships of constant travel, he seemed in fine condition in his brief jog at the I. A. C. He seemed to revel in the sub-zero weather, cheerfully posing for photographers, bareheaded and clad in a worn leather jacket, sheepskin lined.

New Grid Relations.

A new gridiron relationship that promises to be interesting is that to be established next fall between Northwestern and Dartmouth universities when they meet on November 24 at Northwestern.

Tech High Smithies Meet Vienna's 'Wonder Quintet' On A. A. C. Court Tuesday

Mat Meanie To Wrestle MacDougal

Contos Signs Stasiak To Wrestle Scotchman on Thursday Mat Card.

"Scotty McDougal just imagines that he is the roughest wrestler in the world. He will change his mind after his match with Stanley Stasiak Thursday night," Ivan Mickailoff, the Russian grappler, declared yesterday, when he learned that McDougal meets Stasiak in the semi-windup of Matchmaker John Contos' show at the city auditorium Thursday night.

Mickailoff verified Matchmaker Contos' report that Stasiak is one of the biggest, fastest and roughest wrestlers in the game and says that the fans who dislike McDougal will enjoy the discomfort that he is bound to suffer Thursday night.

Stasiak weighs around 240 pounds, and the fact that he is fast is attributed to the fact that he is always working out against small and speedy wrestlers.

Jones Wrestles Indian.

In the main event of Thursday night's mat attraction Paul Jones will be pitted against Tom Marvin, an Osage Indian. Marvin is considered an excellent opponent for Jones in view of the fact that he is as fast and shifty as the youthful Tean.

A 30-minute match, between Mickailoff and Andy Brown, will open the show. Mickailoff in his two appearances here has shown the fans that he knows practically all there is to know about wrestling. He came very near beating Scotty McDougal and he gave Jones plenty of trouble for 30 minutes or more.

Texan Popular.

Judging from the applause accorded him by the fans, Jones' popularity in Atlanta increases with every appearance that he makes here. He was given a rousing ovation a week or so ago when he pinned the Russian after being in trouble himself for several minutes.

Jones is progressing rapidly in the development of his famous hook scissors and once he clamps that hold on an opponent, the latter has very little chance of escaping and even when he gets up the pressure of Jones' legs has removed much of his resistance.

Tickets for the Thursday night show will be placed on sale Monday at Chess' place, the Piedmont Hatters and at the Piedmont hotel cigar stand.

TARHEEL CAGE SQUAD FACING TOUGH GAMES

Chapel Hill, N. C., January 28.—The University of North Carolina basketeers will have two opportunities next week to unravel the tangled skeins of the state championship ball. Facing North Carolina State in Raleigh on Wednesday night and meeting Duke's Devil quint in the tin can here on Saturday, the Tarheels have a chance to plunge into the lead of the "Big Five" pennant scramble.

Keen rivals of the university in all branches of sports, both Duke and State are slated to give the Tarheels tough games. The two contests mark the first of a two-game series with each team and there is no basis of comparison except comparative scores. There again the comparison is hard to make. All three have won from Wake Forest and Duke has a victory over State.

Coach Jim Ashmore, Tarheel cage mentor, will pin his faith on the brilliant team play of his veteran five. Built around such outstanding players as Captain Pinky Morris and Bill Dodderer, both All-Southern guards, Carolina has just one defeat against her in intercollegiate circles. That was a one point loss to Tulane on a Christmas holiday invasion of New Orleans, but the Tarheels beat the Louisiana outfit twice.

Despite the veteran nucleus, Tarheel stock will take a rise if Billy Vanstory gets back in shape for action. The elongated scoring ace has been held out of all games during the past ten days with a severe attack of asthma. Vanstory's absence is a heavy loss at any time and especially so when "Red" Price, letter forward, has been out with a crippled foot since December.

With these two tall forwards on the bench, Coach Ashmore will have to depend on the same five men who so decisively whipped Virginia and Wake Forest. Rufus Hackney and tiny Henry Satterfield are slated for the forward berths. Carr Purser will probably get the pivot call and Captain Morris and Bill Dodderer will form the last line of defense. This five in itself is a powerful threat, but it leaves Carolina lacking in experienced reserves.

Woodberry Quint Beats Lucy Cobb

The Woodberry hall basketball team added a victory to its list by defeating the squad from Lucy Cobb, of Athens, here on the Y. W. C. A. court by the score of 22 to 14.

The game was hard fought from start to finish and the Woodberry girls were forced to play their best in order to win.

Lineup and Summary.

WOODBERRY (22)	Pos.	(14) LUCY COBB
Pearson (13)	l.f.	(14) Parmisino
R. Bush (7)	r.f.	Casta
Snoup	c.	Clemens

Great Battle Expected When Leading Quints Meet Here.

Tuesday night prep basketball fans will be agog. Coming to Atlanta is Vienna's "wonder team," which was runner-up in the national high school tournament at Chicago last winter. The middle Georgia lads play basketball which is hard to beat, but Tech High Smithies hope to beat it.

The attempt will be made Tuesday night on the floor of the Atlanta Athletic club, where a large crowd is expected to gather for this auspicious prep encounter.

Hold Many Titles.

The Viennans have won numerous titles in the course of their mad gallop towards national honors which were in their grasp but slipped away. The boys won the Cotton States tournament at Auburn last winter and the Georgia state high school crown in Athens at a tournament of the 12 district champions held yearly.

This year only two games have been lost by the woodermen. Both of these to a Mercer freshman team which has in its ranks one Peggy Campbell, who led Vienna last year and was named All-American forward. It was his work that led to the defeat of his old prep school.

The Smithies, local product, coached by Gabe Tolbert, have dropped thus far one game, that in Columbus to the high school quintet of that city. Here on local courts the Tech High gang has swept through practically all available opposition, except Boys' High. A game was scheduled last Friday between the two, but called off when a row over eligibility of a Tech High man could not be settled.

Have Veteran Team.

The Smithies have a veteran team. Every man playing on the first string five this season was right there last year. Outside of Campbell's loss, no others have been suffered by Vienna.

The members of both teams have had plenty of experience and play good basketball. That means a good game for the local fans next Tuesday evening.

A return game will be played in Vienna on Friday evening. Originally the game was set for Tuesday in Vienna and Friday here, but due to the fact that the professional game will be played here on Friday night the dates were just reversed.

R.O.T.C. TITLE WON BY NAVY AT GA. TECH

BY ROGER PAGE.

In the hardest game on Grant field since the varsity boys put away their uniforms, the Navy eleven defeated the Coast Artillery team Saturday afternoon by the score of 6 to 0, and thus won the championship of the R. O. T. C. at Georgia Tech.

After working the ball from midfield to the 10-yard line, Wiggins, Navy halfback, who has been shining in all games the Navy has played, carried the pigskin over the goal line of the Coast Artillery, scoring the only touchdown of the game. A bad pass from the center prevented the extra point.

Taking advantage of all the many breaks, the seagoing outfit had the artillery boys backed up on their own line several times, Hart having to kick from behind his goal line on two different occasions.

The Artillery made a desperate rally in the last few minutes of the game. DeFore received a pass and ran some distance before he was downed. It seemed as if the Artillery was going to score when the whistle stopped the struggle. Defore and Hart played a fine game for the losers, the line plunges of Hart being nothing short of the efforts of a varsity fullback.

Much credit for winning the championship goes to the two coaches of the Navy squad, Warner Mizell and Jimmy Frink. Both of these boys have worked untiringly building up a winning team.

LaGrange Cagers Take Double Bill

LaGrange, Ga., January 28.—LaGrange high defeated Manchester high in a twin bill here, the local boys winning 30 to 19 and the LaGrange girls winning over the Manchester girls 20 to 15.

Freeman, local forward, with 11 points, was high point scorer in the boys' game. Clegg was high scorer for Manchester with 8 points.

Bessie Duke led the LaGrange girls in scoring with 11 points, while Durkett with 11 points led the Manchester girls in scoring.

Bob Is Made High Official Of Golf Assn.

Atlantan Will Serve on Several Important Committees.

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Bob by Jones has been given a place on three of the most important subcommittees of the United States Golf association.

Announcement today of the 1928 committees make up reveals that Jones, who was elected to the executive committee at the association's annual meeting early this month, will serve on the groups handling the selection of courses, membership and reinstatement, and implements and the ball.

Numerous changes are made in the chairmanships of other committees. Herbert H. Ramsey, newly-elected vice president, relinquished the chairmanship of both the membership and amateur status committee. In the first he is succeeded by Prescott S. Bush, of New York, and in the second by Rodman E. Griscom, also of New York. Mr. Ramsey, however, retains his post at the head of the championship committee.

Wheeler Elected.

Frederick S. Wheeler, of New York, becomes the new head of the rules committee, succeeding the late Howard F. Whitney.

The selection of courses body will be headed by Findlay S. Douglas, of New York, who succeeds Melvin A. Traylor, of Chicago, new president of the association. Ganson Depew, of Buffalo, N. Y., succeeds James D. Standish, Jr., of Detroit, as chairman of the public links section committee. John D. Ames, of Princeton university, becomes the new head of the committee on intercollegiate affairs, headed last year by Edward S. Stimpson, of Newark, N. J.

Serving with Mr. Wheeler on the rules committee will be James Frances Burke, J. Frederic Byers, Robert A. Gardner, Cornelius S. Lee, Wynant D. Vanderpool, George H. Walker, Alan D. Wilson, William C. Fownes, Jr., Mr. Driscom and Mr. Douglas.

On the amateur status committee will be Mr. Griscom, Mr. Bush, H. C. Mackall, Roger D. Lapham and Harry Potter.

Mr. Ames' associates on the intercollegiate committee will be Roland MacKenzie, of Brown, and Charles Procter, of Darmouth.

PETRELS BEGIN PRACTICE FOR MERCER GAME

Coach Harry Robertson and his squad of Oglethorpe basketeers return from Augusta this morning, completing their week's trip through South Carolina.

The Petrels' initial invasion of foreign soil could not be termed as wholly successful. On the tour, which was made in cars, the Birds were able to win only half of the games scheduled. Charleston College, Wofford and Augusta "Y" were the victims to fall before the attack of the Oglethorpe cagers, while Furman, Presbyterian College and Citadel proved their superiority over the local quintet.

As a result of this trip Coach Robertson and his basketball proteges, although not as successful as expected, were able to get acquainted with the strongest teams in the S. I. A. A., which will be an impetus to them when the annual tournament is held in Chattanooga in February.

The Birds will settle down to a strenuous training program Monday in preparation for the next foes on their schedule, the most important of them being Mercer.

This Lad Hasn't Any Trouble In Shooting Goals

Sherman, Texas, January 28.—(AP) J. D. Ballard, sophomore center on the Austin college basketball team here, is seven feet three inches tall and can reach the basket without jumping.

Under the rules the hoop must be hung "in a horizontal plane ten feet above the floor." Ballard's upward reach is just ten feet and three-quarters of an inch. Instead of having to shoot, he simply rolls 'em in off the tips of his fingers.

When Ballard takes the center of the court against a normal-sized center the jump for the tip-off is no contest. An ordinary six-footer stands about as high as the big boy's shoulder.

Ballard comes from Commerce, Texas. He is 23 years old and thinks at last he has stopped growing. Built in proportion to his phenomenal height, Ballard weighs 215 pounds, has a 36-inch waist, a 17-inch neck and a reach from finger-tip to tip, with arms extended, of seven feet three inches, exactly the same as his height. He wears a 7 1-2 hat and a 13 shoe.

Starred With Old Eli.

Louisiana State will have an old Yale star to guide its football destines next fall. Mike Donahue, who played for the Bulldogs way back in 1904, recently was signed for the job.

Trains for Derby.

Kentucky is beginning early in its campaign to win the annual derby this year. The favorite of the green grass Republic, already is in training at Louisville.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS

"Shootin' Dogs" Get Chance.

If there is any good reason why vacations should end we are ready to listen to the reason, but give warning in advance that our attention to the explanation will not be close. In fact, we can think of no legitimate reason whatever and doubt that anyone could be convincing on the matter.

Be that as it may, however, all things must end, even vacations, and with the ending comes the beginning of another year of basketball, baseball, football, golf, and all the rest of the things that go to make the life of a sports scribe miserable.

The fact that we spent part of our vacation pursuing the Bob White quail in the environs of Waynesboro may not be of interest to the readers of this column, but a discovery that we made while in Waynesboro holds something of interest to all dog lovers.

Sim Bell, president of the Georgia Field Trials association, has declared himself on a matter which has occupied an important place in the minds of all field trial followers for many years. Sim has declared that he will advocate added stakes in the Georgia field trials of 1928 for "shooting dogs."

It is never difficult to hear the man who owns a shooting dog which is not entered in the trials say, "These field trial dogs are pretty to look at but I can take my old 'shootin' dog' and find more birds with him than any three of these trial dogs can find in the same length of time."

If the plan advocated by Sim goes through, these hunters will have an opportunity to prove their assertions next year. His plan is to either precede or follow the trials with stakes open to all shooting dogs and in these stakes the dogs will be judged less on class and more on bird work.

It is believed by some that field trial entries have to be registered, but such is not the case. Every so often a cold blood comes along that sets the world afire, but that is very seldom. This class of dogs is eligible to all of the trials but most hunters hesitate to enter their dogs when they are not trained to the form of the trial races.

There is no doubt that many of the trial dogs are trained too much for class and not enough for bird sense. Many of them are never shot over prior to their entrance into the trials and it is only natural that some of the dogs should be mechanical in their actions before the judges.

In developing a "big going" dog it is quite natural that in some cases the striving for speed will eclipse the bird sense. The only way to get this sense back in the strain is to breed to a good hunter. Thee hunting dog trials should and will bring to light a lot of cold bloods and many dogs eligible to registration from which may be selected material for breeding.

After all, the purpose of the field trials is the development of strains in shooting dogs and a field trial dog is supposed to be nothing but an excellent hunting dog. It is entirely probable that the staging of hunting dog trials each year will do much toward the development of the strains. President Bell has advocated the hunting dog trials before and it has been decided by the board that the additional time could not be found in the one week. Sim has that figured out this year and here's hoping he meets with success.

Sou. Amateur Site Decided by March 1

Ballot To Be Cast by Directors of Southern Golf Association—Dallas Makes Strong Bid.

BY WHITNER CARY.

Where will the 1928 southern amateur golf championship be held?

During these blustering days when frost has nipped the grass on the putting greens and winter's chill furnishes new alibies for the many hooks and drives, the thoughts of golfers and near-golfers turn to the battleground for hte Dixie title.

Whether the plains of Texas, the hills of Memphis, the flats of New Orleans or the surrounding terrain of some other southern city will echo the call for fore will not be known until the latter part of February or the first of March.

At that time H. F. Smith, president of the Southern Golf association, will announce from his office in Nashville which city of those making bids for the event has been successful.

The award is decided by ballot cast by the 17 directors of the association. The name of each city making a bid for the event is listed and duly sent out to each of the directors with a request that they make a selection. The city receiving the largest number of votes is selected.

Dallas Bids Strongest.

While there will probably be several cities to make application for the 1928 event, it appears at this writing that Dallas is putting out the most concentrated effort for the tournament. Whether the fact that the Texas city is far removed from many of the big golfing centers of the south will hurt its chances of landing the championship is not known. Two towns which may make bids for the Dixie classic are New Orleans and Birmingham. Both these cities are in easy reach of the golfers from this section and probably would offer greater appeal to the south Atlanta and middle-southern group than would the Texas city. However it is understood that Dallas is going to make a very strong bid.

Since 1903, the year of the birth of the Southern Golf association, a body that comprises all the southern cities, Texas has had the event but once. That was in 1916 when Dallas played host. That championship was won by Reuben Bush, the crack New Orleans player who defeated the old veteran, Commodore Bryan Heard, of Houston, in a hot final round match.

Atlanta Out.

While nothing is definite on the subject, it is hardly likely that Atlanta will make a bid. The Gate City has held the event within its borders no less than four times, which tops all other sister cities. The last time it was held here in 1922.

While the association follows no definite order of rotation in awarding the tournament, it has generally been the policy to give each section consideration.

Since 1022 when Atlanta played host the fixture has been held in Birmingham, Louisville, Asheville, Memphis and Charlotte in the order named. New Orleans has not been the scene of battle since 1919.

Should the tournament be awarded to some city with a location like Birmingham, Nashville, New Orleans or Memphis it is certain that most of the good golfers from the Carolinas and Georgia will compete. But should the award go to Dallas it is highly questionable whether this section would furnish much competition.

30 COUNTRIES IN '28 DAVIS CUP MATCHES

Paris, January 30.—(AP)—The record breaking list of entries for the 1928 Davis cup tennis competition was increased to 30 nations today by the receipt of two additional challenges, one from Canada in the American zone, and the other from Sweden in the European zone.

The number of challenging countries now in the field for the famous trophy, to be defended this year by France for the first time, is five more than in any previous year since the Davis cup first was contested for in 1900 by England and the United States alone.

Only 25 Last Year.

Last year there were 25 challenges, including 21 in the European and four in the American zone. This year the totals are 24 and six.

Of the 1927 European group France is automatically out of the preliminaries, while Rumania and India have not yet challenged. These losses have been more than offset, however, by the entries of Australia, Argentina, Chile, the Philippines, Norway and Finland.

The United States and China are the addition to the American zone contests, which also include Japan, Mexico, Cuba and Canada.

There is still time for additional entries, the list does not close until next Tuesday. The draw is scheduled Thursday. Play will start early in the spring, with the challenge round fixed for July 27, 28, 29.

English Golf Fans Win.

English golf fans who condemned Bobby Jones for accepting the gift of a $50,000 home from friends and admirers, are believed to be the cause of Bobby's decision to decline the gift after having accepted it at a banquet last fall. The U. S. G. A. announced that his amateur status would not be affected by accepting the magnificent home but Jones was not influenced by this decision.

Jackets Win Over Bulldog Five, 36 to 35

Player and Heeke Star as Techmen Come From Behind.

BY WHITNER CARY.
Constitution Staff Correspondent.

Athens, Ga., January 28—Making one of the most sensational rallies witnessed this season, the Tech basketball team came out of the shadows of defeat in the last three minutes of play tonight against the Georgia five and by a sensational burst of inspired play won a hard-fought game by the score of 36 to 35.

When the watch showed but three minutes left for these ancient rivals to continue the titanic struggle the score board showed Tech trailing by the count of 35 to 26. With the entire Georgia team playing a splendid brand of defensive ball after a rather slow beginning it looked as if the margin of those nine precious points would be sufficient to send the Jackets back to Atlanta with the second defeat of of the season at the hands of the Bulldogs ringing in their tired ears.

Jackets Rally.

But like the thoroughbred who is willing to give of his all in that last desperate stretch drive, the Jackets started a rally that not only enabled them to score 10 points but which saw them hold the Bulldogs scoreless during those last three minutes.

To Frank Player, the sensational forward of the Jackets, goes the largest laurel wreath of the evening. It was this brilliant performer who caged no less than three baskets during those feverish trio of minutes that brought defeat to the Athenians. These points plus a neat goal from Heeke brought the count to Georgia 35, Tech 34. Minutes had now been reduced to seconds.

With both teams playing as only two such rivals as Tech and Georgia can play, Red Williamson, who had been substituted late in the game, found a slight opening in the Bulldog defense and like a flash the oval had found the loop for the goal that spelled victory for Tech. The last 30 seconds saw Georgia try desperately to forge ahead, but the Tech team, with victory now in sight, presented a brick wall.

Off To Slow Start.

During the first half Georgia was slow to get going. Although getting the tip off repeatedly the Bulldogs were unable to take advantage of this and were never in front. At the intermission Tech was leading 19 to 15.

It was a different story in the second chapter. Quickly swinging into action, the Bulldogs, led by Palmer, who was easily the outstanding Georgia player during the evening, began to find the basket from all angles. After 11 minutes of play a long shot from Palmer knotted the score at 26-all. Here the Bulldogs began their most brilliant attack of the evening and by splendid passing and shooting coupled with good defensive play ran their total to 35 while holding the opposition absolutely scoreless. It was at this point that Tech, seemingly beaten, rose to the occasion to flash its brilliant finish.

Player, Heeke, George Star.

As mentioned before Player was the outstanding performer for Tech. Heeke also contributed some good work, while George's defensive play was of a high order.

Palmer and Martin deserve special mention for Georgia.

Although the game was hard-fought from beginning to end, there was an absence of rough play. Scrappy Sullivan deserves much praise for the splendid way in which he handled the game.

GEORGIA RATS BEAT TECH, 35-26.

Athens, Ga., January 28.—In the afternoon game preceding the Tech-Georgia fracas, the Georgia freshmen won an exciting melee from the Tech rats by a 35 to 26 score.

The Georgia underclass men trailed 15 to 14 at the half, but after the half way pistol quickly overcame the slight lead and gradually forged ahead, leading nine points at the end of the game.

McGaughy, Maffett and Reader led the Athenians attack while Tippin, right forward, was the big gun for the Jackets.

LLOYD HAHN WINS EASILY IN MILE RACE

Boston, January 28.—(AP)—Lloyd Hahn, of the Boston Athletic association, America's premier middle distance runner, ran his first mile of the season and raced a picked field into the ground in the feature event of the William C. Prout memorial games staged here tonight by the Massachusetts council, K. of C.

The time of four minutes, 25 1-5 seconds gave him victory by 60 yards over little Jim Reid, of Harvard, his nearest competitor, as well as permanent possession of the James M. Curley trophy.

Allison Willis, of the New York A. C., former Bates star, was third, while Leo Larivee, of the Chicago A. A., a former winner, dropped out two laps from the finish.

Hahn ran a head race all the way after the second lap.

Conference With Coolidge Fails To Untangle Service Row

Jackets Drop Ohio State Baseball Nine

Faculty Approves Cut; 21 Conference Games on Revised Schedule.

BY ROGER PAGE.

The Georgia Tech baseball schedule for the 1928 season has just been approved by the faculty of this institution. At their recent meeting, it was thought that the proposed schedule, as announced sometime ago unofficially, carried too many engagements. After some discussion, it was finally decided that if two games could be dropped, the schedule would be approved.

In order to play as many conference games as possible, as has been the custom of the Tech coaches for some time, it was decided to cancel the two games with the Ohio State nine, which has been playing the Jackets for a number of years while on its southern invasion. The Staters, however, hold a contract to play Tech in Atlanta on March 23 and 24.

Oglethorpe was then consulted, and at a conference between Frank Anderson and Tech officials, it was decided to have the Ohio State team keep the dates for their appearance in Atlanta, but play Oglethorpe instead of Tech. The Ohio State association at once wired to the effect that this arrangement would be satisfactory with them.

25 Games On Card.

The schedule as approved by the Georgia Tech faculty carries a total of 25 games for the coming season. Of this number, there are only four which will not be conference encounters, these being two games each with Oglethorpe and Mercer. Both of these institutions will have good ball clubs this season, and much interest is shown in the announcement of these games in Atlanta.

As has been the custom since athletic relations were resumed with the University of Georgia, Tech will play four games with the Bulldogs. The first two will be played in Athens on May 18 and 19. A week later, the two will cross bats again here, probably at Spiller's field.

Three Road Trips.

The Yellow Jackets will entrain three times on short trips this season, Auburn, Alabama and Georgia being played on their own fields. No long train rides will be taken, however, the team playing only on weekends.

Official practice will begin some time early in February, regardless of the weather. The large basketball gym is used by Coach Clay's men on cold days. This building being steam heated affords an excellent place for warming-up exercises, as well as the pitchers' starting off point.

The official schedule, as approved by the Tech faculty, is:

March 16—Oglethorpe.
March 17—Oglethorpe.
March 30—Clemson.

Cattell Is Winner Of Florida Title

St. Augustine, Fla., January 28.—(AP)—Jock Cattell, 17-year-old Jacksonville boy, won the Florida east coast amateur golf championship here today by defeating Joe Capo, of St. Augustine, 7 and 5 in the 36-hole final round.

The same steady play that he had shown throughout the tournament, tying for the medal in the qualifying round and then winning it in a playoff yesterday, carried the youth to victory over his more seasoned opponent despite a cold, blustering wind that swept the course throughout the day.

He was forced to overcome stern opposition all the way through the tournament, but his game today, as previously, could not be denied. His drives were about on a par with those of the long hitting Capo, his approach shots were a bit the better of the two, but it was in putting that he far outclassed his opponent.

Ingersoll Is Winner Of Belleair Tourney

Belleair, Fla., January 28.—(AP)—Harold Ingersoll, Colorado Springs, won the annual Belleair Country club January tournament today by defeating DeWitt Balch, medalist, Cincinnati, 3 and 2 in the 36-hole final round.

The pair finished the morning 18 all even, Ingersoll coming from behind after a severe setback at the 11th and squaring the count on the 18th green. The finalists were still all even at the 32nd, but Ingersoll's spurt, which won him the next three holes caught Balch napping.

Y-Church Loop Elects New President

Managers of the teams comprising the leagues of the Y-Church Athletic association will assemble at the Y. M. C. A. 6 p. m., Tuesday night to elect a president for the coming months.

This meeting was made necessary by the resignation of Trammell Scott, who has ably guided this association for the past two years. Mr. Scott is tendering his resignation through press of business.

This meeting will be the final opportunity to register new basketball players and the races in the two leagues will depend on the new players who are now eligible to participate in the coming games. No team as yet has shown inclination to make a runaway race for the flag in either league and all are still in the fight for first division honors.

FROSH UPSET DOPE; DEFEAT EMORY MEDS

The freshmen supplied a real sensation at Emory Saturday by soundly licking the sophomore Meds, 24-20, last year's champs and the favorites to repeat. By this victory the rats become the favorites to take the crown dropped by the losers. By close guarding, fast passing and accurate shooting, the winners did what no other team has been able to do for two years.

The champs were helpless before the fight of the rats. Crawford, alone, showed the form that has won victory after victory for the Meds. He was high with 12 points, for the rats, V. Moore, a newcomer, was the star, shooting 10 points besides playing a beautiful floor game. J. Heard, with fast work on the floor besides his six points, was a big star.

In the other games, the freshmen Meds remained tied with the Rats by handing the sophs their third straight defeat, 20-14. The sophs continued to show lack of teamwork and inability to locate the basket.

The juniors showed a reversal of form to gain their first victory over the Theologs, 28-10. The Preachers seemed to have shot their bolt against the Meds Monday and were completely outclassed.

With Heard, last week's leader idle, Crawford, of the Meds, became the leading scorer, with 34 points He is closely pressed by Center, of the freshmen Meds; Heard, of the Freshmen, and Lee, of the Juniors. Lagomarsino, another of the leaders, was also idle Saturday.

MISS ORCUTT ENTERS FLA. GOLF MEETS

St. Augustine, Fla., January 28.—Miss Maureen Orcutt, blond-haired and sturdy New Jersey links star, is coming to Florida again in the next few weeks to play in the major tournaments scheduled for members of her sex. Primarily, she is coming to defend the Florida East Coast championship won at St. Augustine a year ago, according to a letter received here today by Ray McCarthy, director of sports exploitation for the Florida East Coast system.

In her letter Miss Orcutt indicated that she will probably play also at Palm Beach for the Florida state title, but stated that she has decided definitely to play in the big tournament here March 6 to 10. The East Coast championship carries with it possession for one year of the handsome Mrs. W. R. Kenan, Jr., trophy. In 1925, Miss Glenna Collett won the honor; the next year it went to Miss Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, and in 1927 Miss Orcutt carried off the prize.

Miss Orcutt was a finalist for the women's national championship last fall, going into the deciding round with Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn, of Kansas City. The New York girl, still under 20, is one of the most powerful of iron players, and she is considered the longest driver among the women players. Her place at the top of the list has been established by her sterling performances in the last two years, during which she has been a winner or runner-up in nearly every tournament of importance.

The showing of Miss Orcutt in the St. Augustine classic in March will be watched intently by experts all over the country, as presaging the brand of game she is likely to produce the coming season in the north. Miss Orcutt has won the eastern title, the big medal play event among the women's tournaments; twice she has won the Metropolitan championship and has been eminently successful in various other competitions.

Bermuda Tourney To Start Tuesday

Hamilton, Bermuda, January 28.—(United News.)—The annual women's Bermuda golf championship will start Tuesday with several of the leading players of the United States and Canada entered.

Miss Helen Payson, of Portland, Me., winner of the Berthellyn cup tournament and the Canadian ladies' championship last year; Miss Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto, former Canadian ladies' champion; Mrs. Dorothy Higbie Tracey, of the Canoe Brook club, N. J., and Mrs. M. E. Lund, of San Francisco, one of the leading players of the Pacific coast, are among the entrants.

MaysonPredictsRough Battle at Club Tuesday

Matchmaker Confident Main Go Boys Will Stage Real Scrap Here.

His prediction crowned with success last Tuesday night when he stated that either Stiles Attaway or Tommy O'Rourke would never be in an upright position when the tenth round was reached, Matchmaker Mayson, of the Ringside arena, stated Saturday that he would like to go on record as declaring it his absolute belief that "Bozo" Hambright, of Birmingham, or Red Wilson, of New Orleans, will have his pins knocked from under him in the forthcoming tussle Tuesday evening.

"Hambright is a heavy puncher," says Mayson, "and Wilson brings along a record that bodes ill for the Alabama gent.

"In his two bouts here, with Wood Pace and Jimmy Lane, both of whom he whipped, Hambright looked awfully good to me, especially in a hitting way.

Believes Him Good.

"I've heard considerable of Wilson and have every reason to believe he's as good a clouter as Hambright. When two boys like that come together, something's bound to snap, just as it was, and did, in the Attaway-O'Rourke scrap."

This is the ninth show attempted by the Ringside management and with the crowds growing in numbers at each succeeding offering, it is probable that Tuesday's events, aggregating 30 rounds, will be attended by the largest gathering yet.

The club is continuing its policy of staging carefully arranged matches between young men of equal weight and as near equal ability as it is possible to determine.

Hence the signing of Johnny Harper and Battling Stein, lightweights, for the semi-final of eight rounds; Carter Morgan and Johnny Runyon, feathers, for six rounds, and Jackie Fezanda and Battling Athens for the opening six. They aggregate 30 rounds of as fancy a card as Mayson has offered, he firmly believes.

Tickets can be purchased Monday at Hack Eibel's billiard parlor.

ALL-STAR FIVE DEFEATS DRUID HILLS, 31 TO 29

In a close, hard-fought game in which the winner was not decided until the last 30 seconds of play, the Epworth All-Stars defeated the fast Druid Hills Presbyterians last night at Wesley court, by the score of 31 to 29. The All-Stars, trailing at the end of the half by the score of 21 to 12, showed a reversal of form and won out in the last few minutes of play. The losers were handicapped in the last four minutes of play by having to finish the game with only four men, Caveny and Patton, stars of the team, having been removed on personal fouls. Had these boys been able to finish the game or had the losers enough substitutes to complete a five-man team, the score might have been different.

Captain Martin, of the All-Stars, was again in form and led his team in scoring with 13 markers. Richardson, All-Star guard, turned in his usual good game as did Forster, running guard. Forster found the rims for seven counters. Caveny, Druid Hills forward, was the outstanding man on the floor. This boy was high-point man of the game, shooting 14 points. Caveny was all over the floor on both offense and defense, playing a splendid game and being an inspiration to his mates with his brilliant performance. Langford also played a nice game for the losers.

In the girls' preliminary the St. John girls defeated the girls' All-Star outfit 20 to 17 in a close, hard-fought game. Miss S. Barber, of the winners, was high-point scorer in this game, ringing the baskets for 14 points. This was the first time that the girls' All-Star outfit has lost a game.

Sigma Chis Fall Behind at Emory

The dash of the Sigma Chi team for first place in the Hare and Hound races at Emory received a serious check in the past week, when only one point was gained on the Beta Kan team, the leaders. Poor running in Friday's race lost the advantage of five points gained in the first two races.

Louis Bates continued to draw away in the individual competition by annexing three more first places. Westenberger held second place. They are followed in order by Fullerton, Michaux and Jacobs. Nunan, who started late, is rapidly rising in the standing.

In Monday's race the Sigs gained four points with a first, third and fourth. Westenberger won the race, while Bates was a Hare. Nunan was second, Michaux third and Jacobs fourth. On Wednesday the winners overcame a big lead by Jacobs in the last hundred yards. Michaux was third. On Friday Bates again being out of the race, Westenberger was first, Roberts, an old Tech High star, was second, followed by Michaux and Fullerton.

GENE TUNNEY BEGINS WORK ON MONDAY

Miami Beach, Fla., January 28.—(United Press)—Tex Rickard and Gene Tunney gave out some cheering news tonight for those who crave to see action in which the heavyweight championship will figure.

Tunney announced he would begin active training Monday morning under the guidance of Lou Fink.

Conferences were announced for next week between Tunney and Rickard in which the matter of 1928 bouts for the titlist will be discussed.

Other cheerful news was that Billy Gibson, manager of the champion, will arrive here Wednesday ready to start some kind of a ballyhoo.

With all the reports, rumors, hints and announcements taken together, it looked here tonight as if the initial 1928 bout of the heavyweight titlist is not too far off and that his opponent might be named shortly.

Having Good Time.

Rickard has been here a week, but has not dogged Tunney. Both have gone about playing and vacationing regardless of the presence of the other at this resort.

Rickard has indicated here that some important announcement concerning the proposed bouts in the heavyweight division might be expected before February 1. That leaves him three days in which to discuss with Tunney the whereofs.

Some members of the Tunney camp at the beach have predicted on the quiet that Jack Dempsey will be his 1928 opponent. Other reports are that Rickard had Jack Delaney or Sharkey as the ace up his sleeve.

New York is being heard of most for Tunney's next go; although Chicago is talked about quite loudly.

Tunney is in his usual good physical trim, but his work will begin in earnest next Monday when Fink takes him in hand.

The champion is brown as a berry from lolling about the beach. Fink said tonight that Tunney would drift easily into a more strenuous routine.

NEW YORK AWAITS WORD FROM MIAMI.

New York, January 28.—After a comparatively dull week, boxing circles here eagerly awaited word from Miami Beach, Fla., where an announcement is expected in the next few days concerning Gene Tunney's defense of his million-dollar title.

On Wednesday John Chapman, new general manager of the Garden, will post the $100,000 necessary to bind Tunney to his contract with Rickard.

The first elimination bout to determine an opponent for Tommy Loughran, light-heavyweight champion, who is now on a South American cruise, will be held Friday night in Madison Square Garden, when Mike McTigue, former titleholder, meets Leo Lomski, the Aberdeen, Wash., assassin, who almost knocked out Loughran in the first round of their recent bout.

The winner will meet Jimmy Slattery, of Buffalo, with the survivor scheduled to box Loughran in March.

Florida 'Gators Face Tough Tilts

University of Florida, Gainesville, January 28.—With the scheduling of a game here February 3 with the crack Cincinnati "Y" five, a pair of tough battles faced the Florida varsity cagers when they take up court play following mid-term examinations. The fast Davis-Elkins quintet will appear here February 4.

The Gators closed out the first lap of their 1928 schedule Saturday night with a victory over Rollins college, their first triumph of the season.

February will see Cowell's basketeers busily engaged. Following the Davis-Elkins game, the Floridians embark for South Carolina to meet the Gamecocks in a pair of tilts, and the Clemson Tigers in a like number of games. The road trip will wind up on February 10 with a lone clash with Furman.

The University of Miami will meet the Gators here on February 15.

A second road trip, embracing Mercer, a pair of games with Alabama, and a brace of return tilts with Auburn, will conclude the 1928 season, a schedule with 20 games.

Florida's basketball hopes soar considerably for the last lap of the grind with George Perrine, Miami boy, and a center of much ability, eligible to play. The Gators have been week at this position all season.

Marquette Track Schedule Tough

Milwaukee, Wis., January 28.—Although a short vacation has been granted just at present for final examinations and second semester registration, a squad of 30 athletes has been in training for the 1928 Marquette university track team for the last three weeks, and Coach C. M. Jennings' youngsters are shaping up well for their heavy campaign.

Dual meets have been arranged for the winter and spring calendars with Notre Dame, Michigan State, Bradley Tech and the Army, and the Hilltoppers also will compete in the Illinois relays, Michigan State relays, Central intercollegiate indoor and outdoor meets, Drake relays, Kansas relays and the national intercollegiates. The schedule was arranged by Mr. Jennings, who is athletic director at Marquette.

The Marquette squad is not as large as Coach Jennings had expected, and the team will be strong in some departments but not well-balanced all around. Although some of the men are good for first places in many of the programs in which they compete, there is not enough material to insure seconds and thirds for high team scoring.

PLAYS HERE FRIDAY

Pete Barry, Guard on the New York Celtics Team.

New York Celtics, Famous Pro Basketball Team, Meet Chattanooga Rail-Lites Here Friday Night.

Atlanta basketball fans, of whom there are many, if they so desire will get a chance to witness a professional cage team in action next Friday night at the auditorium when New York Celtics, pro basketball champions of the world, play the Chattanooga Rail-Lites, strong independent team.

Playing on the Celtic team are numerous vererans. It is said that most members have played together for over 15 years. The Celtics have become rather familiar with the ball, having associated with it for such a long period of time and according to those who have watched them play, have the disagreeable, although pleasing to them, habit of making teams against whom they play look much like hams.

Heading the Celtic organization is Nat Holman, said to be the greatest player in the game today. He has played basketball for such a long time that it has become almost a second nature and his performances on the court are rather interesting to behold.

Last season, in the American professional basketball league, the Celtics won the championship and then copped the world's title by beating the Cincinnati Rosenblums three straight games.

They are back in the title chase this winter and are taking advantage of a four days' layover between games to make this southern tour which includes Nashville and Chattanooga. In Chattanooga the pros play the Rail-Lites the night before coming to Atlanta.

DIAMOND DROLLERY

A year ago the baseball world in general had not heard of Frank Hogan. Big, raw-boned, inexperienced, but full of pep, he joined the Boston Braves for a tryout and remained to become the team's first-string receiver.

Frank and Jimmy Walsh, outfielder, were sent to the Giants recently in the odd deal that shunted Rogers Hornsby, outstanding player of the league, to Boston.

When the news of the trade was carried to Hogan, he pondered the matter a moment and then remarked:

"Well, that's one deal the Giants got the better of."

Andy Cohen, young Jewish star to be tried out by the New York Giants in the spring, was with Buffalo in the International league last season. He tells this one on himself:

He was sent in to pinch hit for Eddie Murphy. The announcer, through his megaphone, yowled out the message:

"Cohen batting for Murphy! Cohen batting for Murphy!"

Over behind the first-base line a big truck driver yawned, arose, picked up his hat and coat and started for the exit. And as he did so he yelled out in a voice that put the megaphone man to shame:

"Flanagan leaving the park! Flanagan leaving the park!"

N. Y. COMMISH TO FINE SHY PUGS $5,000

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Headline battlers who attempt to "run out" of matches in New York in the future will not escape without receiving at least one blow.

The state athletic commission has decided to level a $5,000 "sock" in the form of an appearance forfeit at the treasury of any fighter who declares himself unable to go through with a match on the scheduled date. The fistic fathers announced that legitimate cases of illness or injury, substantiated by its own physicians, will be dealt with "leniently."

This action followed the appearance of Charley Harvey, manager of Tom Heeney, before the commission to protest against Jack Delaney risking injury in bouts scheduled before the French-Canadian battles the New Zealand champion in a 15-round match at Madison Square Garden March 1. Heeney complained that a two-week postponement of his recent draw engagement with Jack Sharkey impaired his fighting form.

The commission refused to hamper Delaney in his avowed purpose of fighting himself into peak condition but expressed the opinion through William Muldoon, 82-year-old member, that postponements such as the Sharkey-Heeney affair must be prevented in the future. The board believes that Sharkey, who complained of an injury to his left hand, could have fought Heeney in December instead of demanding a postponement until January 13.

Gulf Quint Trims Canton Five

Canton, Ga., January 28.—(Special.)—The Gulf quintet defeated the Canton High school here tonight in a well played game that ended, 38 to 27. Canton had its eyes on the basket from the very start and secured an early lead, but the Gulf finally got warm and secured a safe lead.

The winners had several shots to roll around the basket only to fall off. Nichols proved the most consistent shooter and rung up 13 points. Wilder did very well and counted for six more for the winners. B. Perkins and Sims led the offense of the losers with eight points each.

The Lineup and Summary.

Pirates Send Young Player to Sally

Pittsburgh, January 28.—(AP)—Willis Windle, youthful and promising first baseman, purchased by the Pittsburgh Pirates from the Salisbury, N. C., club of the Piedmont league, today was sent to the Columbia club of the South Atlantic league for further seasoning. Windle, who is 22, played his first season of "pro" ball with Salisbury in 1927.

PIMLICO RACE DATES CLOSE FEBRUARY 10

The stakes to be run at the coming Pimlico spring meeting, May 1 to 12, with the exception of The Dixie, will close Friday, February 10.

The Dixie handicap, for three-year-olds and upward, $25,000 added, as already announced, closed January 3 with 80 entries, and the weights will be published February 1.

The closing date of the other fixtures is earlier than usual, but will, it is thought by the Maryland Jockey club, be more convenient for horsemen, and enable them to plan out their campaign to better advantage.

These stakes are nine in number, and comprise The Preakness, the stellar attraction for three-year-olds; Pimlico Oaks, for three-year-old fillies, $5,000 added; the Rennert handicap, for year-olds, $5,000 added; the Jennings, and Pimlico spring handicaps for three-year-olds, and upward, with $6,000 and $7,500 added, respectively; Pimlico Nursery, and Spring juvenile, for two-year-olds, $5,000 added to each; Pimlico homebred for two-year-olds, $2,500 and plate added, and the Green Spring Valley steeplechase handicap, for four-year-olds, and upward; $5,000 added.

The order selected for running these valuable features are The Dixie, 1 3-16 miles, Tuesday, May 1, opening day; Pimlico Nursery, 4 1-2 furlongs, May 2; Rennert handicap, 6 furlongs, May 3; Pimlico Oaks, 1 1-16 miles, May 4; Green Spring Valley steeplechase, 2 miles, May 5; the Homebred, 4 1-2 furlongs, May 6; the Jennings, 6 furlongs, May 9; Spring juvenile, 4 1-2 furlongs, May 10; the Preakness, 1 3-16 miles, May 11; Pimlico Spring handicap 1 1-16 miles, May 12.

This will give an important stake on every day of the meeting, with the exception of May 8, on which day valuable overnight purses will be on the card, these purses being worth $1,300, $1,500 and $2,000. In accordance with its custom of many years standing, the Maryland Jockey club will present $50 to the trainer of the winner of each race.

AND—IN THIS CORNER

by Ben Cothran

From all the reports coming out of Florida since Mr. Tunney, the heavyweight champion, started his vacation there, was one that sounded strange coming from a champion.

Mr. Tunney is credited with announcing to the world that all might hear, that he would fight "once a week if that were possible."

A champion fighting once a week. Wonder what prompted the champion to make that statement. Didn't he say something about fighting only once in 1928, right after he had defeated Dempsey for the second time at Chicago. Seems to us that he did.

Then about two months ago he was anxious to have two bouts. Or at least Mr. Rickard was anxious for him to have two bouts. Of course, being one of Mr. Rickard's gentlemen, Gene was anxious to fight twice this year.

And now he is credited with having said that he'd like to fight once a week.

Somebody has said that boxing is on the decline. Maybe it is. For a long, long time when Dempsey was in flower there wasn't much defense made of a heavyweight title. Lots of people didn't even know what a heavyweight was. Then Mr. Tunney bobbed up, demanding a bout with Dempsey. After so long a time, he got it.

They fought at Philly, in the rain, and drew a big gate. Tunney won. Then up jumped the heavyweights. Higher went the gates for mediocre fights. Higher went public interest in the fight game. Of course, the tiny fellows—lightweights, welters and all—were fighting all along, but when America turns out en masse for a fight it turns out for the heavyweights.

So Mr. Rickard made money and started the first of his famous "elimination" series. It drug along and finally there was Jack Sharkey left, waiting to meet Tunney. Rickard drug out Jack Dempsey, who had been moving mountains out in California to get in shape and informed Sharkey that first he must fight Dempsey if he would meet Tunney. Sharkey met Dempsey, was knocked out and he hasn't met Tunney yet, but most likely will —soon.

So Dempsey and Tunney fought again and Tunney won again. And Mr. Rickard started some more eliminating, just to keep public interest aroused.

The only thing wrong with Richards eliminations was that all the participants, for the most part, were in the thing last year, and all of them have beaten each other, met two or three times, and proved nothing except that none of them could last very long with Tunney. This has palled upon the public and it's getting slightly bored with the whole thing.

The people, it appears, are desirous of seeing the champion in action more often. Which probably prompted Mr. Rickard to announce two bouts for Mr. Tunney this summer. And also prompted Mr. Tunney to announce that he'd like to fight once a week.

But if he did that, he might get like Willie Stribling. That would be deplorable.

YOUTH PULLS BIG SURPRISE IN NET MEET

Miami Beach, Fla., January 28.—(AP)—Gustav Feuer, red-haired, 19-year-old student of Miami, furnished the feature of today's international tennis play by defeating Vincente Banet, Cuba's No. 2 Davis cup player. The Americans boosted their wins today to four, going into tomorrow's play with a handicap of three. The visiting Cubans have seven wins.

The score between Feuer and Banet was 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Miss Agnes Wayne and John McKay, former Indiana champion, defeated Senorita Giselle Comellonga and Rogelio Paris, Cuban Davis cup captain, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Senorita Omidan Dubroca and Gustave Vollmer won from Miss Florence Rice, New York, and Stuart Haynes, Jr., Montauk, 6-4, 6-4.

Stuart Gaynes, Sr., and Earle Barnet, Chicago, defeated Vincente Banet and Gustave Vollmer, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1.

Senorita Lila Camacho, Cuban ranking woman player, and Senorita Gisela Comallonga won from Mrs. S. R. Gibbs and Miss Helma Palmer, 6-4, 6-0.

In a doubles match not completed Friday, Senorita Elena Daly and Senorita Ondina Dubroca finished winners over Miss Florence Rice and Miss Agnes Wayne, 7-9, 8-6, 6-3.

Driving deep to the back court, the Cuban set a fast pace at the outset of the Feuer-Banet match, but the youngster's volleying, coupled with discovery that his opponent was unable to follow his smashes into midcourt, decided the issue.

Haley Opposes 'Stop It' Cry

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Patsy Haley, who delights in refereeing heavyweight encounters, although he hardly reaches to the shoulders of big fellows, has a few canny remarks to make regarding the business of refereeing.

In the ring at Madison Square Garden two bantamweights were struggling and one had crimsoned himself and his foeman with a steady flow of blood from the nose.

"Up in the gallery," mourned Patsy, "they're hollering 'stop it.' Those fans came to see a fight. If the referee does stop it, the other half of the house that came here for the same reason will bellow to know why. That fighter is bleeding, but he's strong. Fans don't realize that as long as a youngster has his strength he's entitled to a chance to win, and while blood spread all over looks bad it rarely means anything in a fight as short as ten rounds. Over a longer distance it would take a very definite toll.

"Furthermore, refereeing in there with those wild swingers trying to shave the belt line isn't all beer and skittles, either," Patsy finished. "And the boxing commissions haven't made things easier by ruling that punches along the top of the tights are legal."

A tap on Patsy's shoulder turned him around.

"You're in there for the next one," announced one of the boxing commissioners.

"Heigh ho," said Patsy as he hauled himself up and through the ropes. "Here's hoping they keep 'em up."

Silent Cal Says Nothing Of Army-Navy

Peace-Making Representatives Confer With President on Service Row.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—A conference between President Coolidge and Representatives Britten, of Illinois, and Fish, of New York, looking toward smoothing out the difficulties between the Naval Academy and West Point over football regulations failed today to produce any indication that the trouble would be soon removed.

Representative Britten said the president had listened with a great deal of interest to their explanation of the causes of controversy, but had not indicated whether he would take any part in it. He said, however, he would not be surprised if Mr. Coolidge issued some comment or otherwise directed Secretary Wilbur or Secretary Davis, of the war department, to do so.

Neither Fish nor Britten have any immediate plan in mind and both said that they would wait a few days to see if their conference with the president resulted in any executive action.

No Action.

Yesterday it was said at the white house that Mr. Coolidge had taken no action in the controversy which revolved around West Point's desire not to observe the three-year eligibility rule for football players.

Full blame for the failure of the two service institutions to reach some sort of an agreement was laid by Representative Fish upon Major General E. R. Winans, superintendent of the West Point military academy, because he declined to accept the congressman's proposal for a conciliation meeting in New York.

The West Point superintendent retires from his post about March 1, and Mr. Britten expressed the belief he had been adamant to proposals to solve the troubles because he was about to leave office.

Representative Fish said that Rear Admiral Nulton, of the Naval academy, had been willing to confer in a meeting which would aim to smooth out the trouble.

"It is so childish," Fish said, "that the two great academies representing the army and navy departments of the federal government are unable to reach a mutually satisfactory compromise of their differences and play ball."

Conference Cage Tournament Starts Here February 24

Leading Teams Turn Thoughts To 1928 Title

Coming Tourney Expected To Furnish Some Real Scrapping.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

A month or so now and 16 teams gather in Atlanta from the furthermost corners of this far-flung southern conference of ours to scramble madly up and down the court at the city auditorium and undergo a long process of elimination out of which will come the 1928 conference basketball champion, which honor is held at present by the Commodores of Vanderbilt.

Starting date of the tournament, according to first-hand information, is set for Friday, February 24. Closing date will be Tuesday, February 28. That covers a space of five days, with a Sunday injected which will allow those teams surviving the first two days of play a slight breathing spell.

Selecting To Be Hard.

The picking of the 16 teams out of 22 members will be a slightly difficult job this season. There are only a few really outstanding quintets, but after you've picked those four or five, then there are almost a dozen more to select.

But you never can tell about these outstanding teams that can't be left out and those that barely get in the ranking pot. Last year Georgia got in by the skin of its teeth, to use a homely and trite phrase, and Vanderbilt wasn't being mentioned ahead of Maryland, the North Carolina Tarheels and several others.

But when it came down to the finals last winter, it found Georgia and Vanderbilt playing for the title. The Bulldogs, for whom little hope had been held out, had trounced those nearly perennial champions, the Tarheels and Vanderbilt had caused pandemonium and consternation in the lower bracket in which it had been placed.

Packed Auditorium.

And that final game for the southern conference title packed the auditorium. The fans packed in to see a good game of basketball and they did. That game, which the Commodores won, gave you and I and John Smith, of Buckhead, a topic for back fence conversation the next morning.

Because of the poor showing made in 1927 by numerous teams, only 14 were picked for the hardwood meeting. By ruling passed some years ago 16 representative quintets are to be selected, by conference tournament committee. This body is headed by H. J. Stegeman, of Georgia. Other members are W. A. Alexander, of Tech; Wilbur A. Hutsell, of Auburn; Bowles, of Kentucky, and Bob Fetzer, of the University of North Carolina. The committee will probably hold its meetnig to select the teams and make the pairings the Sunday before the tournament starts.

The tournament is held in Atlanta each year, and the Atlanta Athletic club takes a heavy burden off the shoulders of the conference by running the affair. Last winter the club ran the tourney in such efficient fashion that over $1,000 was cleared. Al Doonan, the club's athletic director, looks after all details of the tournament and usually aids the conference committee in making the selections.

Hard-Fought Tourney.

Mr. Doonan follows the cage teams closely and believes that the tournament this year is going to be a fiercely-fought out proposition.

In making a tentative list of comparative strength of the teams, Mr. Doonan advanced Maryland and the Tarheels as the strongest outfits in the south Atlantic section; Ole Miss and the Mississippi Aggies in the southwestern section; Kentucky in the middle, and Auburn and Georgia in this part of the conference.

Other teams which will deserve recognition are; Tennessee, Tulane, Virginia, North Carolina State, Tech, Vanderbilt and South Carolina.

SPALDING (GIRLS') LEAGUE.

Hot battles were played in the Spalding league last night. Crum & Foster had a time doing battle with the Western Electric girls. It was the second half before the Crums could establish a winning lead. Ward contributed some neat floor work.

The Georgia Power five had an easy time defeating the Comptometers. The Comptometers' only point came in the first half as a result of a foul shot. Jones was the outstanding star for Powers, while Mathews was runner-up.

Insurance League

The Insurance league quintets will be idle Tuesday night due to the Tech High-Vienna game to be played on the Atlanta Athletic club court, where the Insurance teams stage their struggles. The date that these games will be played on will be decided at meeting of the league sometime this week.

The league entered its second round of the season last Tuesday night. The strong North America aggregation defeated the Fireman's Fund team in the feature game of the season. The victory will probably give the N. A.'s the championship of the league. The Firemen were doped to win, but inability to pass and sink points proved to be their downfall.

The Royal boys staged a comeback, winning over the Commercial Union team. After handing the league-leading North American team its first defeat of the season two weeks ago, the Southeastern Underwriters came back Tuesday night to lose to the Hartford quintet.

Fleet Champ

JOHN L. LANCASTER.

Above is John Lewis Lancaster, of Fitzgerald, Ga., pugilistically inclined gob who has won the middleweight boxing championship of the Pacific fleet, which amounts almost to the championship of the navy.

Lancaster is an all-round athlete, and recently won the mile run in the fleet track meet. He is desirous of taking up boxing as a means of making a living, and experts have said that he is good enough for Madison Square Garden. He knew nothing about boxing when he enlisted, and is entirely a navy product.

DISTRICT CAGE TOURNAMENT DATES FIXED

BY BOB SHERROD.

Athens, Ga., January 28.—Eight of the twelve districts in Georgia have announced the place and date of their high school basketball tournaments, according to Dr. J. B. Stewart, professor of secondary education at the University of Georgia.

The tournaments are held each year to determine which team shall represent that district in the state tournament which is held in Athens. The date of the state high school tournament for this year has been fixed for March 8, 9 and 10 and will be played at Woodruff hall on the University of Georgia campus.

Vienna High school, which won the state tournament last year, went to the national tourney in Chicago and won the runner-up position, losing out in the finals in a closely-matched game.

Dr. Stewart states that there are 220 high schools participating in these district tournaments, although only 123 of them come to Athens for the state meet.

The district tournaments and their dates are as follows:

District.	Place.	Dates.
1	Savannah	Mar. 1-2-3
3	Unadilla	....
6	Griffin	Meh 1-2-3
7	Rome	Feb 24-25
8	Lavonia	Feb. 24-25
9	Tate-Lawrenceville	Mar 2-3
10	Warrenton	Mar. 2-3-4
12	Perry	Feb. 23-24-25

Power League

The teams in the Power league are rapidly seeking their level and it will not be long until a champion will be crowned. The Gas and Electric team seems to have a stranglehold on the situation, but it still has three chances to lose out. "D" division plays the Gas cagers Tuesday and the loss of this game means they will have to play them again for the championship of the league, as a victory for "D" would make them win the second half.

The winner of the second division has the right to play the first division winner for the second half, but it is hardly to be expected that they will come out victorious.

Following the league schedule the All-Star team will play several games with other teams in nearby towns of Georgia. The Power company girls and boys will schedule games together, playing double-headers.

G. W. Tucker, of the Power company, has several dates open that he is willing to fill with out of town teams that will guarantee expenses for the trip. Address him in care of Georgia Power company.

Attention Centered On U. S. Sprinters

With Hahn America's Olympic Hope in Middle Distance Development of Sprinters Next on Program.

BY FRANK GETTY,
United News Sports Editor.

New York, January 28.—With Lloyd Hahn established as America's lone hope in the middle distance events at Amsterdam and with no prospect of developing any long-distance stars of account before the Olympic games, the attention of those interested in the success of the United States next July has turned to the sprinters.

The indoor track season really does not get under way until next week, when the Millrose games are held in Madison Square Garden.

For the entire month of February, serious-faced gentlemen will be bent over split second stop watches, recording the speed of flying feet, seeking to weed out the unfit and train the fleetest for Amsterdam.

Paris Plight.

And although they had the example of the failure of our distance men at Paris four years ago as a warning that if we wanted to hold our own we must develop better runners of this type, our athletic directors and coaches have done practically nothing about it.

The sprinters, however, are numerous—and willing. We have at least a dozen young men capable of doing 9 4-5 and occasionally better in the century dash, all of whom have come out for indoor competition in the hope of being chosen for the American Olympic team.

There is Jackson V. Scholz, veteran of the past two Olympiads; Roland Locke, a comparative newcomer, but perhaps the fastest man in the world at 220 meters; Chet Bowman, national 100-yard champion, faster than ever; Karl Wildermuth, Georgetown star, who has been making a sensational sweep of all the spring series this winter; Frank Hussey, former schoolboy champion, trying for a comeback; Bob McAllister, erstwhile "flying cop," who is in the same fix; Alf Leconey, of the Meadowbrook club, another Olympic veteran; Alderman, formerly of Michigan State, and a number of others.

The Millrose games will feature a spring series, and in addition there will be Robert Greenwade, of Silver City, N. Mex., who challenges the world, and Charley Paddock at 300 yards. He will be accommodated, although Paddock himself cannot get here in time for the Millrose games on February 2.

Padock to Compete.

It is possible that the unusually hot competition in the spring will bring Charley east before the indoor season ends, although his business is detaining him until late next month.

Roland Locke, who holds the world's record for 220 yards, will be seen in action here indoors for the first time. The record holder has joined the New York Athletic club, and intends to practice law and sprinting in this city from now on.

Major William Kennelly, president of the New York Athletic club, has donated a cup for a special sprint race, which may be at 80 yards if the straightaway in Madison Square Garden can be lengthened. The cup will go to the runner scoring the most points in this special race over a period of three years.

The New York Athletic club's "big four," Scholtz, Locke, Hussey and Wildermuth, all have entered.

VANCE, ROOT ARE ON LIST OF HOLDOUTS

New York, January 28.—(United News.)—Two of the leading pitchers of the National league have joined the growing list of major league holdouts.

Charley Root, the right-handed star, who won 26 games last season for the Cubs and almost pitched McCarthy's team to the National league pennant, returned his contract to President William L. Veeck.

Word comes from Clearwater, Fla., that Dazzy Vance, ace of the Brooklyn staff, is not satisfied with the terms of the new contract submitted him. He wants $20,000 a season, which is about $5,000 more than he received last season.

Waite Hoyt, New York Yankees star hurler, is said to be a holdout although Yankee officials refuse to confirm or deny Hoyt is dissatisfied.

May Have Trouble Yet.

Although Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig have signed their contracts, the Yankees may have quite a bit of trouble before they get all of their stars in the fold. The Yankees' pay roll for 1928 may exceed the $300,000 mark.

Tris Speaker has been given his unconditional release by the Washington Senators and it seems that the Gray Eagle will wear a minor league uniform next season as none of the major league clubs are anxious to assume his high-priced contract. Jersey City and Montreal of the International league are dickering for Speaker's services.

Ty Cobb has turned down an offer of $25,000 to play with the Atlanta club of the Southern league because he would rather not play minor league baseball.

JUNIOR LOOP HEAD TURNING EYE TO UMPS

Chicago, January 28.—(AP)—Twenty-five years of scouting ball players for his Cleveland club has taught E. S. Barnard, now president of the American league, how to get about selecting the best possible material in a staff of umpires. There are few if any ball players, from the lowliest bush leagues on up, that Barnard is not entirely familiar with.

"I'm going to start getting posted the same way on umpires now," President Barnard said today. "They are all I have left to pick now, but before long I'll know them all. There are certain things essential to a good umpire, and if someone on a class BB league has them, he is just as likely to be brought right up to the American league, as anyone else. Just now we are so busy getting moved into our new quarters that I haven't a chance to start in on anything, but the first of the month will find us getting settled in our new offices and I expect to begin picking our umpires first."

He declined to discuss the staff of 1927 and their prospects, except Tommy "Pop" Connolly, the only arbiter still in the game who has been with the American league since its inception.

"Connolly will be with us again next season," Barnard said. "There is still a lot of good baseball left in him. He will be out there on the base lines as usual. He is so good that he hasn't had to suspend a player for three years."

S. S. A. A.

Calvary Methodist, by virtue of its win by forfeit, when it was found that a player of the First Presbyterian, who played in the game of Monday night was ineligible, has moved into second place of the American league standings of the S. S. A. A., but is in a tie with Central Presbyterian with six games won and two lost.

Lutheran church also were forced to give up a game when a player whom they used against Pryor Street was ineligible.

Druid Hills continues to lead the National Circuit with a perfect record of nine games. Jackson Hills has won seven and Lat one to lead over Calvary and Central in the other league.

Play in the association for the week will be as usual, ten games, five on Monday at the A. A. C. and five on Thursday at the Central Presbyterian.

SPRING GRID WORK BEGINS AT OGLEHORPE

BY FRED M'EACHIN.

With the advent of another month the football aspirants of Oglethorpe university will answer the call to spring football, which gets under way at Hermance field next Tuesday.

For the past two weeks the Petrel gridmen have been going through light workouts, having alternate days for backfield men and linemen. But with the approach of February 1 the regular grind begins.

Coach Robertson is expecting forty or more candidates out for the practices, and is nursing high hopes of uncovering much new material from the freshmen squad of last year which will be of assistance to his varsity crew for the campaign of 1928.

Meehan To Aid.

After the Birds have been going through their daily rehearsals for two weeks, Coach Chick Meehan, the nationally-famous football mentor of N. Y. U., will take a trip south and come to Oglethorpe to assist Harry in his coaching duties. For the past three years this has been an annual pilgrimage for Coach Meehan, and his arrival at Oglethorpe always inspires the Petrels.

When the Birds appear on the gridiron next season there will be many of the old stars missing from the lineup, due to graduation. With such men as Major Guthrie, Ed Garlington, Bob Shepherd, Cliff White, Roy Hancock, Bill Perkins, John Goldsmith and Frank Gordy, all valuable letter men, the Petrel football machine will be seriously handicapped.

To offset these losses there will be Captain-elect Joe Hutson, Jake Malsby, Hayward Clement, Curry Burford, Amos Martin, Asa Wall, Clark Taliaferro, Linsey Vaughn and Jimmie Sims, letter men of last year.

From the rat squad of '27 there are several promising recruits, Carlisle, Brooks and Herrin, freshmen backfield aces, should serve as great reserve strength for the varsity. Church, Tatum, Prior, Pierce and Fulton are a husky bunch of linemen who should land a berth on the varsity reserve list.

Murchison Unable To Try Olympics

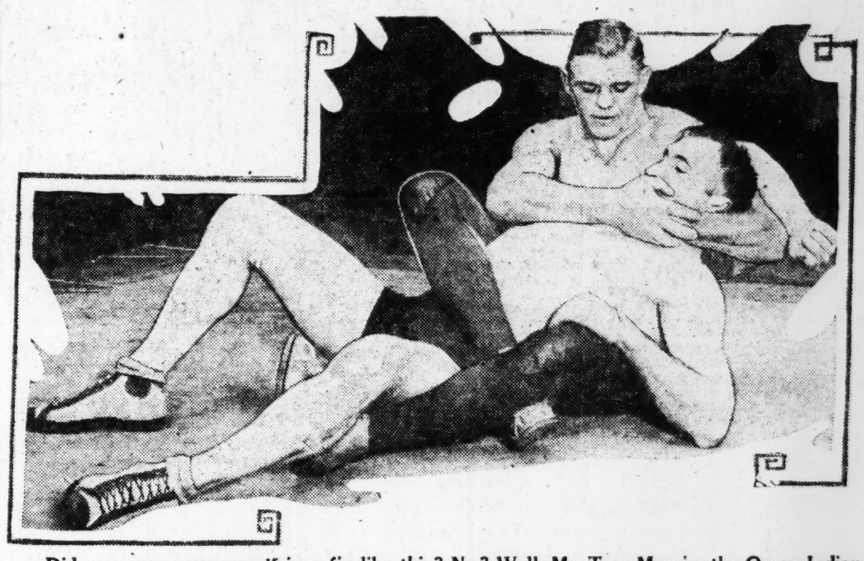

St. Louis, January 28.—(AP)—Loren Murchison, world's record holding sprinter, who was confined recently in a Decatur (Ill.) hospital following an attack of spinal meningitis, will be unable to train for the Olympics trial this summer, he said today.

Murchison is convalescing at the home of his father here. His doctors have pronounced him "sound as a dollar," but he is still weak and underweight.

"The main thing on my mind right now is to get well," he said. "I may indulge in a little indoor work in the fall, but there is not a chance that I will attempt any serious training this year."

The sprinter's weight fell from 155 to 115 pounds as the result of the illness, but he succeeded in tipping the scales today at 145 pounds.

BAD FIX TO BE IN

PELTZER, HAHN NOT TO MEET IN SAME RACE

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Dr. Otto Peltzer and Lloyd Hahn both will see action in the Millrose games at Madison Square Garden next Thursday night—but not in the same event.

That was determined definitely today when Millrose officials announced that Peltzer's first American start would be in an 800-meter run. Hahn, who is expected to face the famed German middle-distance star at both the 800 and 1,500-meter events in the Olympics this summer, already is booked to compete in the Rodman Wanamaker mile, classic of the Millrose meet.

Opposition Unknown.

Just who will be in the field against Peltzer in his first appearance in this country remains to be announced. Most of the middle-distance stars have entered other events. Hahn, Jimmy Conolly, of the New York A. C.; Bill Cox, of Penn State; Ray Conger and Joe Sivak, of the Illinois A. C., are entered in the mile. Pinky Sober, of the Holy Name club; Johnny Holden, New York A. C.; Phil Edwards, New York university, and Bernie McCafferty, Seton Hall, are down for the half mile. The 1,000-yard run has drawn entries from Leo Larrivee, of the Chicago A. A.; Ray Dodge, of the Illinois A. C.; Schuyler Enck, former Penn State star, and Frank Masterson, Newark A. C. In the "600" for the John Wanamaker, Jr., trophy, will be George Leness, New York A. C., national champion; Oliver Produlock, Newark A. C., and Johnny Sittig, Chicago A. A.

Many Stars Entered.

Approximately 200 outstanding American athletes will compete in the games. International flavor will be added not only by Peltzer's appearance but by William Schnitt, of Germany, and Arthur Schuwab, Switzerland, who will face some of the country's foremost walking stars in a 5,000-meter event. Canada will be represented by Arthur Keaya, Monarch A. C., Toronto, and Wallace Graham, University of Toronto, in the two-mile miss-and-out race, meeting Leo Lermond, Jimmy Loucks, Eddie Kirby, Johnny Romig and several other leading American distance runners.

Epworth League

The Epworth association has completed another week of play without any serious upsets. The leaders of each league have retained their positions and are preparing for the second round of games which will start this week.

College Park boys completed the first round of the Boys' "A" league Thursday without losing a game, leading the pack in this league with five wins and no losses.

The Capitol View boys continue to lead the Boys "B" league, having won six games without a loss to mar their record.

With five wins and only one loss, the St. Mark's girls remain at the top of the ladder in the Girls' "A" league, Druid Hills being in second place and Emory third in the standing.

Cascade continues to lead the Girls' "B" league. The Grant Park girls are close on the heels of the leaders with four wins against a single loss. Grant Park has produced two excellent teams this season, presenting a strong team in the girls' and Boys' "B" leagues.

NATION AGAIN INDIGNANT

When in Doubt Be Indignant Against the A. A. U.—Pegler

AGAINST ATHLETIC UNION

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, January 28.—One disagreeable trait of Mr. Dan Ferris, the secretary-treasurer of the National Amateur Athletic union, is that if you call on him for material regarding some promising scandal or official outrage in the amateur athletic business, he will quietly haul off and explain the whole thing away, leaving you no scandal or outrage to be indignant about. Just now there is rather widespread indignation against the A. A. U. for something of other which it is supposed to have done to Herr Doktor Otto Peltzer, the German philosopher and middle distance runner. Among the many people who are indignant about this matter there is nobody who quite realizes what all the indignation is for, but the general rule in all cases of this kind is "when in doubt be indignant against the A. A. U."

The impression seems to be that the A. A. U. has granted Doktor Peltzer full permission to philosophize at will, but has refused him permission to run in any of the indoor track meets, which are now being organized for February, the month of indoor track meets. The public does not seem to be interested in doktor's philosophical performances, but apparently does wish to see him run a few leg races. This is only natural, as it appears that he runs much better than he philosophizes, and anyway, the Tibia is a much better drawing card than the medulla oblongata.

If the A. A. U. had forbidden an amateur athlete to run races free of charge in this country, there would, of course, be justification for indignation against the A. A. U. I rather hoped that the A. A. U. would do something of this kind to Doktor Peltzer, because I enjoy a good outrage as well as the next one, but when I talked to Mr. Ferris today he said that A. A. U. hadn't placed any restrictions on Doktor Peltzer at all. He said that Deutsche Sporthechdre, which is the German equivalent of the A. A. U., had restricted the learned doktor to three meets while he is in the United States and that the A. A. U. had merely passed the message along to the doktor.

To Get Message.

Doktor Peltzer is now on his way from Los Angeles to Chicago, and somewhere along the line he will be handed a telegram from the A. A. U. inviting him to select the three meets in which he wants to run. The A. A. U. will then consider whether it wants to let him run in those three meets, but that seems to be merely one of those characteristic gestures of officiousness by which governing bodies justify their existence. In fact, the A. A. U. undoubtedly will insist that Doktor Peltzer name the National A. A. U. indoor championships as one of the meets in which he wants to run and withhold sanction of his entry in the Illinois A. C. and Millrose meets. Unless he enters these championships there would seem to be grounds for indignation in this, except for the fact that the A. A. U.'s only object in making this condition is to ballyhoo its own show and swell the profits, which will be turned over to the Olympic committee to help pay the expenses of the American Olympic team on its trip to Amsterdam next summer. The A. A. U. is lightly brutal about this, but the reasoning is that the Olympic fund is a more worthy beneficiary than the treasury of some individual athletic club under whose auspices the doktor might elect to run his third race.

The A. A. U. has been very suspicious of the treasuries of individual athletic clubs, especially the skeleton clubs which take out charters, establish quarters in the back rooms of cigar stores and run big track meets, ever since Mr. Paavo Nurmi came over to this country. Mr. Ferris always seems very sad when you mention Paavo Nurmi and it is easy to see that he believes the A. A. U. was deceived about the disposition of the receipts of some of his shows. There have been insinuations that athletes who are good box office runners in submitting their traveling expenses to, say Brooklyn, have shown the most deplorable ignorance of their geometry. To some of them the shortest distance between these two points is by way of Chicago. It is surprising how many meals a fairly smart athlete can eat in the diner while going from New York to Brooklyn.

Hard to Catch.

It is quite difficult to catch the A. A. U. in an outrage because it is a very smart organization. The last time it was caught in an outrage was when it suspended Mr. Charlie Hoff, the Norwegian pole vaulter, and withheld his expense money when he was 5,000 miles from his home because he refused to compete in a meet which he had not entered. The indignation against the A. A. U. was just reaching a nice heat, however, when Mr. Hoff decided that he would have to establish relations with some Finnan Haddie and turned professional in order to finance this desire.

The A. A. U. then said "Mr. Hoff is a professional," and that was the last that was heard of the Charlie Hoff outrage.

PAN-AMERICAN GOLF TOURNEY ON MARCH 14

Biloxi, Miss., January 29.—The first annual Pan-American amateur golf tournament, with prominent players entered from North and Central America and Cuba, will be held on the Edgewater Gulf hotel golf course March 21 to 24 inclusive, it was announced today by the executive committee of the Pan-American Amateur Golfers' association, the permanent organization of which has been completed here.

Organization of the association follows many conferences in the last six months involving golfers prominent in both the United States and Central American countries, at which it was pointed out that the inauguration of such an international sporting event will do much to foster good will among the countries involved and provide a Pan-American sporting event of major importance.

Women's Tourney Also.

Following the March 21-24 event for men, a Pan-American women's amateur golf tournament, also sponsored by the association, will be held on the same course April 11 to 14 inclusive. This event will also be an annual affair.

Pan-American championship cups and medals will be awarded the winners of both tournaments. Medals and prizes will also be awarded the winners of various flights which will be of all classes.

Arthur Saunders, in charge of the Edgewater Gulf Golf club and course, will act as director of this year's tournaments; H. E. Caylor, administration director of the South Mississipians, Inc., is acting as secretary of the association and tournaments.

No games are scheduled in the Scott league until Wednesday, February 8.

The Trammell Scott league turned over a new leaf last week and started the season over again, every team having a clean record until after the first series of games which was played Wednesday. Every team in the league will have a chance to win the second half of the split season, and by doing so may win the championship of the league by defeating Martin-Nash, winners of the first half.

In the first round of games the champion Nash team seemed to be up against a stiff proposition in the Jessup & Antrim crew, Bishop was sinking them from all angles and made it hard for the champs.

Southern Railway had a tough foe in the New York Life insurance company team, but came out in front 38 to 22, making the Lifers take the count again as they did in the first half. Cluett Peabody showed more strength than before.

The fact that the Atlanta Athletic club plays two games next week, meeting T. P. C. on Wednesday and Georgia on Saturday, makes it impossible for the league to play any games until February 8.

City League

Two of the best amateur teams of the city will battle for first place honors in the City league Thursday when the Gulf and the A. A. C. Reds meet on the club court at 8:30. Both of these teams play a fast and high caliber of ball and a capacity crowd is expected to witness this feature struggle for leadership.

The Reds hold a four-point victory over the Gulf, but the Southern Bell five last week gave the Reds their first defeat and now the Gulf and the Reds meet for first place honors. The Phonemen are securely in third place.

Avondale has invited the Insurance Company of North America to meet them in the opening tilt, starting at 7:30. Southern Bell will meet the Knights of Columbus in the closing number at 9:30.

Following are the schedule and standing.

Tom Loughran Recalls Few Parts of Bout

Tells of Fight With Lomski Waged While in a Mental Coma.

BY EDWARD J. NEIL,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, January 28.—(AP)—The most worried man in Madison Square Garden when Tommy Loughran trotted to his corner at the final gong of his 15-round title battle with Leo Lomski, Aberdeen, Wash., body slasher, was the light heavyweight champion himself. Tommy was afraid he had lost his crown.

There was a very definite reason for the fear the champion felt but which few spectators shared with him. Right at the start of that match were five rounds Tommy could not remember at all—rounds fought in a mental blank after Lomski twice smashed him to the canvas for counts of nine in the opening session.

Afraid of Beating.

"I was afraid all the time after waking up between the fifth and sixth rounds that I had taken a terrible beating in the rounds I couldn't remember," the clean cut titleholder, who defended his mantle twice in a month, explained as he watched two other light heavyweight aspirants—Joe Sekyra and Yale Okun—toil in the Garden ring.

"Through the rest of the fifteen rounds I fought as hard as I knew how, giving everything, in the hope of offsetting that bad start, but when it was all over, and I went to the corner for the decision, I was pretty certain I had lost. What a relief when Joe Humphries walked over and lifted my hand"

It just so happened, however, that ringside critics credited Tommy with a distinct margin in four of the five rounds he couldn't remember. Lomski won the first session when two smashes levelled the champion but tally sheets of the rounds thereafter gave all but two of the fourteen to the champion.

Fighting Instinct.

To fighting instinct and a suggestion he never knew was given him, Loughran attributed the impulse that lifted him to his feet, mind a blank, after Lomski smashed the champion down for the second time with a terrific left hook to the jaw.

"All I remember of the opening round was rising after that first smash and backing into the ropes. Then darkness fell for five rounds. The midnight must have been the left hook that floored me the second time," the champion said.

Loughran came up on one knee, close to the ropes and just in front of the knockdown timekeeper after the second crash. His eyes were blank and staring and he looked through and beyond the familiar faces of sports writers less than a yard away.

"Take nine, Tommy, and keep away! Box him!" they told the dazed fighter and almost immediately his lips caught the count of timekeeper at "five." Loughran counted to nine, rose steadily, and boxed cleverly away from Lomski's wild plunges the remainder of the round.

Tommy did that for four more rounds before he "woke up." But he can't remember any part of it.

22ND INFANTRY LEAGUE

Tedesco, of the Company F team, featured the play of the 22d Infantry league this week when he rang up a total of 31 points against the Headquarters Company out of a total of 34 which was the team's aggregate. Up to this game Headquarters Company was leading the league and Tedesco almost unaided, brought the league leaders down to second place. Company G now appears to be the class of the league, having defeated Companies F and H during the past week by overwhelming scores. Lieutenant Whatley has a smooth working combination and it will be hard to topple them from the leadership of the league:

'Victory Six' Featuring 'Second Line of Defense'

Although the war is over, the world is still profiting by its lessons, and nowhere is this fact more apparent than in the production of the Victory Six, an entirely new Dodge Brothers car, officials of the company declare. Two revolutionary principles characterize it. It is the first car in which body and chassis are in one unit, and in the Victory Six for the first time in the history of the steel body a double steel wall is found in the body of a closed car.

It is in this latter departure that principles learned in the war are reflected—particularly the important one of providing for a second line of defense. The double steel wall is just that. Even if the outer wall should be penetrated, the inner one would still stand as a second defense for the occupants. The double steel actually means double safety. Tests have proved that it is practically impossible to penetrate both walls. This double steel wall is the same "blister" construction used in battleships, and is virtually an answer to the increasingly importunate demands of automobile clubs, civic organizations and the motor driving public for heavy steel construction in motor cars as well as in railroad cars and buses—demands recently expressed in a symposium collected by Percival White, prominent consulting engineer.

However, in spite of the double strength resulting, the Victory Six retains the top lightness necessary to keep it from overturning, for the building of body and chassis one strong unit alone means the saving of 175 pounds. It is lighter than any other car of equal strength. Each car body is composed of only eight major parts, and there are from 330 to 480 fewer parts than in the ordinary body.

Non-Tippable Pyramid.

Perhaps the most important effect of the one-piece construction is that it means a decided lowering of the center of gravity of the car—making of the Victory virtually an untippable pyramid with engine, transmission, and axles—the heavy parts—all swung as low as possible between the wheels. Heretofore, in an effort to obtain the lowest possible center of gravity engineers have been reducing headroom and road clearance to a disadvantageous degree. The desired result has been accomplished in the Victory Six without resorting to either of these two means, for the one-piece construction permits the elimination of body sills—a saving in height of at least two inches.

In addition, this union of body and chassis gives still greater safety since stress formerly transmitted to the body sills is now taken by the frame, giving the strength and firmness of steel to parts formerly made of wood. The natural result is a longer life both for the car as a whole and for the tires, as well as greater tire and gasoline mileage.

Performance Proves Success.

Success of the new construction methods employed in the Victory Six is reflected in its performance. The car has an easy speed of 65 miles an hour, and accelerates from 5 to 25 miles an hour in eight seconds, and from 10 to 45 miles in 15 seconds.

Other features of the new car are a cooling system which introduces cool water at various points in the engine, instead of only one place, a crankshaft free from vibration at any speed, an oil system which provides more oil the faster one drives, Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes, semi-elliptical springs both front and rear, single-plate clutch, selective sliding gear transmission and standard gear shift.

Sneeze Bombs Used.

Vienna, Austria, January 28.—(AP)—Women swooned when chemical bombs containing sneeze powder were dropped by pan-German students at a performance of the jazz opera "Johnny" at the State theater. Students in front of the building sang anti-Semitic songs and created a disturbance. Twelve men were arrested.

ERSKINE LEAVES TEST WITH PERFECT RECORD

South Bend, Ind., January 28.—(Special)—An Erskine Six Sedan, entered in the London-Exeter-London reliability tour, finished the test with a perfect score and is now eligible for the gold medal highest award for reliable performance, according to cabled advices received here from L. J. Ollier, managing director of Studebaker England, Ltd. The reliability tour which was purposely routed over some of the poorest stretches of road and steepest hills in England, was regarded by British motoring authorities as one of the most stringent tests ever devised for the all around performance of motor cars. The Erskine, however, easily negotiated every hill and checked in at every control point well within the time limit laid down by governing officials of the run.

The London-Exeter-London run is the third important reliability test in England to be won by the Erskine Six in open competition. Gold trophies emblematic of victories in the London-Edinburgh and London-Lands End classics are already held by the Erskine Six. In addition, the new American edition of the Erskine recently set a new 24-hour endurance and speed record for cars under $1,000 by traveling better than 54 miles per hour for 24 consecutive hours. This record was made at the Atlantic City speedway under American Automobile association supervision.

RUSCO SALESMEN HOLD CONFERENCE

There will be an all day conference at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel Monday held by the southern sales organization of the Russell Manufacturing company, manufacturers of Rusco brake lining.

W. T. Pulmer, general manager from the company headquarters at Middletown, Conn., will be in attendance and there will also be present R. F. Jones, one of the company's mechanical engineers also from headquarters.

The southeastern sales organization comprising a personnel of 20 salesmen and headed by G. N. Shoop, division sales manager, covers nine southern states from the Atlanta division.

All phases of late brake efficiency developments will be discussed with complete interchange of ideas as relates to various traffic conditions in the leading cities throughout the south. With the daily increase in traffic congestion, the motoring public appreciates the importance of at all times having efficient braking facilities.

The Russell Manufacturing company has maintained a branch office in this city for the past five years and has established an excellent name among motorists for producing brake lining that will "stop quicker" regardless of weather conditions. Rusco is a name that is familiar to most automobile owners, especially since it has been so completely advertised over the last thirty days on the billboards in the city of Atlanta as well as in other cities throughout the south.

This company is the pioneer in Brake lining manufacture and its weaving experience of heavy textiles and belting covers a period of nearly 100 years.

The Russell Manufacturing company had a very attractive booth at the Southeastern Automobile show last week and considerable interest was manifested by the automobile public. The representatives at the Rusco booth took great pleasure in explaining the details of the manufacture of brake lining and the importance of having brakes that will stop on the driver's command.

Rat Terror.

London, January 28.—(AP)—Rats which the recent floods have driven from the river side have become a serious menace in South Lambeth. It was reported today that rodents, suffering from hunger, had invaded the living rooms of houses in the day time in Conroy street in search of food, even though people were in the rooms. At night the rats enter bedrooms and terrify the occupants.

QUALITY AT LOW COST

MANY REFINEMENTS ADDED TO WHIPPETS

Unusual lines of beauty and design are characteristic features of the perfected Whippet which is being presented at the lowest prices in the entire history of the Willys-Overland company. The recent price reduction in the Whippet places this modern car in direct price competition with the lowest-priced models in the light car field.

Although the basic principles of Whippet design are retained in the perfected models, certain refinements have been made which add materially to the beauty and grace of the car. Each model is distinctive for its rich exterior color combination while the interior appointments have a distinct luxury tone.

The perfected Whippet retains the low-swung body, a type of design that has since been adopted by many other manufacturers, not only in the light car field but in cars that sell in the higher prices ranges.

The long, sweeping lines of the Whippet from the nickeled radiator to the rear are accentuated through the employment of full crowned fenders. In place of the old type sun visor, which was formed by a continuation of the roof line, a cadet type sun visor is used on the perfected Whippet. This imparts a smart military effect to the cowl section and also provides a wider range of vision.

Interior improvements likewise carry out the aim of the manufacturer to even increase the quality and equipment of the Whippet despite the new low prices. Remote door controls have replaced the old type of locks, this providing an additional convenience for driver and passengers. An automatic windshield wiper is now standard equipment in place of the hand-operated wiper on the original Whippets.

The rich upholstery blends perfectly with the exterior color schemes in each of the various models. The metal trimmings also are in keeping with the noticeable stamp of luxury. Not only are these interiors marked by luxury but utmost roominess is provided for driver and passengers.

The unusual reception being accorded the perfected Whippet in every city, town and hamlet of the nation since the price reduction was announced, indicates that this modern light car has quickly reached a position of quality leadership in the light car field.

SWINT TIRE COMPANY IS MODEL OF ITS KIND

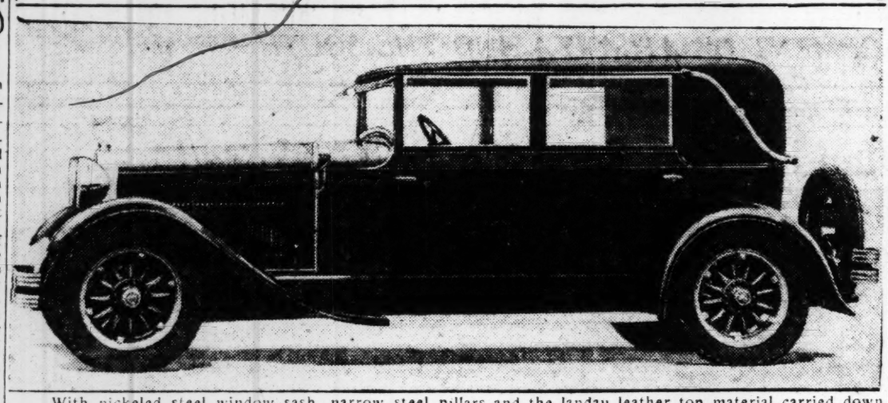

One of the most attractively appointed and modernly equipped of Atlanta's tire companies is the Swint Tire company, which is located at 631 Spring street, N. W., and is headed by C. F. Swint, a popular and veteran member of the tire and tire service business in Atlanta.

In proof of the fact that his long experience in the tire game has proved of high value to Mr. Swint, he has fitted his shop completely with the latest in machinery of every type, and the service that his company renders is a by-word with his patrons.

Mr. Swint has been connected with the tire business for the past 14 years and was one of this city's pioneers in the vulcanizing of tires when that process of repairing first made its appearance.

He is distributor for the entire state of Georgia of Gale tires and has many dealers under his direction who report a splendid demand for these well known tires.

De Luxe Models In 1928 Hudson Line

With nickeled steel window sash, narrow steel pillars and the landau leather top material carried down to the body belt at the rear the landau sedan reflects smartly both speed and roomy spaciousness. This is one of the Hudson de luxe models.

In its new line of custom-built cars, presented for the 1928 season, the Hudson Motor Car company offers an innovation which will undoubtedly prove important. There are three of these models—the victoria, the 5-passenger landau sedan and the 7-passenger sedan.

All these cars were designed for Hudson in Hollywood, Calif., by a firm which has specialized in special, exclusive bodies, none of which ever have been offered at less than $5,500. A few months ago a number of these de luxe bodies were purchased by Hudson officials, and others, for their personal use. So different were they from models current at the time that Hudson determined on them as the basis for a special line of cars on the 127-inch chassis.

These custom bodies are built to express what Hudson terms "the vogue of tomorrow." The whole contour of the car is designed to express fleetness and modern style with a sport motive. Color schemes and mouldings are more daring than in Hudson's usual models. The front window pillars are slender in outline, while the outer rim of the windshield is brightly nickel-plated. Similarly, the window supports at the top of the doors are unusually trim and are nickel-finished. This is said to improve vision from within the car and to assist an impression of smartness.

The rear quarters of these cars are covered with landau leather, which comes down from the top in an unbroken surface. Car interiors are fully and richly finished in de luxe style.

These cars are being manufactured for Hudson in Ameshury, Mass., by a firm of custom builders whose total capacity has been contracted for by Hudson. The construction is of hand-hammered aluminum panels and selected hardwood. The use of aluminum instead of sheet steel permits the obtaining of distinctive and subtle body lines and saves the weight of one passenger.

Hudson's big production program at this time of the year is declared the result of the reception of the new Hudson-Essex line. From reports the country over, this is said to have been the most favorable of any line of cars in the company's history, despite generally cold weather. In Detroit, since the introduction of the cars retail sales have exceeded 100 cars a day—or about triple the normal rate.

Sales of General Motors For December Announced

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, in a statement regarding the corporation's sales of cars for December, announces that "retail sales by General Motors dealers to consumers in December were 53,760 cars, as compared with 52,729 in December, 1926, and with 56,129 in December, 1925.

"As pointed out in comments made at the time the October and November sales were announced," he adds, "the trend in these two months, also in December, is confused and adversely influenced for various reasons, particularly by reason of the fact that the new Chevrolet, Pontiac and Oldsmobile models were then in process of development.

"In December sales by General Motors division to General Motors dealers totaled 60,071 cars, compared with 44,130 in December, 1926, and with 54,117 in December, 1925. These figures also are not comparable on account of the new models being injected into the situation and production and sales schedules influenced thereby.

"In view of the fact that this report completes the year 1027, it is interesting to point out, as shown in the detailed tabulation below, that General Motors dealers sold to consumers in the year 1927 1,554,577 cars, as compared with 1,215,826 carsf for the calendar year 1926, and again compared with 827,056 cars for the year 1925, an increase in 1927 over 1926 of 28 per cent. It is also interesting to note that notwithstanding the material increase in volume of General Motors business, cars in the hands of dealers at the close of 1927 were practically the same as a year ago, indicating a more favorable turnover, as evidenced by the close relationship between dealers' sales to consumers and General Motors sales to dealers for the year 1927.

Flight Delayed.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Harry J. Brooks, who flew here from Spartanburg, S. C., in a Ford flivver plane, today again delayed his departure for detroit because of heavy snow and low visibility. His departure will be indefinite.

Mechanical Hand Devised.

After years of study, James Smith, a Scotchman, has invented a mechanical hand that will help the crippled. He says that with it "people who have lost one or both hands will be able to compete in the industrial market with those fully equipped by nature." By using it, clerks will be able to write and laborers to use pick and shovel, he declares. The device is made of white metal, possesses fingers and thumb of spiral wire, and a "grip" is given by merely stretching the arm.

MANY JAPANESE VISIT CADILLAC PLANT

During the year 1927 more persons visited the plant of the Cadillac Motor Car company, Detroit, from the far-off islands of Japan and the island continent of Australia than from the Dominion of Canada.

There were 26 foreign countries from which travelers singly and in groups came to see the birthplace of the car which is familiar on their home streets. Included were industrial leaders, mrechants, bankers, journalists and students, many of them traveling under the auspices of the United States department of commerce. The Cadillac plant is found by them to be an excellent laboratory for a study of precision methods as applied to quantity production.

Leading the list by a wide margin was Germany, whence during the year came a number of well-organized groups for a systematic study of American manufacturing methods. From the Antipodes came the next largest throngs—Australian journalists and students of economics. They were particularly interested in American industrial life as it affects the welfare of the worker—in his work and in his home.

Other countries largely represented by visitors were France, England, Switzerland, Brazil, Russia, Scotland, Columbia, New Zealand adn Puerot Rico. Groups of engineering students from various colleges have made the plant the basis of practical study, some of them remaining for a day or more for instruction under specialists. The foundries and metallurgical department were visited by steel men and delegates to the convention of the American Society for Steel Treating.

The Cadillac plant is particularly well adapted for showing the contrast between European and American methods, parts manufactured to such close limits of precision that they fitted exactly without any hand preparation. A group of thoroughly trained men is maintained by the company to point out and explain each operation.

Postpone Action.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Final action on the Walsh resolution recommending congressional investigation of the public utilities industry was postponed today until Monday by the senate interstate commerce committee.

TEW IS IN CHARGE OF GOODRICH SALES

In addition to his position as first vice president of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company, James D. Tew has now been placed in entire charge of all sales divisions of the company, according to an announcement at Akron. Mr. Tew's title will be first vice president and general sales manager.

Although Mr. Tew has long been recognized as an expert on rubber manufacturing, he also has taken an interest in all divisions of the organization pertaining to sales, and in recent years he has taken an active part in the selling and merchandising programs of the company.

There are few men in the rubber industry who have made a more comprehensive research into its problems than James D. Tew. He is admitted to be a leading authority on every phase of the business—from the production of tires and the thousands of other rubber products which Goodrich manufacture, to their distribution and retail sales outlets.

Mr. Tew began in the Goodrich factory at Akron in 1906. Twelve years later he was superintendent of the tire division of the entire plant; 1925 found him assistant works manager and a year later he was advanced to the position of works manager. Soon after attaining this position he was elected to the board of directors of the company and in October, 1927, he was elected to the offtice of first vice president.

James D. Tew was born in Jamestown, N. Y., May 2, 1882. He prepared for college in the Jamestown schools and later at St. Pauls, Concord, N. H. In the fall of 1901 he entered Harvard university and was graduated from there with the degree of bachelor of science in mining.

The following other promotions were made in the Goodrich company: C. E. Cook to general manager of sales, mechanical, footwear and druggists' sundries division; H. C. Miller to general manager of tire sales, automotive division; L. A. McQueen to general manager of tire sales, dealers' and distributors' division.

ASSOCIATION MEETS FEBRUARY SECOND

Plans for a big, enthusiastic membership meeting of the Atlanta Automobile association have been completed for the evening of Thursday, February 2, 6:30 p. m. dinner, civic room of the Ansley hotel.

The main feature of the meeting will be an address by Ray C. Small, on the subject of "Development of Motors and Modern Shop Practices." Mr. Small is one of the big, international figures among automotive engineers, and the Atlanta association feels very fortunate in securing him for this address. He has addressed large gatherings throughout America on this subject, and wherever he has spoken his address has been received most enthusiastically.

The Atlanta Automobile Service Managers' association, made up service managers, are abandoning their own separate meetings for this particular work, and are jointly sponsoring the big meeting on February 2.

In addition to the address by Mr. Small there will be a splendid course dinner, a musical entertainment, and other features to add to the pleasure of the occasion.

The 1923 officers of the Atlanta Automobile association are:

H. H. Alexander, president; Jack Phinizy, first vice president; Sam D. Katz, second vice president; John Hargrave, third vice president; T. P. Hicks, secretary; S. B. Dodge, treasurer; C. V. Hohenstein executive secretary.

FRANKLIN SPORT MODELS POPULAR

Distinctive among the fine cars built to appeal strongly to those desiring sports atmosphere in their motor cars, Franklin offers a variety of models in moth open and closed bodies that have attracted especial attention.

All sport models are powered with the larger Airman air-cooled engine and are capable, it is claimed, of fast continuous travel without fatigue to engine or passengers. Four wheel hydraulic brakes, developed by Franklin engineers, assure smooth, positive deceleration.

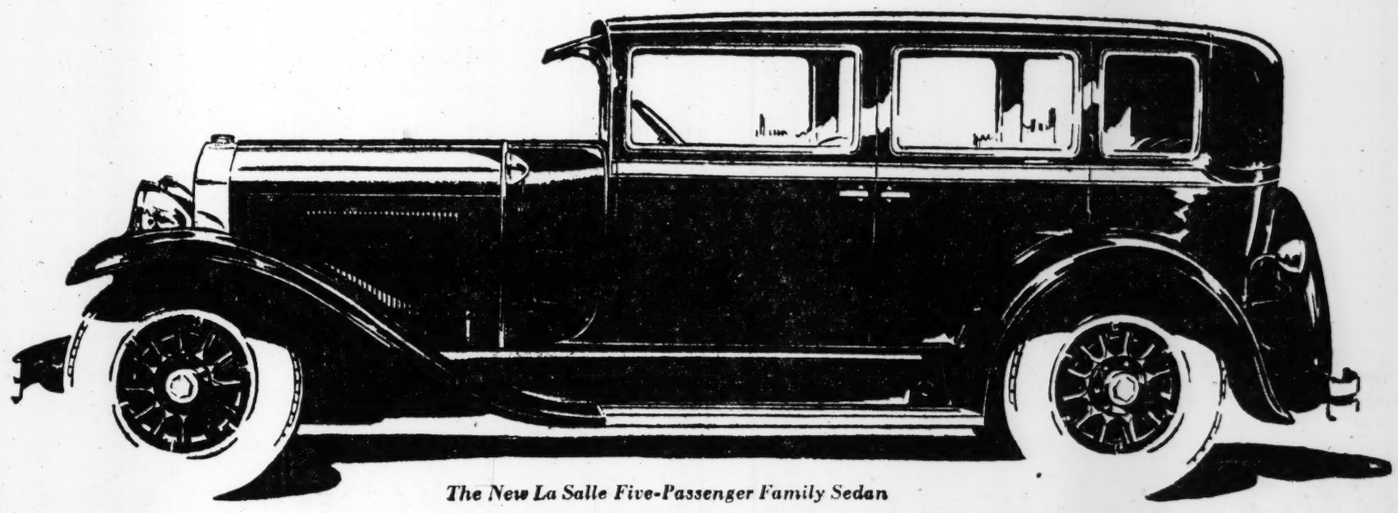

The Sport Touring, mounted on the long 28-inch wheelbase chassis, presents the long graceful lines of a thoroughbred racer. Front and tonneau windshields are fully adjustable.

When Colonel Lindbergh was offered his choice of Franklin cars, he selected the Sport Sedan. The features of this car have been carried over in the Airman this year. This car is the close-coupled, club type and has an over-all height of 71 inches. Low, loungy seats, emphasize the rakish proportions of the car. An all-metal, water-and-dust-proof trunk is provided for touring luggage, and adds to the symmetry of the whole.

The Convertible Coupe is distinctive and practical. It converts easily from a closed to a sports car. The single wide seat accommodates three people comfortably while the rumble seat accommodates two. Space for golf clubs is provided in a separate compartment which is accessible through a small door in the right, rear side.

Probably the raciest car in appearance of the series is the Sport Runabout, seating two or four persons, as desired. A new style top affords ample protection and is readily collapsible. Space for golf clubs, as in the Convertible Coupe, is accessible through a small door in the rear deck. Pig grain leather is used for upholstering.

The dog-fish salmon is a new rival of the cod, since scientists have found that the liver of the dog-fish yields an oil as rich in vitamin D as cod liver.

The New La Salle Five-Passenger Family Sedan

Cadillac-Built, 8-Cylinder Engine—Brilliant Performance—Lower Prices

In addition to the striking beauty and arresting modishness of La Salle bodies, the one outstanding feature that has caused Cadillac's companion car to become so quickly popular is its brilliant performance.

This results from the famous Cadillac-built, 90-degree, V-type, eight-cylinder engine with which the La Salle is powered—an engine that has had the most remarkable record of success in the quality-car field.

More than 275,000 Cadillac owners have found this engine the one most consistently satisfactory answer to their demands for the utmost in fine motor car transportation. They have found its even flow of ample, effortless power, its freedom from vibration, its remarkable acceleration, its amazing smoothness resulting in a month-after-month satisfaction that nothing else can provide.

And now the La Salle—with this remarkable power plant developed to new heights of performance—is offered at substantially lower prices. When you inspect the La Salle ask to see the new models just added to the line. There are five: the five-passenger sedan; two-passenger business coupe; five-passenger coupe; five-passenger cabriolet sedan; and seven-passenger sedan—the latter three on a 134-inch wheelbase.

Every La Salle is complete with all modern equipment, much of which is usually obtainable on other cars only at extra cost, and including at the new lower prices, Winter Front, Lovejoy Shock Absorbers, Exclusively Designed La Salle Bumpers, Cowl Lamps, Cowl Band, Ventilators, Windshield Wiper, Cigar Lighter, Rear Vision Mirror, etc.

If you prefer to buy out of income, as nearly everyone does today, the General Motors plan is very liberal. The appraisal value of your car is, of course, acceptable as cash.

The La Salle is manufactured completely by the Cadillac Motor Car Company within its own plants.

SO ORIGINAL AND DIFFERENT that Comparisons are Impossible

FRANKLY, The Victory has left current practice so far behind that comparisons are impossible.

Conservative drivers will never really discover the car's astonishing resources.

They will delight in its pick-up and low gas needs—its comfort and streamline beauty.

But the magnificent, all-day speed of the car—its faultless smoothness over clods and cobbles—are thrills that await the adventurer!

Six powerful cylinders are six powerful reasons for this. A seventh vital reason is the basic Victory idea!

For the first time in motor car history, chassis and body are a unit. Floor and seats are built in the chassis. The wide Victory chassis frame replaces the customary body sill—and eliminates the customary body overhang. The body itself has only 8 major parts!

The result is 175 less pounds, 330 less parts; standard road and head clearance, yet a car that is extremely low, steady and safe—with a power plant stripped for instant and brilliant action!

And the smartest car at the price ever created!

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Hieatt Outlines Progress Made in Realty Business

The address of C. C. Hieatt, of Louisville, Ky., president of the National Association of Real Estate boards, at midwinter session of the association, which closed Friday in Houston, Texas, was a feature of the meeting, according to members of the delegation attending from Atlanta.

Extracts of Mr. Hieatt's talk follows:

"We have been experiencing, since 1921, a time of unprecedented activity in real estate and in building. Great areas of the country have undergone a tremendous development. They have become new real estate frontiers.

"Our nation within these same years has passed over a great dividing line. The census shows it to be no longer a nation predominantly rural, but instead a nation predominantly of urban communities. Population pressure is piling our cities skyward.

"The spectacular rapidity of these changes has given people an unprecedented interest in real estate as an investment.

Becomes Profession.

"These years, and particularly the last five years, have been years in which real estate boards have come to a new consciousness of what could be done to make the most intelligent use of our land resources. They have begun to gather a vast body of facts as to real estate and its trends. They have begun to build a literature of real estate, which would open the accumulated experience of leaders to the use of their business fellows. They are imposing self-made regulations as to the ethics involved in real estate transactions. They are developing their knowledge of real estate values, their acquaintance with the shifting of a city's use zones, and their ability to estimate a building rent roll before its foundation cassions are sunk. Through such accumulation of specialized information they have brought the business of real estate to the status of an emerging profession. They have taken the lead in framing legislation that would safeguard real property development. The past year has been a year in which we have soundly consolidated our gains in all these undertakings.

"Changes profoundly affecting real estate have been included in the federal revenue bill of 1928 as the bill has passed the house and will shortly come before the senate. While they do not affect tax rates they deal with considerations involving millions of dollars to the real estate interests of the country.

"They include:

"(1) Definite exemption of real estate boards from federal income taxation.

"(2) Privilege of making return on the installment basis for real estate sales wherever the initial payments do not exceed 40 per cent of the selling price.

"(3) Extension to cooperative apartment owners as home owners the right to deduct for interest or tax payments on apartment homes.

"(4) Clarification to some extent of the status of real estate syndicates and trusts as to whether taxable as trusts or as corporations.

"(5) Provision that the seller of real estate who makes in the contract of sale an obligation for future purchase be permitted to deduct from his return an allowance for this future liability.

New Legislature.

"McFadden's banking act enables national banks for the first time to make five-year loans on both urban and farm real estate. Some $1,181,000,000 is expected thus to be made available for real estate investment. Uniform state mortgage act, adopted by the national conference of commissioners on uniform state laws and endorsed by the American Bar association. Uniform state laws will enable investment capital piled up in one state to be drawn upon for real estate investment in other states.

"The United States supreme court in a case argued before it by the National Association of Real Estate boards sustained the California real estate license act. The decision is a notable victory for the principle of license legislation in that it specifically upheld the provision, now found in the laws of a number of states, making one act sufficient to bring a broker under license requirement.

"In order to safeguard the general public and the whole real estate business against unsound practices in the issuing of real property mortgage bonds, which, unknown seven years ago, are now issued at the rate of approximately $900,000,000 per year, the association has made definite and comprehensive recommendations to all houses issuing such bonds. The recommendations were made after long study and constitute a platform for property mortgage bond practice.

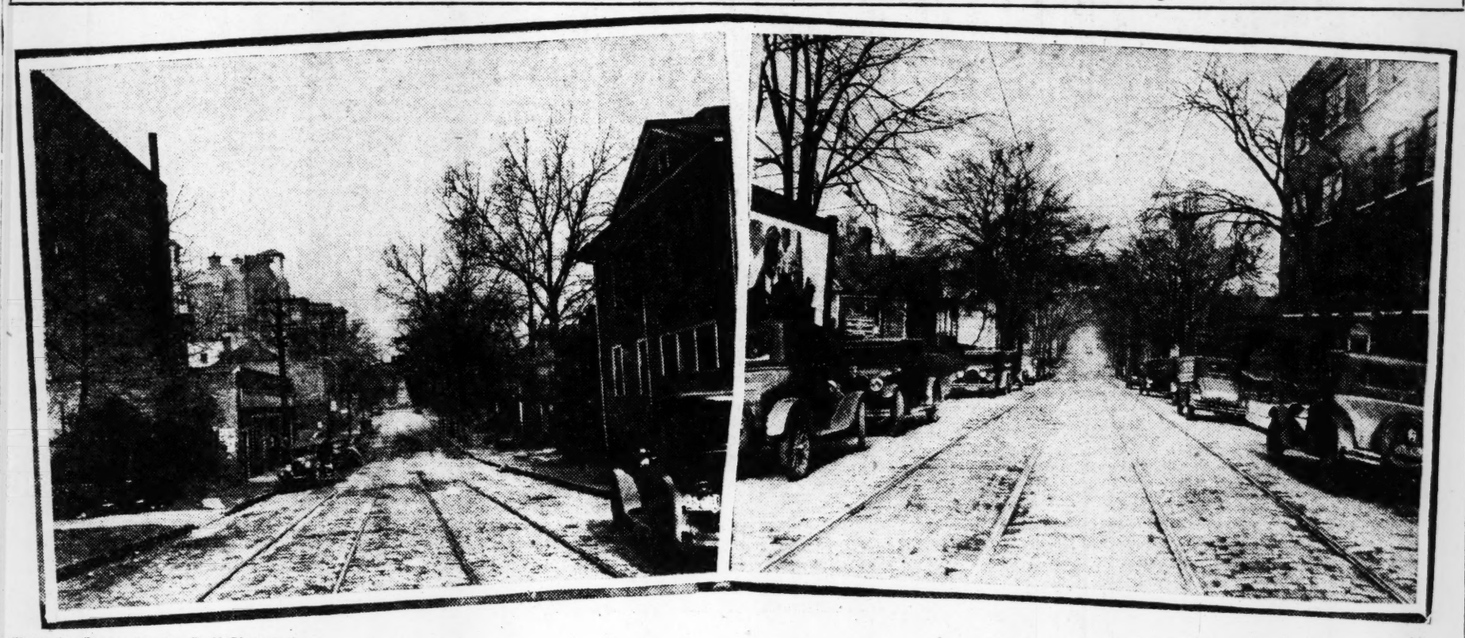

City's Fringe.

"Pointing out that haphazard development of the fringe outside the city's corporate limits is bound to entail expensive recutting of arterial streets, and the permanent blighting of valuable areas, the association has made definite recommendations to cities as to the form of control which should be set up over subdivision development in outlying regions. These recommendations have this year been adopted also by the National City Planning conference and by that body recommended to all cities. This joint action has been generally recognized as one of the largest accomplishments of the year in the advancement of sound development.

"Holding that outdoor advertising has a legitimate place, but should not be allowed to destroy community values we have set up 12 proposals for billboard control. As earnest of our spirit we have included proposals for voluntary limitation of size and placement of our own advertising signs. The proposals have already been incorporated in the regulations of some member boards.

"Realizing that business competition has become a giant struggle between commodity and commodity, the association is drafting a new series of advertisements to be used by member boards in bringing to public attention the security of real estate investment and the service of the realtor. A series already prepared has been used in 43 cities."

Last Unit of Courtland Street Soon To Be Improved

Views of the unpaved portion of Courtland street on which approximately $200,000 is to be spent in constructing an ideal thoroughfare. On the left is seen the rough and narrow section of Courtland street just south of North avenue. When the improvements are completed, the street will merge here into Juniper street, which is paved to Fifteenth street. The right hand photograph shows Courtland looking north from Forrest avenue. The street has been widened and paved up to this point, leaving only the section from Forrest to North avenue to be reconstructed in order to open one of the city's main arteries, linking Washington street, Courtland and Juniper into one boulevard.

GOLDMAN CLOSES $200,000 LEASES

Two Spring street locations, a double store on Peachtree street and an Edgewood avenue location, all important commercial sites, figured in recent leases aggregating $200,000, and handled by Moe Goldman, manager of the business lease department of J. H. Ewing and Sons, prominent realtors. The lease transactions were among the largest in aggregate to be announced in some time.

A group of important leases were announced by Mr. Goldman less than a month ago. With the new ones this shows a steady tendency toward maintenance of the large lease volume that is regularly turned by the Ewing concern executive.

The storeroom at 109 Peachtree street was leased for a long term of years to the United Shoe Repairers, a new firm for Atlanta, but one that is well-known in other large cities. The location is being remodeled and when completed will be one of the most modern shoe repair, shining and hat cleaning shops in the south. The United system of shoe repairing has the workmen operating in the window so the public can watch the work.

The shop will also have a unique shoe shining system and will have special parlors for the convenience of women. The store leased by United Shoe Repairers is L-shaped with the adjoining space leased to Nalpe, Inc., jewelers, as was previously announced by Mr. Goldman.

Mr. Goldman also leased the storeroom at 120 Spring street, N. W., for a term of years to the Meisel Tire company, of Cleveland, Ohio, which operates a chain of retail tire stores throughout the country. The company is noted for tire sales on the time payment plan. Its location is in the heart of the automobile section on Spring street, between Walton and Luckie streets.

Another one of the transactions involves the storeroom at 181 Spring street, N. W., which was leased to the American-LaFrance and Foamite corporation, for a term of years. The lessee is perhaps the largest manufacturer and distributor of fire extinguishers in the world.

Mr. Goldman also leased the location at 10 Edgewood avenue to J. L. Morgan and company, to be used for private banking and dealing in loans and notes.

Other leases closed by Mr. Goldman were not announced for publication in accordance with requests of the tenants, he stated. Mr. Goldman, who is one of the most progressive lease men in Atlanta, is responsible for bringing many new concerns to this city. His real estate activities are extended over this section, throughout which he is prominently identified with chain store leases.

Mourners Pay To View Burial And Drink Rum

Hammond, Ind., January 28.—(AP) The story of how two brothers profited by the funeral of another brother by selling liquor to the mourners and charging them $3 each to ride in the funeral cortege was told in court today in the suit of John Jasnowski, an undertaker, who filed suit to collect the funeral expenses.

Frank Puskowski, one of the brothers, said Felix, the other brother, should pay the cost since Felix made money by charging mourners to ride in the cortege. But Felix said Frank made $150 by selling them liquor so he should pay. The case was continued.

PEACE IN INDUSTRY MOVEMENT PLEASES PRINCE OF WALES

Birmingham, England, January 28, (AP)—The Prince of Wales set the seal of his approval on the "peace in industry" movement here tonight when, in the presence of a brilliant company gathered at the annual dinner of the Birmingham Jewelers and Silversmiths' association, he expressed the greatest satisfaction in noting that employers and employed had come to see that their fundamental interest in large production and thriving trade were identical.

The prince said a recent friendly meeting of representatives of the employers and the trade unions council gave the strongest reason to hope that a new era of prosperity was opening.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC OPERATING INCOME SHOWS INCREASE

St. Paul, Minn., January 28.—(AP) Net railway operating income on the Southern Pacific railway in December increased $130,630 as compared with December, 1926, according to the December report of revenues and expenses filed with the I. C. C. today.

The total net railway operating income for December, 1927, was $2,077,664 while in the corresponding month of 1926, it was $1,947,034.

For the twelve months of 1927 the net railway operating income was $22,592,837 while in 1926 the total was $24,213,700, a decrease for 1927 of $1,620,862.

All Appraisals By Board Mount To $40,000,000

A meeting of members of the general appraisal committee for Thursday afternoon, February 2, at 4:30 o'clock in the office of the Atlanta real estate board, has been announced by A. B. Cates, chairman.

The general appraisal committee of the real estate board is composed of 45 members, having one, or more, representatives from each firm member. Each member of this committee is qualified and considered to be efficient in appraising certain classes of real estate in the city of Atlanta.

Chairman Cates states that every member of the committee will be notified by letter, and he is anxious that a full attendance be had as the appraisal work for the year will be discussed and other important matters pertaining to steps that can be taken to make the appraisal department of the real estate board more efficient in the issuing of official board appraisals.

"The growth of the appraisal department of the board has been outstanding during the past four years," Mr. Cates stated. "This is evidence that the board appraisals are filling a need in the realm of real estate in Atlanta in offering a system and source where accurate valuations as to market values of real estate can be had.

"During the past four years the board has appraised between $35,000,000 and $45,000,000 worth of property in Atlanta. The largest appraisal made during this time was one involving $6,000,000 worth of securities.

"Clients during the last four years include trust companies, banks, state courts, county, city of Atlanta, United States courts, federal government, war department, large bond houses, estates and a large number of property owners."

Frank C. Owens, president of the real estate board, states that present indications are that appraisals for 1928 will surpass those of last year, and he urges each member of this committee to attend this meeting, as the real estate profession is advancing to such a stage it is impossible for the real estate man to be progressive in the business without knowing modern and practical methods of ascertaining true values.

Atlanta Realtors Launch Drive for New Members

The membership committee of the Atlanta Real Estate board held a meeting at the office of the board Wednesday morning, January 25, at 11 o'clock. According to Frank C. Owens, president, indications at the meeting revealed that a large number of new members would be secured for the Real Estate board during the year.

R. W. Evans, chairman of the membership committee, states that plans and a program of operation for the committee to carry out during the year in securing new members was discussed and adopted. A list of over 45 prospective members was compiled and the committee was subdivided into groups of two members each, who were assigned prospects to call upon for the purpose of securing applications for membership.

A detailed brief covering the policies and program of work of the Real Estate board for the year 1928 was mailed to all prospective members so as to give each an idea of what the each organization intends to do for the members and the real estate business during the coming year.

The following new members of the Atlanta Real Estate board were reported and acted upon: Firm members—Keenan & Chambers, Inc., Healey building; Johnson Realty Auction company, Wynne-Claughton building; Thomas W. Jackson, Fourth National Bank building. Class B members—W. J. Hogan, Jr., with Rankin-Whitten company; Cone Maddox, with Ward Wright company; Julien Binford, Jr., with M. C. Kiser company. Affiliated members—Pearce Matthews and George W. Wilson, both attorneys in the Candler building.

A quota of 60 new members has been alloted to the membership committee for this year. Chairman Evans states that another meeting will be held at the office of the board next Wednesday morning for the purpose of each subcommittee making a report on the prospects that were assigned to

MORRIS COMPANY SETTING RECORD

After entering into 1928 with a record-breaking pace by starting construction on five homes for owners during the first two weeks, F. P. and George J. Morris has clinched a new volume record for January by repeating the notable achievement of the first half of the month. The recent negotiations bring the total home construction business for January this far to more than $63,000.

This was revealed in announcement by Keller F. Melton, sales manager for the F. P. and George J. Morris building department, of a list of new contract purchasers for whom homes are to be built by his concern. Since giving out the list of clients of the Morris building department, for whom residences were started in construction between the first of this year and the middle of January, Mr. Melton's department had closed four more building contracts and was on the verge of concluding a fifth when this announcement was made.

The Morris building department will erect a two-story brick residence in Druid Hills for F. E. Lineback, of Emory university. The home will be of English type architecture and will contain five bedrooms and two baths in addition to other appointments. A novel feature of the dwelling, Mr. Melton pointed out, will be a bedroom on the first floor.

Another construction job called for in one of the new contracts closed by the Morris building department is the erection of a home for Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Frank, proprietors of Fairview Greenhouses. The residence is to be a six-room bungalow of English architecture and brick veneer construction. It will be located on East Lake drive.

F. P. and George J. Morris will build a five-room brick bungalow in Morningside for R. R. McNair, a manager of the Trinity Quality shop. The site of the residence is on Berwick avenue.

The fourth of the series to be closed during the past two weeks is for a residence for Dr. and Mrs. V. W. Osborne. It will be erected on Forrest road, in Linwood, and will be a six-room, English type bungalow.

Construction on these homes is to start immediately. Plans outlined by the Morris building department for its 1928 construction program call for considerable increase over last year's volume. Notwithstanding this increase, January will close with the department far ahead of its anticipated program.

NATIONAL BANKS QUADRUPLE REAL ESTATE HOLDINGS

Tremendous growth in the amount of real estate securities held by national banks is indicated in statistics which have been compiled by the Chase National bank.

In the 10 years since 1918 the national banks of the country have increased such holdings from $185,117,000 to $725,452,000. This is almost a quadrupling of the 1918 total. Member banks of the federal reserve system have in the same period increased their holdings of real estate securities from $460,586,000 to $2,930,000,000. In other words, they are holding more than six times the amount that they held 10 years ago.

Report on Metals For Week Shows Heavy Copper Buying

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Many steel mills were reporting increased specifications against contracts the past week and in turn this was said to have brought about a larger production rate. However, there was a disposition in some quarters to view the market as disappointing as to the volume of new business. Railroad business placed so far this month is well below that of December. Structural steel contracts and orders from automobile builders and manufacturers of automobile parts increased materially. Pittsburgh mills advanced all wire products, while in other directions prices were quite steady. Pig iron was steady and fairly active.

Heavy buying of copper for foreign account developed early in the week, although domestic buying failed to materialize to any extent. The foreign demand tapered off somewhat later, but producers were encouraged by the heavy earlier sales to hold domestic prices steady at 14 1-8 cents delivered.

A small rally in tin early in the week failed to hold, the market reacting later with an absence of important consuming demand. Prices recovered against the close with offerings light. London was irregular.

Lead averaged steady and producers reported a good inquiry for January and February shipment. Resales offers of January shipment were said to be smaller.

Zinc was firm and consuming demand improved with the interest largely for January and February shipment positions. Ore prices were maintained. There was a moderate increase in stocks the first half of the month.

Antimony prices held about unchanged. Some inquiry was noted for spot and nearby delivery, but as a rule trade was not active.

Brokers' Loans Advance At Slower Pace Than Stock Values, Says Beers

Considerable hue and cry over the volume of brokerage loans has arisen during recent weeks even resulting in an unprecedented statement of reassurance from the white house, says the February issue of H. & B. Beer's Graphic Market Review. Most of the alarmist views concerning these brokerage loans, however, fail to consider that it is the relative rather than the actual size of such loans which is significant. Actually regarded, the recent volume of loans for stock market purposes has appeared large. When seen in their proper relative light, however, they have not appeared to be at a dangerously high level.

Figures recently compiled by the New York Stock exchange's statistical department show changes in brokerage loans and stock market values. The actual figures after being reduced to percentages reveal that the increase in brokerage loans from February, 1926, to December, 1927, was slightly more than 16 per cent. In this same period the total market value of all stock exchange listings increased nearly 20 per cent, while the total market value of stock listings alone jumped nearly 38 per cent. In actual volume, December brokerage loans amounted to only 4.28 per cent of all exchange listings in value and to only 8.43 per cent of total stock values. Both of these percentages are smaller than those evident two years ago.

Atlantic Coast Line Shows Big Increase In Operating Revenue

Wilmington, N. C., January 28.—(AP) A decline of approximately $17,000,000 in railway operating revenues of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad company for the year 1927 as compared with 1926 was revealed in a statement issued at the general offices of the company here today.

The statement also reveals a loss of approximately $7,000,000 for 1927 as compared with 1926 in net railway operating income. Railway operating revenues for 1927 were $80,452,526 and for the previous year were $97,158,815. Net railway operating income for 1927 was $10,273,934 and for the previous year $17,558,723.

A loss of more than a million and a half dollars in railway operating revenues for the month of December as compared with the same month in 1926 was revealed in the report. The railway operating revenues for December, 1927, were $6,600,911 as compared with $8,310,595 for the same month in 1926. More than a million dollar decline in net operating income in December, 1927, as compared with December, 1926, also was revealed. December, 1927, showed a net income of $601,765 and in the same month in the previous year revealed total of $1,658,834.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Leaf tobacco held by manufacturers and dealers January 1 aggregated 1,920,652,458 pounds compared with 1,806,747,105 pounds October 1, 1927, and 1,841,645,426 pounds January 1 last year, the census bureau announced today.

Chewing, smoking, snuff and export types totaled 1,519,935,181 pounds compared with 1,376,270,563 pounds October 1, 1927, and 1,416,412,271 January 1 last year.

FLORIAD WOMEN DEMAND DRY PANKS

St. Petersburg, Fla., January 28.—Under the auspices of the Woman's National Committee on Law Enforcement, a mass meeting of 1,270 women from 36 states last night adopted resolutions demanding that each party include in its national platform a plank in favor of the eighteenth amendment and its honest enforcement and also declared in favor of impeachment of senators, representatives and judges who make mental reservations when taking the oath to support the constitution.

S. A. L. CONSOLIDATES FLORIDA DIVISIONS

Savannah, Ga., January 28.—(AP)—In order to again centralize the supervisory forces of the Seaboard Air Line Railway company in Florida, announcement was made today of the consolidation of the north and east Florida divisions, and of the west and south Florida divisions.

The consolidated north and east Florida divisions will now be known as the north Florida division, with headquarters at Tampa and the combined west and south Florida division and Tampa terminals will be known as the south Florida division, with offices also at Tampa.

Funeral for Wall.

Richmond, Va., January 28.—(AP) Railroad officials from many of the great systems of the country will come to Richmond tomorrow for the funeral of Garrett B. Wall, vice president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway company, who died Thursday night in St. Augustine, Fla.

Cotton Briefs.

New Orleans, January 28.—The morning decline in the cotton market Friday was attributed to the advance in the rediscount rate from 3½ to 4 per cent by the Richmond Federal Reserve bank. Traders feared that the initiative set by the Richmond bank would be followed by the regional banks at Atlanta and Dallas. Higher money might, it was feared force liquidation in spot cotton.

A cable from Osaka, Japan, to the Southern Cotton company says the Japanese Spinners' association had decided to continue the 23 per cent mill curtailment now in force to the end of October. Such action would, it was said, decrease considerably Japan's importation of both old and new crop American cotton. This news was the main cause of the afternoon slump in the market on Friday.

Although the weekly statistics were fairly bullish, according to ring traders, they exerted little influence on the market. The most bullish statistics development was said to be the week's decrease of 112,000 bales for the corresponding week last year.

Corpus Christi, Texas, reports exports of 2,614 bales to European ports Friday.

Worth street, the New York dry goods center, reports a larger business this week in cotton goods with sales of print cloths totalling several million yards.

Although domestic cotton goods markets reported more activity in yesterday's trading, the total week's sales of print cloths reported by Fall River reached only 35,000 pieces.

The total amount of cotton on shipboard in the United States ports awaiting clearance is now 115,922 bales against 185,795 bales on this date last year.

TEAR GAS DEVICE WORKS BUT FAILS TO STOP ROBBERY

Chicago, January 28.—(United News.)—Albert Friske, annoyed by repeated visits of bandits, installed tear gas guns in his jewelry store. When he pressed a button, tear gas bombs would make the store uninhabitable for bandits, he was assured.

Today bandits held up the store. Friske pressed the button. The tear gas bombs filled the store with acrid odors. But the bandits stole $5,600, bound Friske, a clerk and a customer, and escaped. Friske and his fellow victims stayed with the tear gas and wept and wept.

OSNABURG GROUP OF COTTON MEN DISCUSS COSTS

The Osnaburg group of cotton textile men met here Saturday with representatives from six states present. The meeting was presided over by J. C. Fargo, of Augusta, Ga., chairman of the advisory committee.

It developed that on account of the low demand for Osnaburg fabrics, the mills generally are not obtaining cost of production for their goods, and that there has been a very marked reduction in production. Many of the representatives present stated their mills had for the time being stopped manufacturing Osnaburgs altogether.

There was extensive discussion of the matter of accurate cost accounting as applied to Osnaburgs, and it was understood that the institute would send at once to the Osnaburg mills an analysis of cost principles in their relation to the manufacture of Osnaburgs.

SNOW NOT FEARED AS DELAY FACTOR IN TIME FLIGHT

Richmond, Va., January 28.—(AP)—Snow falling in Richmond last night and today will have no effect on the attempt to be made here Tuesday by Clarence Chamberlin and Roger Q. Williams to break the world's endurance flight record, it was announced by airport officials. The runways at Byrd airport have been rolled with an eight-ton roller and no amount of snow will put them out of condition, it was stated.

The fliers are expected here tomorrow from New York in the Bellanca plane they will use in the flight.

SOUTH TO BOLT IF SMITH RUNS, SAYS KENTUCKIAN

Indianapolis, Ind., January 28.—(AP)—The opinion that the south will not vote solidly for the democratic ticket as in the past if Governor Smith, of New York, is nominated, was expressed by the Rev. E. Y. Mullins, of Louisville, Ky., president of the Southern Baptist Theological association and the World's Federation of Baptist Churches, here last night. Addressing the Indiana Prohibition association here, he said:

"The south won't stand for him or any wet. I'm not talking about his religion. But he is a wet, a nullificationist and a protege of Tammany. That will not go in this country."

CHEMIST CLAIMS SECRET OF VALUE TO DYE INDUSTRY

Melbourne, Australia, January 28.—(AP)—What is described as a remarkable discovery which is likely to revolutionize the dyeing industry was made public today by the Melbourne Herald, which attributes the discovery to G. F. Lloyd, of Melbourne, who has been experimenting on the problem fifteen years.

The paper said that Lloyd is able to transform colored fabrics to other hues by immersion in a transparent fluid, the nature of which is a secret. Even blacks are turned to light hues, it was said, without the slightest injury to the most delicate material.

FARMER IS HEDL FOR AX MURDER

Dothan, Ala., January 28.—(AP)—W. S. Collette, 44, a farmer, was held in the county jail here today on a charge of murder in connection with the death of B. Hall, 24, whose head was almost severed with a blow from an ax.

Sheriff C. J. Rollins said the slaying occurred after an argument between Hall and Collette concerning the wages of Hall's younger brother, employed by the accused man.

MODEL HOME TO BE BEAUTIFIED BY PLANTS FROM SIRRON'S

Andrew Auton, Well-Known Landscaper, Is in Charge

Constitution's Demonstration Project in Haynes Manor Near Completion; Schedule Calls for Furnishing and Opening Dwelling by February 12.

BY ERNEST RUBIN.

In following progress of The Constitution model home being erected on Peachtree-Battle avenue, Haynes Manor, your attention up to the present time has been focused on the home itself and actual construction phases, with the single exception of selecting the site.

Now that the home is nearing completion plants for beautifying the home and lot have been selected from Sirron Nurseries, Inc., and under supervision of Andrew Auton, well-known landscape architect, this phase of the work will be executed in the masterly fashion characterizing the entire undertaking.

You will recall that the purpose of the model home series, sponsored by The Constitution cooperating with the Home Owners institute, in which the second Atlanta residence is being erected by the Atlanta Realty and Construction company, master home builders, is to present an object lesson to prospective home-builders and home-buyers of this community in the principals that make for homes of enduring beauty, comfort, convenience, service and economy.

Follows Same Principals.

Important among these principals, as you have noted in previous accounts, was the employment through out of standard nationally-known building materials obtained from sources of well-tried merit, the selection of a capable architect to draw plans and specifications and of an expert builder to carry these into effect. Selection of the site in Haynes Manor was another feature of importance in demonstrating the best principals for guiding the homeseeker. Now the ornamentation of this site and the home that has been built upon it presents one of the final items of importance in The Constitution's undertaking to encourage the erection and enjoyment of better homes.

Here, too, you will find the same principals employed that were observed in constructing the dwelling Long-lasting beauty, domestic comforts and conveniences are to be sought. The expense, time and labor of building a model residence must not be wasted through lack of wisdom in the climax, which in this case is lanscaping. Standard materials, or the equivalent, obtained from the most reliable sources, expert planning and supervision and skilled workmanship are features that should be secured if the greatest ultimate economy and satisfaction are to be obtained in landscaping.

Plans Already Drawn.

These problems have been solved for the model home by selection of the Sirron nurseries to furnish all material necessary, and of Mr. Auton to plan and supervise the entire project. Both the Sirron nurseries and Mr. Auton have been outstanding factors in providing Atlanta and its surrounding residential sections with landscaping achievements that are not to be excelled. Complete plans for landscaping The Constitution second model home have already been drawn by Auton. Actual planting is to start this coming week.

When you visited the home during the past week you undoubtedly noticed the speed being made in grading the model home lot, preparatory to the finer details of landscaping. At the same time finishing touches were being added to the dwelling on the inside, where there remains to be done papering of walls, scraping of floors, painting of the kitchen, installation of fixtures and equipment and some minor details. The home is then to be furnished to suit the latest and most approved mode, after which it will be opened for public exhibition over a period of four weeks. The date scheduled for opening the home, barring any unforeseen delay, is February 12, just two more weeks.

If you had met Mr. Auton at the model home when he was making a detailed survey of the lot in order to lay his plans, he would have told you that in landscaping there is first to be considered the factor of utility, then of beauty in connection with use. The mastery of the work is seen when these two factors are combined to furnish an idyllic setting for the residence.

The landscaping plans, as explained by Mr. Auton have the driveway placed where it gives the best approach and where the grade is most suitable and safest. In this work the natural environs are, of course, the basis upon which improvements are to be made. The standing trees are a big asset, and nature suggests to leave the lower part of teh lawn as a broad open expanse.

The hillside lends itself beautifully to trailing junipers, jasmine, golden bells and fragrant honeysuckles. The terracing provides a variety of pleasing curves for the drive and walk with its rustic steps. The driveway tiled with tile furnished by B. Mifflin Hood company will harmonize notably with the house exterior. The planting as outlined in the plans of the master landscape architect will be used to soften and serve in complement to places otherwise uninteresting.

In Mr. Auton's work the house seems to become a part of nature, so beautifully are its lines tied to the ground and carried into those of the lawn by the effect of planting. In this model home you will find a wealth of material so arranged that it will be pleasing throughout the year and increasingly beautiful with the changing of seasons. Beauty in ors, habits, contrast of form and composition, with different forms, color, in flower and in fruit, as well as in its somber winter effect, are wrought by Mr. Auton's work and made doubly assuring by the use of plants, shrubbery and other materials from the Sirron nurseries.

Constitution Model Home in Haynes Manor

The Constitution's second model home being built by the Atlanta Realty and Construction company on Peachtree-Battle avenue in Haynes Manor. The structure is now nearly completed. Enhancement of its beauty will soon be effected by the planting of shrubbery and trees from Sirron nurseries under supervision of Andrew Auton, landscape architect.

Colonial Simplicity Reduces Construction Cost of Design

Modern Complete Home Has Charm of Old Restored Houses; Features Good Accommodation for Built-in Convenience.

BY L. PORTER MOORE,
President, Home Owners' Institute, Inc.

A modern, complete home of today, possessing the romantic charm and appeal of an old colonial farmhouse is offered in our plan No. 294-S. In its adherence to tradition this home gains the requisite taste in design by the same simplicity which makes it an economical house to build. The architects collaborating on this design were John Floyd Yewell, registered architect, of New York city, and John B. Wahlquist, registered architect, of Yonkers, N. Y. The actual space content is 26,000 cubic feet. The house contains seven rooms and two baths. The exterior is covered in Arkansas soft pine wide siding.

This plan is one winning fifth mention in an architectural contest conducted last year by "Pencil Points Magazine" and sponsored by the Arkansas Soft Pine bureau of Little Rock, Ark. More than 300 plans were submitted by designers all over the country.

The interior of the home carries out the colonial spirit with entire fidelity. Its living room corner fireplace with flanking bookshelves provides a retreat dear to the booklover's heart, and to all who enjoy the glow from the burning hearth. The arrangement, in line, of living and dining rooms enhances the sense of spaciousness in both.

Untold uses and conveniences suggest themselves for the unique covered passage between the garage and the first floor, opening, as it does, upon the flower and vegetable garden at the rear.

The kitchen, entry and laundry at the left side of the home occupy a large proportion of the down-stairs room space and well provide for the installation of such built-in features as the automatic electric refrigerator, the double drainboard, acid-resisting enameled sink and the built-in kitchen cabinet.

The placement of the two up-stairs baths and the down-stairs lavatory enhance the economy of the plumbing installation by eliminating unnecessary long runs of pipe.

Modification of the chimney so that one or both of the two large bedrooms at the right side of the house could be provided with fireplaces would be a simple matter. Another slight extension of the plan would double the capacity of the garage, in line with the present trend toward provision for a second car for the family.

Other conveniences suggested for inclusion are the automatic heat regulator and the built-in garbage incinerator.

Two covered porches provide out-of-door sleeping and living apartments during the warm weather, and might be economically inclosed for winter use.

The outline of specifications for this home as recommended by Home Owners institute is as follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be poured concrete or concrete blocks made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with water-proofing compound. Chimney of common brick; all flues lined. Fireplace selected brick; provide ash dump with clean-out door in cellar.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney, with receiving hopper door located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage and trash.

Carpentry—All framing lumber, exterior millwork and interior trim shall be of Arkansas soft pine, well seasoned and specified in accordance with the standard grading rules; edge grain soft pine, maple or oak floors; steel bridging for floors joists; interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required in detailed specifications.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all finishing hardware for doors and windows, for closets and casework. The contractor will furnish a correct list of hardware and is to put it on in a careful, workmanlike manner. All hardware on exterior openings to be of brass or bronze.

Casement Windows—Steel casement windows may be used at owners' option.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or wood lath. Insulating lumber or plasterboard may be used if desired by owner.

Metal Work—Gutters, rain pipes, valleys and flashing to be sixteen-ounce copper.

Roofing—Roof of asphalt, slate-surfaced, copperclad or asbestos shingles; to be laid in accordance with manufacturer's instructions.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion, with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready-mixed paint shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finish floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical Work—Complete system electric wiring from meter to all outlets, including panel boards, junction boxes and all other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Plumbing—A complete system and fixtures ready to use shall be provided, as shown on plans and in accordance with local regulations. Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal fired hot water heater. Where sewer connections are not available use of reinforced concrete septic tank recommended.

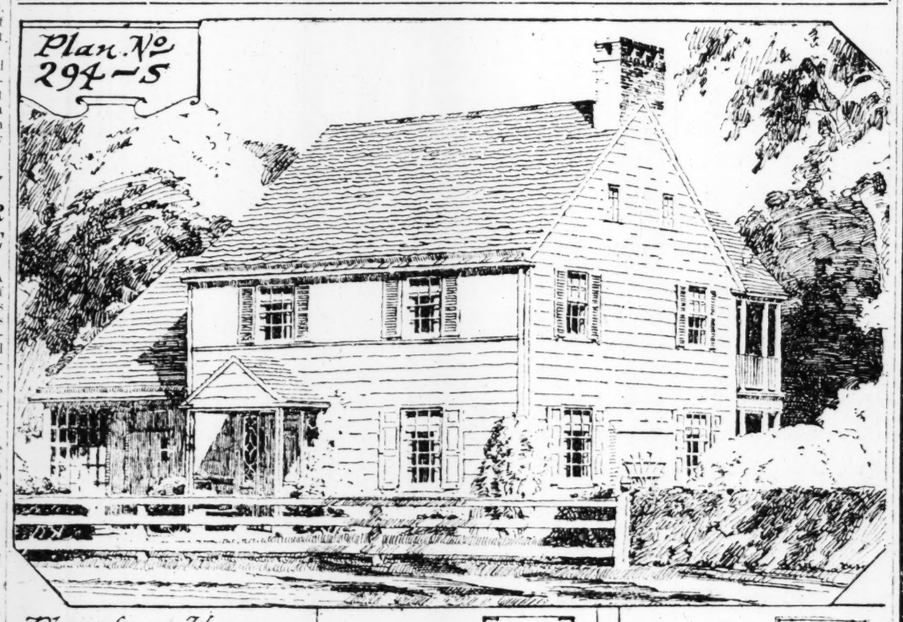

Tile Work—Tile floors and wainscot in bathrooms, with built-in china accessories.

Heating—Steam, hot air of hot water boiler; coal, oil or gas fired.

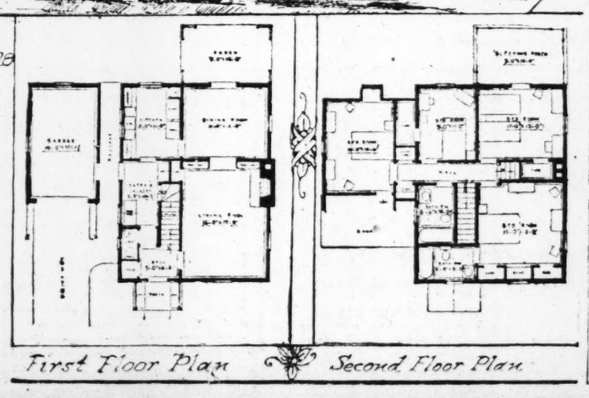

Temperature Control—Heat regulator with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control on boiler or furnace and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred) used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

7-YEAR LITIGATION OVER HUGE ESTATE ENDED BY COURT

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Litigation lasting seven years over the $10,000,000 estate of Amos F. Eno was ended today when a referee's recommendation for settlement was approved by Surrogate Foley. Eno died in 1915.

The will was contested in two trials and when a third trial was about to begin in June, 1922, Columbia university and other educational institutions named as beneficiaries settled amicably with the heirs-at-law out of court. Columbia received more than $5,000,000.

Among the relatives receiving more than $300,000 each were former Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania; Amos R. Pinchot, Antoinette E. Johnstone, Mary P. Steffanson and Florence C. Graves.

SINGERS TO HOLD UNIQUE CEREMONY TO HONOR SHUBERT

Vienna, January 28.—(AP)—Five hundred of Austria's best singers, carrying flaming torches, will march through darkened, tortuous streets of Vienna in the wee small hours of Tuesday. They will inaugurate the celebration of the 131st anniversary of the birth and the 100th anniversary of the death of Franz Schubert, whom many account the greatest classical song writer of all ages.

The singers, proceeding to the composer's old home in Walnut street, near the American legation, will, in reverently subdued voices, serenade the departed spirit of the king in song by chanting the moving strains of "The Night," which virtually was Schubert's farewell lyric.

MAY INVOLVE KLAN IN DYNAMITE PLOT ON LAKELAND HOME

Lakeland, Fla., January 28—(AP)—City and county authorities today were investigating circumstances surrounding the discovery early yesterday of three sticks of dynamite under the automobile of William R. Cade, lawyer, which had been parked at the side of his home. The fuse had burned about an inch before it was extinguished.

Neither Cade nor the police could advance a motive for the alleged attempt to blast the lawyer's home, but officers gave credit to reports that a split in the local Ku Klux Klan from which Cade is said to have recently withdrawn might furnish a clue.

LABOR SECRETARY CALLS AGED WORKER VALUED EMPLOYEE

Pittsburgh, January 28.—(AP)—A man or woman of 50 or 60 years of age is just as capable a worker as he or she was at 30, and perhaps more capable, even physically, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis told an assemblage of 2,000 veteran employees of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company at the fifteenth annual banquet of the veterans' association here tonight.

"The reason," said the secretary, "is that the years have brought the reward of experience and added skill. Instead of becoming a liability at 50 or 60, the intelligent worker is all the more an asset to his employer."

GEORGE M'CUE DIES IN CHATTOOGA, AGE 103

Summerville, Ga., January 28.—(Special.)—George McCue, believed to be the oldest man in Chattooga county, died Thursday night at the county farm, three miles west of this place.

McCue, who served as a Confederate soldier throughout the war between the states, claimed that he was born February 14, 1824, which would have made him 103 years old at the time of his death. It is said he has a son living at Gadsden, Ala., who is 85 years old.

Burial was in the county farm cemetery, in Dry valley, Friday.

U. S. Liquor Guests.

Toronto, January 28.—(AP)—Visitors from the United States, it has just been revealed, purchased 5,000 permits to buy liquor in Ontario from June 1 to November 1 last year. How much liquor they purchased is not known, but it is estimated they spent at least $8 each or a total of about $452,000.

FOUR ARE RESCUED FROM FLORIDA KEY; MAROONED 2 DAYS

Key West, Fla., January 28.—(United News.)—Castaways on a lonely Florida key for two days, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gorman, of Philadelphia, and Mr. and Mrs. David Shipley, of Newark, N. J., were rescued today, suffering from exposure.

The four chartered a fishing craft Wednesday. It sprang a leak and was beached on the isolated key.

NEGRO WHO CURSED WOMAN IS SHOT IN PISTOL BATTLE

Meridian, Miss., January 28.—(AP) Elbert Atkinson, 42 years old, is seriously wounded at a local hospital following a gun battle with Charley Grant, 19-year-old negro, at Panola, Ala., in which the negro was killed.

The shooting is said to have taken place when Atkinson attempted to chastise the negro for cursing Mrs. Atkinson.

BELGRADE SCOUTS ITALIAN WAR FEAR

Belgrade, January 28.—(AP)—A high Jugo-Slavian government official today told the Associated Press that there was not a particle of truth in the allegation published in Rome yesterday that the Jugo-Slav military manual, or indeed, any publication used in the Serbian army, instructs its officers to regard Italy as an enemy.

Nor are its officers urged in any way to take steps to retrieve Jugo-Slavia's lost territory, the official declared.

FASCISTI ORGAN DEPLORES ACTS OF JUGO-SLAVS.

Rome, January 28.—(AP)—The recent extension for six months of the Italo-Jugo-Slav treaty of friendship signed in 1924 today brought the comment from Foglio D'Ordini, official fascist organ, that Jugo-Slavia now has six months' leeway in which to modify her Italian policy.

Foglio D'Ordini in general lines follows the charges made yesterday in Giornale D'Italia that Jugo-Slavia is preparing for war and is encouraging her army recruits to look toward restoration of Jugo-Slav territories now under Italian, Hungarian, German and Bulgarian rule.

"All Jugo-Slavia patriotic celebrations seem to motivate turbulent anti-Italian, anti-fascist manifestations," says the paper.

Publication of this article in Foglio D'Ordini is felt in official circles to amount to a very definite statement of Italy's attitude regarding the frequent controversies which have arisen in recent years between Italy and Jugo-Slavia.

CONTROL OF GRADY BY EMORY URGED

Control by Emory university of all units of Grady hospital, including the white division over which two factions of doctors are now at daggers points, is urged in recommendations of Dr. E. C. Davis, president of the Fulton County Medical society, it was learned Saturday.

Not only would all divisions of the hospital be controlled by the university, but an expansion program calling for establishment of a graduate school of medicine in connection with the hospital and construction of a new unit for treatment of negroes would be adopted if recommendations of Dr. Davis were followed.

The society indorsed the recommendations, and at the same time laid plans to improve health conditions in Fulton county with a special view of reducing typhoid and diptheria. Plans also were made for the conference to be held here February 3, concerning control and treatment of influenza and pneumonia. Many notable southern doctors will attend the conference.

Davis Address.

Dr. Davis' address, in part, follows:

"Rid Fulton county of typhoid fever. We are holding too high a place in the records of our nation as to the number of cases of typhoid fever within our midst. This can be remedied entirely, if we act properly and scientifically. Personally, my belief is that many cases now reported as typhoid fever do not properly belong in this class, and should be accurately verified by proper laboratory tests before being entered upon our records. We still must regard this disease as one ascribable to filth and carelessness. Proper immunization, fly destruction, garbage can care and garbage disposal.—If these things are properly carried out there is no reason why we should not exterminate typhoid fever entirely from our midst.

"We could also get rid of diphtheria—with our added knowledge of toxin-antitoxin properly used, diphtheria may be reduced materially and ultimately entirely eliminated.

"I wish to call especial attention to preparations for a conference on influenza to be held in Atlanta February 3, 1928, to endeavor to improve methods for taking care of these diseases.

Addresses by Leaders.

"Addresses are to be made by leading men who have devoted their lives to the study of these diseases, the presidents and secretaries of the medical associations of our southern states, health officers of the southern states are to be invited, and an address by our governor, who will cooperate with us in the general improving of the health of the citizens of our state.

"Emory university should be the pride of every physician in the south, especially those in Fulton county, for its medical department means more to the Atlanta physicians than any other medical institution, except our own society. Emory must prove herself worthy by putting her curriculum up with the highest standards of the colleges of our country, and soon require a collegiate degree before admission to her medical department, as is being done by the most advanced medical schools of America, requiring also one year hospital service.

"If she does these things, then we in turn must aid in the procurement of material with which she can work, for she cannot hope to carry out such a pretentious plan without an abundance of clinical material with which to work. It is, therefore, our duty to see that Emory university be given the control unrestrictedly of both units of the Grady hospital, the white and the colored inclusive. This must be done without restrictions whatsoever, and the college allowed to work out the best plans for medical education. We well know that the clinicians must be taken care of in this rearrangement, and given ample opportunities for service and improvement.

"Grady hospital needs a new building, the colored unit almost demands a complete new edifice, erected primarily and permanently for a hospital and modernized accordingly. The present structure cannot be kept clean, sanitary or suitable for the purpose for which it was temporarily intended."

CLOCK GETS BLAME FOR PILOT'S DEATH

Washington, January 28.—(United News.)—The story of a clock that stopped, thereby probably causing the death of Captain Hawthorne C. Gray, noted airman, was told today by a set of grim statistics of the war department.

Gray's body was found in his crumpled balloon near Sparta, Tenn., after he ascended November 4, last, from Scott Field, Ill., and reached a record altitude of 42,470 feet. Both this record and a similar record made earlier were disqualified on technical grounds. The war department's report from a special board showed that all of Gray's instruments but his clock were carefully cleaned and oiled before being taken aboard. He soared to 42,470 feet and then began to valve. In the interval between 7:28 p. m., when he was at 39,000 feet, and the moment when he reached 29,000 Gray died, according to the department's deductions from his log.

Clock Blamed for Death.

And the stopped clock, which Gray naively noted had "frozen," was responsible, the department believed. Had it continued going, he would have been warned of danger for he would have known his oxygen supply—measured in hours—was near exhaustion.

"A clock was taken along, but it had not been cleaned of oil prior to the flight and it stopped at 3:17 p. m., due, no doubt, to the congealing of the oil," said the report. "The balloon at that time had reached an altitude of 30,000 feet, the temperature registering 35 degrees below zero Fahrenheit."

New Anti-Air Gun.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—A new three-inch anti-aircraft gun and mobile mount, considered by military men the most advanced weapon of its kind, has been designed by the ordnance department of the army and adopted by the war department.

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Weakness in foreign markets combined with continued unfavorable trade reports led to a renewal of heavy liquidation and southern selling in the cotton market today. Prices broke nearly half a cent, May contracts selling off to 17.55 or 45 points net lower. The market closed easy at the lowest figures of the day and movement, the general list showing net decline of 41 to 49 points.

The market opened easy at a decline of 21 to 27 points in response to the declines in Liverpool and in the market for Egyptian cotton at Alexandria. Offerings were very heavy, active months quickly showing net losses of about 25 to 30 points. This break brought in enough realizing by recent sellers or fresh buying for trade account to absorb selling and there were rallies of 9 or 10 points from the lowest in early trading. It seemed the lower level of prices was creating reactionary sentiment and there was buying of new crop months based on a theory that further declines would have a tendency to check increased planting this spring.

Demand failed to broaden much on the bulges, which met a renewal of selling, however, and the lowest prices of the day were reached in late trading, when July sold at 17.45 and October at 17.20. March sold off to 17.43, active months showing declines of about 208 to 236 points compared with the high prices touched on the advances late last month.

Liverpool was a heavy seller here early, while there was a further old long liquidation through commission houses, and a considerable volume of selling from the south which was supposed to include hedging against spot holdings. Part of the late selling probably represented liquidation or reselling of contracts bought on the opening decline.

Private cables said there had been heavy general liquidation in the Liverpool market owing to complaints of a poor spot demand and pessimistic Manchester advices. Cloth and yarn sales in Manchester were said to be small, buyers fearing lower prices and with curtailment of production in the American spinning section under consideration.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 116,000 bales against 186,000 last year.

COTTON DROPS $2.50 A BALE AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, January 28.—(AP)—A decline of nearly $2.50 a bale featured an active short Saturday session of the cotton market today due to much lower Liverpool cables than expected. March contracts opened at 17.35, 30 points cent down and although it rallied 15 points at one time on covering, it soon weakened again, dropping to 17.18, 47 points net down. The option closed at 17.20 with the general market steady, 31 to 47 points under the previous close.

Liverpool came in 10 to 16 penny points lower than due, private cables reporting a poor spot demand in the English market, liquidation and the uncovering of stop-loss orders. First trades here showed losses of 30 to 34 points.

The market eased off slightly after the start until May reached 17.27 and July 17.37, 35 points under yesterday's close. October contracts eased off only 19 points to 17.05. There was arally of 15 to 16 points about midsession on some week-end covering.

Prices soon weakened, however, on a report of freer offering of spots and a lowering of the basis. May dropped to 17.18 and July to 17.10, 42 to 44 points net down. The close was only 2 to 3 points above the lows.

Exports for the day, 9,168 bales.

Weekly Expert Review Of English Cotton Market

Manchester, England, January 19. (By Mail.)—The feature of interest in the market during the past week has been the proposals made by the spinning and manufacturing employees for bringing about an improvement in the state of trade in the Lancashire cotton industry.

For a number of weeks two special subcommittees of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners' association and the Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers' association have been going into the cost of production and at the beginning of the week these committees issued special reports, the two main conclusions of which were a reduction in the present standard list rates of the operatives of 25 per cent (which means a drop in the present wages of the operatives of 12 1-2 per cent) and that the nominal working week should be increased from 48 hours to 52 1-4. Although drawn up separately the two reports agree on all the main points and a point is made of the percentage wage cost. This cost is said to vary from 50 per cent to over 60 per cent of the total cost of production. It is interesting to note, however, that the Cotton Yarn association recently issued a statement which showed that the operatives' wages only account for 1 1-2 per cent of the total cost of the finished fabrics.

Little Loss to Workers.

The committees point out that a reduction in wages and an increase in working hours would bring little loss to the workers so far as actual earnings were concerned, as the increase in working hours would practically equalize the loss due to any reduction in piece price list rates, for it is expected that if the suggestions are carried out an increased amount of time will be worked in the mills and and weaving sheds.

The financial side of the spinning section is extensively dealt with and it is interesting to note that the spinners' federation has a scheme which is capable of adaptation by many companies.

Attention is drawn to the high costs of finishing, packing and shipping and both organizations state that the strongest representations should be made to the government to reduce expenditures on social services, that every influence should be exerted upon authorities to reduce municipal expenditures, that the trade union restrictions relating to cleaning and oiling which materially reduce production should be removed, that the bleaching, dyeing, printing, finishing, packing and any other organizations which have fixed standard charges should be asked to cooperate with spinners and manufacturers with a view to securing a reduction in their charges.

Oppose Longer Hours.

Although no official statement has been made by the operatives' organizations it can be expected that strong opposition will be given to both the wages cut and the longer hours. The operatives who number 500,000, take the two reports as indicating an attack upon wages, for it is pointed out, and this statement is emphasized by leading daily papers, that little hope can be expected of any reduction in any of the other charges mentioned.

Joint conferences between the leaders of the operatives and the employers will be held in Manchester next week. It is expected that the negotiations will be protracted and will probably extend over a few weeks.

With regard to the Manchester market itself the cloth demand has been more active and an encouraging turnover has taken place for India, chiefly in light bleaching cloths. There are signs of a larger trade being done at an early date, but of course, the outlook is rather uncertain owing to the wages crisis.

If the employers do not modify some of their proposals then a strike appears to be inevitable.

FINANCIAL REVIEW OF PAST WEEK

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Unmistakable evidence of stiffening credit conditions developed in this week's financial markets. The Chicago and Richmond federal reserve banks increased their rediscount rates from 3 1-2 to 4 per cent. In New York call and time money, bankers' acceptances and commercial paper rates advanced coincident with the heavy withdrawal of out-of-town funds and the further liquidation of United States government securities by Federal reserve banks.

The stock market broke sharply on the Chicago bank's increase, but recovered most of the lost ground in the ensuing rally. The recovery in prices was stimulated by unofficial assurance of treasury department officials tht an immediate increase in the New York Federal Reserve bank rate was unlikely, which seemed to be borne out by the retention of the 3 1-2 per cent rate for at least another week. Favorable trade and dividend news also had a bullish influence.

Speculative opinion was sharply divided as the week closed as to the ultimate market effect of the higher interest rates. Operators for the rise regarded the rediscount rate increases as reflecting local conditions and an increasing demand for commercial credit, while in other quarters there was a tendency to regard them, together with the further liquidation of United States government securities, as a warning against a further expansion of speculative credit. Brokers' loans showed a relatively small increase last week, but they are still more than a billion dollars above the total a year ago.

Sensational gains of 20 to 40 points above the year's lows were recorded by about a score specialties in which pools have been active. Bear traders who sold stocks short, particularly those in which the floating supply is small, were badly punished. A few soft spots cropped out during the week, but there were no unusually bad breaks such as have preceded most of the drastic reactions of the past.

Standard industrials moved up rather slowly and appeared to meet large offerings on the rallies, but developed strong support whenever threatened with selling attacks. Rails were sluggish due to the unusually poor nature of the December earnings reports, which show aggregate net operating income nearly 28 per cent below that of December, 1926. Special strength developed in Illinois Central common and preferred and Texas & Pacific, all of which touched new high records.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, January 28.—The cottonseed oil market continued active and easy today, closing at net declines of 3 to 5 points and at new low levels for the season. The easier trend was due to a renewal of liquidation and commission house selling in sympathy with the easiness of outside markets, especially cotton, lard and crude oil. Refiners bought March sales, 21,600 barrels. Prime crude, 7.75; prime summer yellow spot, 9.70. February closed, 9.70; March, 9.72; May, 9.82; July 10.05; August, 10.17.

New Orleans, January 28.—The market for cottonseed oil futures was still under pressure of liquidation today, owing to the decline in cotton and easier lard. Prime summer yellow oil closed at 8.55, down 10 points, and prime crude closed at 7.87@ to 8.00. Futures closed active and steady. February, 8.60; March, 8.68; May, 8.99; July, 9.20; September, 9.25.

GEORGIA LIVESTOCK SHOWS INCREASE

Numbers of all classes of live stock on farms January 1—with the exception of horses—show more or less increase over the corresponding date in 1927, according to the annual livestock report of the Georgia Cooperative crop reporting service.

For the first time since 1919, swine have materially increased over the previous year, estimated numbers on farms amounting to 1,424,000, as compared with 1,187,000 last year—a gain of 20 per cent. Until 1926, Georgia hogs had been steadily decreasing in numbers since the 1920 census year, but with a 7 per cent recovery last year and the present increase of 20 per cent, hog production is making considerable progress in regaining its former footing.

A swine survey in December showed an increase of about 12 per cent in number of sows farrowed in the fall of 1927, as compared with the fall of 1926, and a corresponding gain in the number of pigs born. The survey also indicated a 44 per cent increase in sows bred or to be bred for spring farrowing, as compared with the previous fall. Ordinarily, actual spring farrowing runs 15 per cent to 18 per cent under this intentions indication; but after making due allowance for this usual decline, a considerable increase in number of spring pigs over last spring seems assured.

Cattle have increased slightly over last year, the estimated number being 863,000 against 854,000, a gain of about 1 per cent. Heifers one to two years old, kept for milk, amount to 81,000, as compared with 77,000, and milk cows 346,000, against 343,000 for the previous estimate.

Horses have decreased from 46,000 to 41,000 (or 10 per cent) during the year. Mules, however, more than offset this reduction, gaining about 3 per cent—357,000 being the present estimate, compared with 347,000 last January. Taking workstock as a whole, the increase amounted to 5,000 head, or slightly over 1 per cent.

Number of poultry on farms is about 8 per cent over the estimate of one year ago. Increased interest has been attached to this phase of livestock production for several years, and the industry bids fair to continue its growth.

Estimates for the United States, excluding poultry, show that total live stock on farms have increased about 3 per cent from January 1 of last year. Swine and sheep are responsible, showing 8.4 per cent and 6.4 per cent gains, respectively. All cattle decreased 3 per cent; horses 4 per cent; and mules, 2 per cent. Milk cows increased nearly 1 per

The Day in Finance

Indications Are that the Stock Market Has Developed a Bad Case of Nerves, and Is Feeling Its Pulse Too Often.

New York, January 28.—One of the leading economists in this part of the country in talking to a gathering of business men here this week pictured American business as a "nervous invalid having its temperature and pulse taken every hour and running from one statistical psychoanalyst or economic chiropractor to another looking daily for some new miracle or catastrophe." He could have added truthfully that the stock market has developed a worse case of nerves than business.

This year, less than a month old, started with widespread predictions on the part of recognized financial and industrial leaders of improvement in general trade which have not been confirmed so far by such trustworthy current information as weekly freight car loadings. Instead of the predicted continuation of easy money, there has been an unexpected firming in time loans, accompanied by continued selling of government securities by the federal reserve banks and the unexpected advance in the Chicago rediscount rate. One day this week call money opens at 4 per cent and drops to 3 1-2 with an oversupply on the outside market at 3 1-4 with the rate advancing the next day from the opening of 3 1-2 to 4. One hour the stock market is sick because of heavy selling pressure. The next hour because of good buying the market has all the appearances of health and strength.

It is not surprising therefore that business and the stock market have developed the habit of daily and hourly taking their own pulse and temperature. When recognized nerve specialists are consulted the report is that there is nothing fundamentally wrong. The reports are reassuring temporarily. But on the off days the business and stock market go back to taking their own pulse and temperature, unmistakable symptoms of nerve disorder.

Sitting on Top of World.

This week Reginald McKenna, chairman of the London Midland bank, the largest financial institution in the world, and former head of the British treasury, said that this country was so rich that it was sitting on the top of the world. That is true. Why is it, then, that general trade and the stock market are suffering from nerve disorder? Discussing general trade this week, John Sherwin, chairman of the Union Trust Company of Cleveland, put his finger on what many usually well-informed Wall street people believe is the sore spot causing nerve disorder in business. Sherwin sounded a warning against "red-ink" expansion in our industry. Business, he says, has been overstraining after volume attained at a loss, adding: "We have excessive productive capacity in many lines. Everywhere is evident the tendency of producer to strive after prices. With large productive capacity competition naturally is keen. To cut costs to meet competitive prices we have introduced all manner of improvements and economies, but the saving in cost to the producers frequently has been more than swallowed by the price reduction."

McKenna is right.

We are the richest country in the world. Because of our great accumulated wealth, however, with most of the rest of the world still limping from the war, too much of our idle capital seeking employment has gone into increased production facilities. We have been producing too much to meet domestic and foreign demand.

Diagnosing the Trouble.

Competition at home and abroad has been forcing down selling prices. That is what is the matter with business, McKenna is right, and so is Sherwin. President Giannini, of the Bancitaly, advised the holders of his company's stock this week to "clean up their loans and place themselves in the strongest possible market position," adding: "It might be necessary for some of them to sell a portion of their holdings at a profit in order to do this, but I believe it would be a sound move on their part." This advice was given after the price of the stock advanced from 85 3-8 last year to 149 this year on wide public speculation.

Because of our great accumulated wealth, after we had used idle funds to increase production facilities to the point where production was running into severe domestic and foreign competition, causing a decline in selling prices, we still had so much idle money that the overflow went into the stock market, causing prices to advance to a level where in the case of Bancitaly the president of the company is advising holders on a margin to take profits and own outright what stock is held.

Cause of Nerve Disorder.

Small profits explain the cause of nerve disorder in business and high prices account for the constant taking of stock market pulse and temperature.

Signs of trouble are also found in the money market. One day we hear from high authority that brokers' loans are all right; the next day we find that the federal reserve system has been selling government securities on the open market, followed by an unexpected advance in the rediscount rate of the Chicago federal reserve bank. Brokers' loans may have been a factor in the Chicago rediscount rate advance, it is admitted in high official quarters, but if so that situation, it is explained, is local.

Brokers' loans are high because Washington and some of the federal reserve officials were committed to a policy of making money easier than it otherwise would have been, in order to bring about distribution of substantial amount of our swollen gold holdings. For the time being the advantage the stock market might take of easy money was ignored for the bigger thing ahead, making gold exports possible. With a substantial amount of gold shipped out of the country, the point has now been reached where a check is being put on brokers' loans. The influence exercised so far to reduce brokers' loans has not had much effect on the stock market. In the past when brokers' loans have been high, advances in the rediscount rate have been temporarily ignored. In each case, however, the desired results in the end have been accomplished.

COTTON GOODS REVIEW OF WEEK

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Cotton goods sales in the past week have not quite equalled the curtailed output, and prices for some of the print cloths and convertibles have eased off slightly. There has been some broadening in the demand for some lines of finished goods, chiefly percales, flannels and specialties in colored and fancy cottons.

Curtailment of production has now reached about an average of 20 per cent of the full production of last October, and includes fine cottons, print cloths, sheetings, both wide and narrow, chambrays and other lines of colored cottons, cotton duck and some of the miscellaneous lines. It will be continued indefinitely or until the supply is more nearly in accord with demand.

Buyers of finished goods have not operated as freely as anticipated, but wholesalers continue to express confidence in a very fair volume of spring business, for which they will have to make further provision in primary markets when retailers begin to come back with repeat orders. Cloth business from road men has been better this week. Ginghams are dull. Bleached cottons are quiet. Suitings in colored yarns have been doing better for home and export use.

Denims and tickings are moving slowly, but mills still have fair-sized orders in hand. Tire fabrics have been sold nearly to mill capacity for the first quarter of the year and sales for deliveries in the second quarter have continued well.

Prices current in primary markets are as follows: Print cloths, 28-inch 64x64s, 6 1-8c; 64x60s, 5 7-8c; 38 1-2-inch 64x64s, 8 1-4c; brown sheetings, southern standards, 13c; denims, 18c; tickings, 22 1-2c and 24c; prints, 9c; staple ginghams, 10 1-2c; dress ginghams, 16 3-4c and 18 1-2c.

News, Views And Reviews

Cotton Letters.

HUBBARD BROTHERS & CO.

New York, January 28.—There was a larger volume of selling on the opening than for some time in response to weakness in Liverpool, which weakness, we understand, was on account of probability of strike. The only support to the market is scale down trade buying as there is no outside buying whatever. How far the decline will go depends a great deal upon the strength of the spot holders in the south, and the labor situation both in Fall River and in Liverpool. The sentiment here is extremely bearish.

Liverpool futures are due on Monday: March 9.29; May 9.28.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, January 28.—Liquidation in cotton was renewed at the opening today and again near the close. As a result cotton lost over two dollars a bale and closed practically at the bottom. Part of the decline was due to liquidation of stale long interests in futures and partly to efforts of spot holders in the country to lighten their load. Short sellers were also active. The cause of the decline may be summarized in a steady stream of reports from country to effect that farmers will increase their acreage while mills the world over have adopted a policy of keeping production down to a level with orders on their books. The large amount of cotton sold by the interior to exporters and American spinners on call with price to be fixed by the sellers has contributed largely to the decline. Much of this cotton which was sold when prices were several cents higher, has been coming out in good volume recently. A wire from north Texas reports the basis broke 50 points there and much cotton is being thrown on the market. Indications are that prices will continue on the down grade until the farmers stop talking increase in acreage and begin to think and talk about restricted production.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, January 28.—Pronounced liquidation featured today's cotton market. For some time reports on trade conditions have been reading unfavorably in cloth markets. Mills are curtailing operations, and there are indications that the south is planning for a larger crop this year than last. There is nothing new in any of these features but failure of the market to record advances in values, with the result that prices have been marked down steadily. The common trade buys continuously as prices recede and we believe this policy is wise, but so far sales pressure has exceeded demand, which accounts for lower quotations.

There is a proposed meeting on the part of southern governors to arrest the plans for increased cotton acreage and if this possible their efforts may bring results, but that is a matter for the future. Sellers seem to forget for the time being the changed relationship in the value of money and constantly expanding world requirements for cotton. The first means current prices are cheap, the second that there can be no lasting slow demand for goods. On the contrary, there is a steady tendency for demand to broaden as the world's population is on the increase and people are educated to use more goods and have power to buy and consume in greater volume than ever required.

These features are great market fundamentals and suggest strongly the advisability of accepting weakness for making purchases in the confident anticipation that a long range view fully warrants a constructive outlook for demand and values.

March Liverpool due 9.29.

Stock Letters.

NEW YORK SUN.

Closing a week in which advances were the rule and in which some stocks made sensational gains, the stock market today showed the effects of profit-taking. The turnover was again fairly heavy and the total sales amounted to well over a million shares. It is quite apparent that the public, which withheld its support from the list early in the week after the reduction of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank rate, is now active again. It faces, however, the opposition of a strong bear party which utilizes every bulge for the sale of stocks.

The number of stocks which moved higher was distinctly limited. The only gainers of importance were Colorado Fuel, Remington Rand, and American Linseed. Most of the active issues were lower, including United States Steel, Montgomery Ward, General Motors, American Can and General Electric. The recessions were shallow. The last half-hour saw a general improvement in the list. The issues that seemed most buoyant near the close were Colorado Fuel, Hudson, National Dairy Products, Adrbhd, Coty, and United States Leather "A." Losses for the day, nevertheless, outnumbered gains.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York January 28.—Today's market showed characteristic uncertainty, opening fairly strong but with most of the activity on a selling new and old. After the first hour the tone grew less confident and selling began to appear resulting in lower prices for a large part of the list.

Remington Rand continued to be an active feature at the best prices on this movement the reasons assigned varying from an impending change of management to a technical oversold condition and a desire on the part of old longs to average holdings at lower prices.

Hudson Motor continued its advance, supported by good earnings and increasing production.

The money situation continues to be a point of greatest interest in market discussion, the usual question being not if, but when the New York rate will be raised. A continued absorptive dull market with a quiet downward tendency for the bulk of stocks would go far, however, to take the sting out of such a development when it occurs.

Coffee.

New York, January 28.—Coffee futures were steadier today on the steadier showing of the Brazilian market and Rio exchanges. There appeared to be some week-end covering, old style May sold up to 13.47 and the new style to 19.45, with old style contracts closing 12 to 19 points net higher and new style 5 to 20 points higher. Estimated sales, old style, 14,000; new style, 3,000. Closing quotations: Old style, March 13.60; May 13.47; July 13.30; September 13.18; December 13.09. New style, March 20.40; May 19.50; July 18.75; September 18.45; December 18.10.

Spot quiet; Rio 7s, 14¼ to 14¾. Santos 4s, 21¼ to 22. Cost and freight offers included bourbon 4s at 21.40.

Rio exchange on London 1-128 D lower; dollar buying rate 5 reis higher. Rio market unchanged to 175 reis higher; Santos unchanged to 375 reis higher. Brazilian port receipts 41,000; Jundiahy receipts, 22,000.

ABRUPT REACTIONS ON CURB MARKET

New York, January 28.—(AP)—Although profit-taking induced by the recent development in credit conditions was effective at times in causing abrupt reactions on the curb market today the undertone continued strong and renewed demand appeared in sufficient volume to continue the upward trend. Baneitaly corporation was strong in the initial dealings, selling up 1 3-4 points to 147. General Baking gained about a point. Chain stores shares displayed pronounced strength under the leadership of Dominion stores which rose sharply 3 points to 127 1-2 and then reacted to 123.

Trading continued throughout the short session at a record pace with some wide fluctuation occurring in each direction. Royal Typewriter gained 7 points selling to 100, Melville Shoe moved up 5 and Metropolitan Stores preferred rose 4 3-4 points.

In contrast Deere & Co. declined 7 points, Mergenthaler Linotype 5 7-8 and Lehigh Coal and Navigation lost 2 3-4 points.

Public utility issues produced several active features especially in the moderate priced division. Lehigh Power and United Light continued the current upturn. Electric Bond opened off 1 5-8 points to 85, recovered that decline and then turned heavy.

Pipe line shares were exceptionally strong with Buckeye and Southern the features. Others ranged narrowly.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, January 28.—(AP)—Reversing usual conditions, corn trading here is just now attracting more than twice as big a crowd as wheat. The reason is a spectacular struggle going on in the corn pit, where increased selling pressure that accompanies the annual heavy winter movement of corn to market has suddenly come into collision with a notable expansion of European demand for corn from the United States. For the time being, the crop movement has scored the most points in the match.

Compared with a week ago, corn prices this morning were 1 3-8@1 1-2 2 1-8 a bushel lower, with wheat 3-4 to 1 3-8 off; oats 1 1-4 to 1 3-4 down, and provisions varying from 20 decline to a rise of 7.

Even Illinois at present is selling and considering corn on a relatively liberal scale, but some of the best authorities were contending today that the winter movement of corn in 1928 is to be more short-lived than as a rule is the case. In this connection, it is being pointed out that a large share of the present arrivals are from sections where the corn is soft and has to be disposed of but that in more favored territory the greater part of the Kansas surplus, for example, has already been sold. Besides, assertions are made that with 4,500,000 more hogs in the country than last year the farm-feeding demand will be larger notwithstanding that the present feeding ratio lacks charm.

Meanwhile, with corn export business said in various quarters to have surpassed 1,000,000 bushels for at least one stretch of 24 hours, the question has been raised as to whether sufficient corn will be available in this country to supply readily all the needs of European importers. According to current trade estimates, 68,000,000 bushels will be thus required by Europe before the new Argentine corn crop can be drawn upon. Moreover, the new crop of corn in Argentina is now at a critical stage, and European buyers are also being spurred on as a result of something akin to a world-wide dearth of barley.

Wheat traders are beset on the one hand by predictions of declining prices until the maximum of southern hemisphere shipments has been passed. On the other hand, persistent reports are being received telling of unfavorable crop conditions for winter wheat, especially in western Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, but likewise various sections of the central states as well.

A slight stowing up of consumer demand for oats is reported, together with somewhat of an increase in country offerings.

Provisions are reflecting weakness of cotton, and are also responding to heavy marketings of hogs.

Quiet Firemen.

Washington, January 28. — (AP)—Tiptoeing quietly over a roof, firemen extinguished a fire last night so noiselessly that the invalid wife of Col. W. E. P. French, who was in the house at the time, was unaware that there had been a fire.

SENATE COAL QUIZ GETS PRECEDENCE

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Delaying a vote until Monday on the resolution of Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, for an investigation of public utilities, the senate interstate commerce committee today gave consideration to taking up next the resolution of Senator Johnson, republican, California, calling for an inquiry into conditions in the bituminous coal fields of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

A vote today on the resolution of Senator Walsh on which hearings have been conducted more than a week was forestalled by the absence of a quorum. Unable to take action on that proposal, those present gave favorable consideration to taking up the Johnson resolution next week. Similar favor was voiced for early consideration of the bill of Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, to prevent block booking of motion picture films.

The Johnson resolution also would call for an inquiry into whether railroads have endeavored "to depress the labor cost of coal produced by union mine labor" and whether wage contracts in the soft coal fields have been "abrogated or repudiated."

Benjamin Bass, Baldwin County Collector, Dies

Milledgeville, Ga., January 28.—(AP)—Benjamin Bass, 50, Baldwin county tax collector, suffered a heart attack shortly after rising today and died within a few minutes. He had been a Milledgeville business man for 20 years.

J. A. Rogers, 20 years an employee of the Georgia state sanitarium here, will automatically succeed Bass as tax collector by virtue of the fact that he was the only other qualified entrant in the race for that office in the February 15 democratic primary. He will be appointed immediately to complete the unexpired term of Bass.

Lord Sackville Dies.

Seven Oaks, Kent, England, January 28.—(AP)—Lord Sackville, owner of Knole, one of the finest Elizabethan homes in England, died today of a heart attack following influenza and pneumonia. The heir to the barony is his brother, Major General Sir Charles Sackville-West, who married Mrs. Anne Meredith Bigelow, American actress, in New York in 1924.

Aviators Killed.

Almeria, Spain, January 28.—(AP)—Advices were received here today that two French aviators were killed when a mail plane of the Latecoere company crashed at the hamlet of Felix.

RADIO IN THE HOME

Conducted by Will Smith

RADIO-ING The Air Waves.

BY WILL SMITH.

Do you sit at your receiver every night, folks, for a period of time from, say, 30 minutes to two hours? Few of you do in all probabilities. Now the Dial Twister is not getting set to suggest that you make it part of your night's recreation to religiously tune in from two to ten or more stations.

We do want to tell you that we have done that very thing for the last two weeks, however. There was, and will continue to be, method in our madness. Two weeks ago a Stromberg-Carlson AC "Treasure Chest" receiver and a large wall-type speaker was delivered to our humble abode. See the reason?

And every night since the first we have been twisting the dials, up the wavelengths or down kilocycles, as you prefer. Our results have been material, concrete and decisive. We again feel that a neutrodyne circuit will get anyone everything that any other circuit will bring in and feel that it will give, in addition, those breaks which will enable a listener to tell the other fellow that he could get the program his friend couldn't. The Stromberg-Carlson AC set incorporates the neutrodyne circuit. One reason for our paragraph above.

Then, with the set getting distance we desire, the volume we seek, the selectivity which warms our heart, we want to comment on the Stromberg-Carlson loud speaker. Do you want your speaker to bring in with clarity and unexcelled tone quality those high piccolo notes, the shrill tones of the clarinet, the rumble of the bass viol and the other high and low frequency notes of all instruments? Do you want Galli-Curci, as we had her in our living room Friday night from WIW? The Stromberg-Carlson speaker did all that we sought, all that we prayed for, and still amazed us for its reality and its beautiful tone quality. That's reason No. 2.

Of course, we need not say much of the ease of operation of our "Treasure Chest." Two dials, or station selectors, only; a current control which is checked automatically by a volt meter on the artistic panel; a volume control, and antenna switch for local or distant stations, and a switch for cutting the current. That's all.

The ordinary house lighting current is used for all power purposes. The unit for transforming the alternating current to direct current at the proper voltages for "A," "B" and "C" purposes is cased in an attractive metal cabinet, which is hidden from view in the dark walnut table on which the receiver is placed.

And another word about the Stromberg-Carlson loud speaker. It is built on the cone type of construction, beautifully proportioned and artistically decorated. It hangs from the picture moulding and has attached a cord from the set which is 45 feet long, enabling the speaker to be hung as far away from the receiver as the operator desires. The result of these new features in loud speakers is evident at once the set is bringing in a station. The speaker, placed in the room where best acoustic qualities result, is forgotten. The reception seems to be in every part of the room and every person, no matter where he may be sitting, gets the same tone, the same volume.

And those, folk, are the reasons why our work with the Stromberg-Carlson receiver in "Radio-ing the Air Waves" every night that you may read just what we listened to and just what we are able to get, has been mighty pleasant recreation for the last two weeks. There couldn't be found enough money in our estimation, to buy a Stromberg-Carlson receiver, if the one we have were the only one ever manufactured and the only one which could be made.

And for tonight, we plan to tune in the following:

6:20 to 8—The Capitol theater program from New York over WSB or one of the other stations in the red network. (Note: We often go out for a more distant station to test reception conditions and check on station.)

And just any other thing that happens to strike our fancy. It's nice to be able to do just as you please, isn't it?

Scoring a success last year in the musical show, "A Night in Spain," she gives promise of making an even greater success on the air.

He will bring to the General Motors family party the same characteristics that have made him a popular radio entertainer. From the opening of the program to its close Bernie will be at the microphone as announcer.

Instrumental music as accompaniment for Miss Hayes will be given by a concert band under the leadership of Patrick Conway and by Joe Green's novelty orchestra. These musical organizations will also play a series of the popular airs of the musical comedy season of 1927-28.

STROMBERG-CARLSON PLANS UNIQUE HOUR

Something new in orchestrations is offered by Rosario Bordon, director of the Stromberg-Carlson orchestra, in his program for Tuesday evening, January 31, over the blue network of the National Broadcasting company. Beethoven's "Menuet in G" is well known and very popular. It has even been popularized and made into a modern dance number, but so far as it is known this is the first time that this number has been arranged as a saxophone duet with orchestral accompaniment.

Another very popular number to be played on this program is Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in G Minor." It is believed that this will be the first time that this number will be arranged for an orchestra with saxophones.

A trumpet solo, "Little Grey Home in the West," by Earle Oliver, of the Stromberg-Carlson orchestra; selections from "Five O'Clock Girl," the current musical comedy on Broadway, and "The Manikin Parade," by Dixon, similar in type to the very popular "Dancing Tambourine," are included in the program.

One other selection of especial interest is Thurband's "Dream of the Rarebit Fiend," which conjures up in music the most weird of nightmares.

The detailed program follows:

"The Manikin Parade" (Dixon)—Orchestra.

"My Heart Stood Still" (Har.)—Quintet.

"Five O'Clock Girl Selections"—Orchestra.

"Little Grey Home in the West" (Lohr)—Trumpet solo.

"Tripplepatte" (Bernard)—Orchestra.

"Tress" (Bernard—Orchestra.

"G Minor Prelude" (Rachmaninoff)—Orchestra.

"Sunbonnet Sue" (Edwards)—Quintet.

"Bubbles" (Reser)—Flute and clarinet duet.

"Dream of the Rarebit Fiend" (Thurband)—Orchestra.

"The Secret" (Gauthier)—Orchestra.

"Menuet in G" (Beethoven)—Saxophone duet.

"Dance group"—Orchestra.

1.—"Four Walls" (Dreyer).

2. "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" (Herbert).

3.—"Stay Out of the South" (Dixon).

HARMONICA CHAMP ON SEARS CONCERT

A musical comedy presented by Floyd and Bernice Jennings, and the Sears-Roebuck Instrumentalists, will be featured over WSB Wednesday night between 7 and 8 o'clock during the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation broadcast. Starting at 6:30 a 30-minute dinner concert will be concert will be conducted by Paul and John, "the two disciples of harmony" and instrumentalists.

Paul Phillips, America's champion harmonica player and well-known radio, vaudeville and recording artist, will play a feature program on the Monday Dinnerbell R. F. D. club program. He plays classic as well as popular numbers. "Stars and Stripes Forever," "Merry Widow Waltz," "Gypsy Sweetheart," "Kiss Me Again," "Poet and Peasant," and "My Wild Irish Rose," are some of the selections to be given by Mr. Phillips. He will share the hour with Paul and John.

Wednesday at noon the Mount Carmel Consolidated school, Detxer, Ga., is to broadcast a combination musical and agricultural program. The Long Sisters, Lawrence Smith, tenor, and Eugene Boehm, violinist, will also be heard on the Wednesday program. Ralph Richardson, baritone, and the Sears-Roebuck Players, directed by Harry Pomar, are scheduled for Friday noon.

Mrs. R. F. Whelchel, home advisor, will discuss a seasonal topic each morning at 10 o'clock. The weather and market news is given each day at 10 a. m., 12:05 and 2:30 p. m.

'LONDONERS' PLAY IN EVEREADY HOUR

The London string quartet will be heard on the new Eveready hour program to be broadcast Tuesday evening over WEAF and associated N. B. C. stations, beginning at 8 o'clock, central standard time.

Celebrated for their fineness of phrasing and their perfect blending of tonal production wherever lovers of chamber music gather, the London string quartet has achieved what is literally world-wide success. The only chamber music organization which has been self-sustaining since its inception, the quartet have to their credit, in addition to more than 150 appearances in London, a total of seven transcontinental tours of the United States and Canada. They have played in France and Holland seven times, made two extensive tours of South America and visited Honolulu twice.

John Pennington, first violin; Thomas Petre, second violin; H. Waldo-Warner, viola, and C. Warwick Evans, 'cello, comprise the "Londoners," as the quartet is frequently called. More than a hundred new works have been introduced and produced by them since they began playing together in 1908 in London.

For the Eveready hour program, the quartet will play the following numbers:

1. "Quartet" opus 18, No. 5, A Major, by Beethoven
   (a) Allegro.
   (b) Menuetto.
   (c) Andante cantabile convariazioni.
   (d) Allegro.
2. "Cherry Ripe," by Bridge.
3. "Quintet," (clarinet) by Mozart.
4. "Molly on the Shore," by Percy Grainger.

In the rendition of Mozart's "Quintet," Nathaniel Shilkret, the conductor of the Eveready orchestra and also a master of the clarinet, will play that instrument.

New Station for Italy.

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—A new radio station which has the program broadcasting concession for all of Italy has been completed near Milan, the department of commerce has been informed. It has a 7,000-watt power plant and takes the place of a 1,500-watt station.

LOUD SPEAKERS PICK CHAMPION KISSERS

Paris, January 28.—(AP)—Radio kiss contests now are under way. France is looking for the champion radio loud kissers and radio parties hold contests for nominees. Two persons, preferably of the opposite sex, hold wires connected with terminals on the radio set. As soon as their lips meet an electric contact is established and the loud speaker records the smack.

Garden Chairman for Fifth District Prepares Article

Mrs. J. M. Royal, fifth district chairman for gardens, presents timely suggestions gained through personal experience, to clubwomen in the following well-prepared and excellent article. She says:

"The kiss of the sun for pardon,
The songs of the birds for mirth,
One is nearer God's heart in a garden
Than anywhere else on earth."

"When the song of the wren is heard and the primrose puts up its first leaves, the hearts of all true 'garden souls' are stirred with renewed enthusiasm, and we begin to make up our spring list of seeds and plants. We all know what splendid work the many garden clubs, committees, or divisions, as they are variously called, have accomplished during the past two or three years, the result being limited only by the fact that so far we have worked as single units rather than as a whole. Realizing that a broader vision is needed if we would accomplish really worth while things, the garden divisions of the fifth district are making interesting plans for the coming year's program, plans calling for cooperative work along constructive lines. A special feature of the year's program will be the 'sponsoring' of one or more of the distinctive flower families, by each of the garden divisions, specimens of their selected 'family' to be planted and carefully studied by individual members.

Flower Days.

"When the plants are at their loveliest blooming period the garden division will announce visiting 'flower' days, to which all the other divisions will be asked. For example, the members of the garden committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will select a time in the spring when the gardens of the various members contain the loveliest blooming roses or lilies, and announce that 'Rose day' or 'Lily day' will be held at a certain date and that members of the other garden divisions are invited to meet with them and inspect and admire particular gardens selected by their chairman. The garden division of the Decatur Woman's club will have a 'Delphinium day' when this 'present-day race of noble giants with their charming forms and bewitchingly lovely colors' will reign supreme, etc., until each garden division at specified intervals throughout the summer has displayed her gardens, growing specimens of her 'sponsored' flower family. A direct resultant of these interchanged flower visits will be an established bond of good fellowship and pleasant comradie among the different garden divisions, based on a common love and knowledge of flowers and flower gardens.

"Many of the women's clubs in our district up to the present time do not include garden divisions—now is an excellent time to repair this important oversight; with the combination of a few accepted simple rules and an interestd group, the thing is done. Now a word in general to all flower lovers—first, if there be any among us without a flower garden, go pray start one immediately and remember that just as there's 'a bob for every head,' so is there a garden for every individual person, from the simplest of 'cutting' gardens laid out in parallel rows to the most intricate of formal gardens.

Annual Garden.

"Of course a garden begun this spring will, of necessity, be an annual garden, but we cannot emphasize too much the importance of starting our perennial seed beds immediately if one is the fortunate possessor of a greenhouse, otherwise, in a cold frame by the middle of March, or the open ground by April 15. Then the garden can be rearranged in the fall, the perennial plants placed in their permanent positions, thus insuring abundant flowers for the following spring. By taking the trouble to raise our own perennial plants we can put all the extra expense into the buying of shrubs for the background or 'setting' of our garden. For a garden without a background is like a picture without a frame.

"Last, in the vigorous enjoyment and exercise of doing our practical gardening let's remember to take advantage of the delightful literature now obtainable on almost any subject pertaining to gardening. The Carnegie library has an excellent assortment, among others such outstanding writers in the flower world as Mrs. Ely, Mrs. Francis King, Miss Gertrude Jekyll and a particular volume by Louise Shelton of 'Beautiful Gardens in America' that is a joy and inspiration to every flower lover.

"In closing, don't forget, chairmen of the garden divisions, that to cooperate with and to serve you and your members throughout the coming year in any way possible is the sincere wish of and the real reason for your having a fifth district garden chairman."

Augusta Club Plans Bridge Party And Hears Miss Miller

The Augusta Woman's club will give a bridge-luncheon at Forrest Hills-Ricker hotel Tuesday, January 31, which will be one of the most brilliant social events of the season. Mrs. William H. Fleming is chairman of arrangements.

Miss Cazenove Miller gave a talk to the clubwomen at the January meeting on "Gesso," a modern revival of fourteenth century art work. The program is in the hands of the art division, Mrs. Sanford Gardner, chairman, which is under the fine arts department, Mrs. C. L. Duvall, chairman.

Miss Miller, who was born in Augusta, and who has gone five times around the world since she left here, with her mother, Mrs. William H. Duvall, is spending the winter season at the home of Miss Harriet Ganahal on the Hill, where she has a studio. She has recently returned from Europe, where she spent five months, and devoted much time to her art studies. Miss Miller, who calls herself a "craftsman" rather than an "artist," is dividing her time between painting her work in gesso. Gesso means plaster of Paris. It was used first for a foundation by the ancient Egyptians in their hieroglyphics. In the fourteenth century it was used as the foundation for the beautiful and noted Italian Primitives, and has been used continuously since in Italy. It is used chiefly as the foundation for wooden panels and the beautiful specimens of art found in the Italian altar paintings. It is used as foundation also for relief and gold leaf work.

In America the only noted artist who has used it extensively is Robert Chandler, famous for his screens and wall decorations. Miss Miller, who has learned how to work with it herself, will explain about it to the clubwomen, and it is hoped she will also have specimens of her work to show.

Mrs. Barnes Issues Greeting Card To Sixth District

Mrs. L. A. Collier, of Barnesville, whose election to sixth district presidency is a merited honor, issues the following greetings to clubwomen of the sixth district under whose leadership plans will unfold to place the section in an enviable position before those twelve districts composing the Georgia Federation. She says:

"To all clubs of the sixth district I send greetings and acknowledge the honor paid me through your delegates to the recent district meeting. I wish you to know that it will be my pleasure to serve you in any way possible.

"Let us strive in every way to further the work of the federation, thereby making our district 100 per cent. Be liberal in your gifts to our own Tallulah Falls school, pay your pledge to the Ella F. White memorial fund, not forgetting the student aid that fund which helps others to help themselves."

Hancock County Federation Elects New Officers

Hancock County of Women's clubs held its January meeting at the clubhouse, with Mrs. J. L. Campbell, the president, in the chair, who was re-elected to this office. The other officers include Mrs. Denham Cason, of Jewell, vice president; Mrs. Maud Malone, recording secretary; Mrs. L. B. Moat, of Deveraux, treasurer; Mrs. T. C. Moore, publicity.

Senator John C. Lewis introduced his friend and colleague, Senator Ed Rivers, of Lakeland, who made a splendid address on "Legislation." Mrs. J. T. Hooks, of Gordon, president of tenth district, was present and made a talk, full of good suggestions for the betterment of club work. Mrs. John Gaut gave several musical selections. A social hour followed with ladies from the Woman's club serving refreshments. Dr. E. J. Forester of the Baptist church made the opening prayer. Dr. W. T. Pearman, the Presbyterian minister, closed the meeting with prayer.

Scholarships to Tallulah Presented in Washington, D. C.

The Georgia society in Washington, D. C., with Congressman W. W. Larsen, donated an annual scholarship of $150 to Tallulah Industrial school, located at Tallulah Falls, Ga., owned and maintained by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

At a dinner given Friday evening, January 20, in the Meridian Mansion apartments by the Georgia society, Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, pas tpresident of Georgia federation, emphasized the need of more scholarships for the school, and Senator W. J. Harris moved that in view of the fact that the school is the property of federated Georgia women, the only school operated by women in America, that the Georgia society donate the scholarship, the motion being unanimously carried.

News of the society's action came in a telegram received Saturday from Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, past president of the federation and vice president of the board of trustees of the school. Mrs. Fitzpatrick addressed the society at a meeting held recently going to the national capital principally for this purpose, federation officials said. It was shortly after the conclusion of her address that the society made the award.

The new scholarship is the fourth to be granted to the Tallulah Falls institution by individuals and organizations in Washington during the last several weeks. Two scholarships of $2,000 each headed the list, one coming from Edward P. Brown and the other from Mrs. Ralph Worthington, both former Georgians residing in Washington, D. C.

A third scholarship was recently donated by a group of prominent persons headed by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, Senator and Mrs. William H. Harris, Senator and Mrs. Walter F. George, and the 12 congressmen representing Georgia, who assembled at a card party staged at the Mayflower hotel in the national capital agreeing jointly to take out a scholarship for the school. Miss Elizabeth Howry is chairman of this Washington group of friends for the school.

Mrs. Skelton Writes Greetings And Appoints Her Committees

Mrs. A. C. Skelton, of Hartwell, president of the sixth district of the state federation, has as her corps of officers: First vice president, Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter, Lexington, Ga.; second vice president, Mrs. Harry Moore, Washington, Ga.; chairman publicity, Mrs. W. C. Clarke, Covington, Ga.; recording secretary, Mrs. D. T. Barnes, Royston, Ga.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. T. Kidd, Hartwell, Ga.; treasurer, Mrs. E. B. Cade, Washington, Ga.

In her greetings card issued on the official club page today, she addresses the clubwomen as follows:

Glorious Service.

"As we turn our faces to the days and tasks of the new year that are ahead, in 1928, may we do so with a spirit of faith, hope and love. The holidays have come and gone, leaving in our hearts the after-glow of Christmas. As we are entering the new year may we determine to make it a worthy successor to 1927. I call upon you to look back over a year of accomplishment that is past and to rejoice. Consider the year that is ahead and plan for it. Ours is a splendid opportunity for glorious service. Be not content with past achievements, but, with renewed courage, determine to put forth every effort to make the new year unequaled in the history of our work. My best wish for the federation is that each woman might catch a vision of its possibilities and contribute her part toward its realization.

"I wish that I might make a personal appeal to each club in the district, urging that all points on the standard of excellence be met. We have not set for ourselves a difficult goal. I believe the fulfillment of it is within the possibility of every club in the district. Last year several clubs met all of the requirements. This year these and others may do the same by planning the year's work now. In looking ahead toward reporting time, be sure that progress is being made from month to month. Please use your district, as well as your state, year-book. If you desire any additional information, your district chairmen will gladly furnish it. It will be a pleasure to your district officers to serve you from time to time.

Send Club Activities.

"In behalf of our state editor, Mrs. Bessie S. Stafford, I am asking that reports of club activities be sent in to her immediately. State news is of little interest to the public. Have your publicity chairman make three copies of your reports that you wish published. Send one of them to your official state organ, The Atlanta Constitution, and one to your official district organ, the Athens Banner-Herald, and send one to your local paper. By doing this the three papers will carry your club news simultaneously."

Offers Loving Cup.

"Your president is offering a loving cup to the club in the district submitting the best report for the district meeting, which is to be held in Royston next fall. Not only will the standard of excellence be taken into consideration in making this award, but attention will be given the work done for Tallulah Falls school. Give your school a prominent place in your club program.

McRae Club Is Engaged In Junior Work

McRae Improvement club held its January meeting with Mrs. J. H. Girardeau, the president, in the chair. Mrs. Clay Ryals, from the Junior Woman's club, reported between 40 and 45 members enrolled, with enthusiastic plans for a class in interior decorating and some local charity work. Rev. J. O. J. Taylor, scoutmaster for the boys, stated that already the limit in membership in a troop, 32 boys, had been enrolled, and efforts are being made to secure an additional scoutmaster so that all boys in the city might have an opportunity to become a Scout. Mrs. J. H. McTrye, captain of the Girl Scouts, gave an interesting account of their work and told of the plans for attending the summer camp.

An invitation from the American Legion, offered in a letter from Edison Harbin, in which the club was asked to have a representative on the board of management for the Legion clubhouse, the board to be composed of the heads of the diffeernt civic and patriotic organizations of the city, and the club voted unanimously to accept the invitation.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley was indorsed for director for Georgia in the national federation, and Mrs. A. H. Brenner for president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. H. B. Duke, Mrs. R. L. Moorhead and Mrs. P. Q. Cason were appointed a committee to meet with the county board of health and offer the cooperation of the club in formulating and carrying out a health program for the county. Mrs. Fred Whatley, chairman of the Christmas seal sale for the county, reported the sale quite successful, but final collections not completed. Mrs. A. W. Waller, Mrs. Leon Flanders and Mrs. J. C. G. Brooks were enrolled as new members. Mrs. C. A. Ryals, program chairman, had arranged a splendid program with citizenship as the keynote, Rev. J. O. J. Taylor, pastor of the Methodist church, gave a splendid address on "Citizenship," his experience in red Russia furnishing a wealth of actual knowledge of the results from the lack of proper training in "Citizenship."

Mrs. Francis Nell Johnson gave a humorous reading, and Miss Drew, of the college faculty, sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. W. C. Sessoms, both numbers being greatly enjoyed. "America" sung by the entire club, closed the program. The hostesses were Mrs. E. F. McRae, Mrs. Fred Smith, Mrs. Eschol Graham, Mrs. J. C. Council and Mrs. T. J. McRae.

Send Resolutions To Mrs. Inman.

Lamar County Federation Sponsors Dedication.

Barnesville, January 28.—Dedicatory exercises of the tree to the Unknown Soldier at the American Legion park here and a mass meeting of the members of the Lamar County Federation of Women's Clubs, land owners along the Dixie highway in the county and other citizens held the center of interest Thursday, when addresses were made by Mrs. O. W. Massey, of Macon, national president of the Road of Remembrance; Mrs. Norman Sharp, of Atlanta, Georgia president, and others were made explaining the work of the organization and appealing to the people for cooperation in beautifying the Dixie highway. Mrs. John A. Corry, chairman of the Lamar county federation, has assigned to the different clubs of the county certain portions of the highway and the work will begin at once. Miss Alice Baxter Receives Scenic Prize Poem Rules

Mrs. Charles T. Marshall, of New York city, president of the National Life Conservation society, has given Miss Alice Baxter, conservation and forestry chairman for the Georgia federation, the names of the judges of the scenic prize poem contest, open to all states and Canada. The judges are Professor Carter Troop, one of the best known men of letters; Mrs. Earnest Thompson Seton, president of the American League of American Penmen, and Franklin Moon, dean of New York State Forestry college.

The prizes are $100 for the first prize; $50 for the second prize, and five prizes of $10 each. The poems should be sent to Miss Baxter, 626 Peachtree, N. E., not later than February 26, so that she may have full time to send poems to Mrs. Marshall before March 1. No poems will be accepted by Mrs. Marshall after this date.

Writers are not limited as to words but Mrs. Marshall advises that very long or very short poems do not stand so good a chance. The contest is proceeding well in Atlanta but Miss Baxter wishes to hear from other sections of the state. There are writers who speak in verse throughout the state, as there are picturesque, lovely or grand spots in various sections of Georgia.

Writers are not confined to Georgia scenes but this opportunity comes to tell other states of striking features or spots in Georgia. Twenty-three states have sent poems and the majority of these poems come from the west.

Mrs. Supplee Issues Card to Child Welfare Chairmen

Mrs. A. L. Supplee, of Covington, eighth district chairman of child welfare issues the following card to eighth district child welfare chairmen. She says:

"As the recently appointed district chairman of child welfare, I herein appeal to the club presidents for the names of club chairmen of child welfare in order to facilitate the organization of my departmental cabinet for making this year one of the most constructive in this department; to keep it up to the high standard of my predecessor.

"Not since the days of Abraham has the child been such a paramount issue. Children have been studied more or less in all ages, but not until the past century have they received scientific study of their welfare and development by eminent psychologists and educators.

"Every normal child possesses triune faculties, physical, moral, mental, to be developed equally.

"There are two kinds of child study, scientific and natural, the natural begins in the home and continues through grammar school where the teacher is such an important factor in cooperation with the mother; the best child study can be done in school in groups, leaving the scientific study to experts. We teachers study the child to make discoveries that are overlooked by the average parent, we supplement the home care and training."

Tennille Club's January Meeting Shows Many Phases

The January meeting of Tennille Woman's club revealed that Mrs. Meriwether, the treasurer, reported $140 was realized from a bazar, and it was voted to use $200 for the bonded indebtedness. The women, with an intensity of purpose that will carry things over, have striven every year to retire as much of this as possible.

Mrs. W. C. Little is president and the hostesses for the meeting were Mesdames R. F. Theis, J. C. C. Wright, Will Brantley and Lamar Brantley.

Mrs. Theis, building chairman, reported some money made during the month, and projects afoot for work to be done at an early date.

Mrs. Will Brantley is chairman of grounds, reported work done at an expenditure of $5 during the month. She asked that some action be taken to protect the shrubs and plants. Mrs. Brantley has worked untiringly to build up and beautify the grounds and she deserves the cooperation of every member; a committee was appointed to ask the city fathers' help in keeping the flowers and shrubbery from being trampled or molested.

Mrs. Roy Smith, music chairman, who is also state chairman of American music in the federation, reported having organized a junior club—32 members enrolling.

Among the communications read by Mrs. Alex Brown, corresponding secretary, was a letter from Mrs. E. L. Barnes, Jr., of Milledgeville, asking the club's assistance towards equipping a band for the boys of the Georgia Training school. Each district is to furnish an instrument. The club voted that a contribution be forwarded to Mrs. Barnes for this worthy purpose.

Mrs. Roy Smith was in charge of the program of the afternoon. Subject, "The Fine Arts." The program was as follows:

Vocal solo, "Little Girl Blue," by Marjorie Corbett. Paper on art, Miss Clara Davis. Clipping, "Inspirational Moments," Mrs. H. M. Franklin. Vocal duet, "Wild Irish Rose," by Catherine Purvis and Winifred Scott. Paper on "Literature," Mrs. Dan Blitch. Vocal solo, "Sorter Miss You," by Miss Evelyn Meadows.

Mrs. Blitch and Miss Meadows are recent additons to Tennille's literary and musical circles.

Library Extension Chairman Issues Card to Club Presidents

Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, chairman of library extension for the Georgia federation, has issued the following letter to the club presidents in the state organization. She says:

"My dear Madam President:

"As your newly appointed chairman of library extension, I greet you most cordially and would remind you of the near approach of Library day. What special plans have you made for its observance? A suggestive Library day program has been prepared for your use by the Georgia library commission and will be loaned free of charge upon request of clubs, together with the necessary material for its development. Will you not avail yourself of this kindness? The library commission works hand-in-hand with the Georgia federation's library work. Through our valued Mrs. J. K. Ottley, chairman of the commission since its creation, and Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, the efficient and obliging secretary, our relationship has ever been one of close mutual cooperation.

"This is a most opportune time to sponsor book showers for your own town or school libraries. If your town has a public library, is it properly equipped and maintained and what may be done to extend its service? If there is no public library, what are you doing to supply its needs? There again the library commission is at your service through its book loans of traveling libraries or individual packages. Are you interested in your rural schools and communities? This is a 'field ripe unto the harvest' for your special efforts. There are many in Georgia yet hungering and thirsting for good books and reading material. We shall continue to adhere to our aim 'The County Free Library,' and strive with renewed energy for its achievement at the next session of our Georgia legislature. Adequate library facilities for our population are necessary if we, as a state, are to advance educationally and culturally.

"Book week will be stressed and observed later, but let us begin now to plan summer reading courses. Encourage your libraries to conduct Vacation Reading clubs for children; rural children to be members of the club conducted by the library commission. I would especially recommend the 'Reading with a Purpose' series as most delightful summer activity for older readers. What can be more wholesome for our youth in this time of unrest and dissatisfaction than well directed reading of good literature? 'Reading maketh a full man' and it is the full man of tomorrow who will direct the world.

"Please see that a record of your club's library activities is kept, so that through local, district and state chairmen, an accurate report may be rendered to our state convention. With good wishes for a successful Library day and a desire to serve whenever I may,

"Yours sincerely,
"MRS. J. W. GHOLSTON,
"Chairman library extension."

District Presidents Honored By Tallulah Trustee Board

The board of trustees of Tallulah Falls Industrial school entertains at dinner Tuesday evening, February 14, at the Atlanta Woman's club, with the 12 district presidents as special honor guests. This group includes a number of prominent club women recently elected to this high office at district conventions held last fall, and are always interesting figures to the 12 districts they represent and to the clubwomen of state at large, being recognized as leaders in club activities.

The presidents automatically become trustees of Tallulah Industrial school by virtue of their office, and as this is the first meet of the August body since the election, the dinner is being arranged as a special compliment to the group including Mrs. G. M. Barnes, of Midville; Mrs. H. H. Perry, of Albany; Mrs. Robert E. Lee, of Fitzgerald; Mrs. W. R. Jones, of Greenville; Mrs. Kate Green Hess, of Decatur; Mrs. L. A. Collier, of Barnesville; Mrs. Herbert E. Hague, of Marietta; Mrs. A. C. Skelton, of Hartwell; Mrs. J. E. McElroy, of Norcross; Mrs. J. W. Hooks, of Gordon; Mrs. G. V. Cate, of Brunswick, and Mrs. J. C. Meadows, of Vidalia.

Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees, will preside at the dinner, and Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, president of Georgia federation, will be a distinguished guest.

2nd District Board Hears Standard of Excellence Read

An important executive board meeting of the second district, Georgia Federation of Women's clubs was held in Thomasville, January 24, as guests of the Study Club. After opening the session with prayer, Mrs. H. H. Perry, president of the second district, made a short introductory talk on the importance of the departmental work of the district and introduced the other officers present. She presented Miss Vann, who gave two vocal solos, "Willows," by Salter, and "When Birds Go North Again," by Willoughby, accompanied by Mrs. Fleming. Miss Emily Cravatte gave an amusing monologue, "A Bride's First Trip to the Butcher's." Mrs. Perry rendered two vocal solos, "Rain," by Pearl Curran, and "My Lovely Celia," by George Monroe, ably accompanied by Mrs. Balfour.

A standard of excellence for the second district was read and each club urged to meet the requirements of the standard and be an A-1 club. The five points on the standard are as follows: 1, pay dues not later than December 1; 2, pay to Tallulah Falls school according to membership; 3, must pay allotment to Ella F. White foundation; 4, pay to student aid fund according to membership; 5, reports sent to president quarterly.

An interesting talk on the work at the Tallulah Falls school was made by Mrs. Charles J. Haden, of Atlanta, a trustee of the school.

Following the morning session the board adjourned to the American Legion hut, where luncheon was served. A sextette of local talent sang several negro spirituals. Miss Valentine was a guest of the club and made a short talk.

After the luncheon another business meeting was held, at which time the board unanimously voted to hold a better homes institute in Albany early in June. At this time there will be demonstrated labor-saving household devices. Talks will be made by experts on many subjects pertaining to the model home. The institute will be beneficial and educational to all women. Some of the topics to be stressed are: Home Budgeting, Amusements in the Home, High Moral and Spiritual Atmosphere in the Home. It is hoped at this time to have an art exhibit of the art developed in the second district. In February all clubs are asked to remember the veterans hospital in Augusta.

The officers of the district include: Mrs. H. H. Perry, of Albany, president; Mrs. B. L. Holton, of Camilla, first vice president; Mrs. J. L. Dickinson, of Donalsonville, recording secretary; Mrs. E. W. Urbanneck, of Albany, recording secretary and treasurer; Mrs. P. I. Dixon, of Thomasville, second vice president; Mrs. J. B. Lanier, of Albany, press reporter, and Mrs. Homer Williams, of Thomasville, parliamentarian.

Forsyth Club Sponsors Musical Program.

Forsyth Woman's club presented in concert Mrs. Oliver Phelps Ensign, dramatic soprano; Mrs. Charles Chalmers, accompanist; Mrs. William Butt Griffeth, harpist, at Bessie Tift auditorium, Tuesday evening. The range, beauty and power of Mrs. Ensign's voice, combined with her unusual dramatic ability, made it possible for her to give a wonderful interpretation to the difficult numbers of her program, and an adequate portrayal of the various shades of emotion. Her rendition of the beautiful aria, "Un Bel di Vedreme," from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," brought a genuine thrill. The Brahms "Der Schmeid" was splendidly suggestive of the forge. The lovely "Picture," and "To the Sun," by Pearl Curran, were high spots in the program.

A beautiful picture was presented by Mrs. Griffeth, as in her gold lace dress touched with old blue, she seated herself upon a golden chair before her golden harp. Since solo harpists are rare in the south, this part of the program was an unusual treat to all music lovers. The "Barcarolle," by Labano, and the "Fantasie" for harp and piano, by Dubois, as well as the group of old melodies, beloved by all, were enthusiastically applauded. The technical ability and artistry of Mrs. Charles Chalmers was evidenced in her accompaniment of both voice and harp.

Tech High P.-T. A. Hears Address By Prof. Floyd Fields

The January meeting of the Tech High P.-T. A. held in the chamber of commerce hall Thursday evening proved interesting and stimulating, because of the splendid program. Enjoyable music was rendered by an operatic minstrel chorus composed of a cast of characters who are boys of Tech High school and who recently presented this minstrel to an enthusiastic audience at the Woman's club. Another feature of the program was the stirring address of Professor Floyd Fields, dean of men of the Georgia School of Technology. The subject was "Parents' Responsibility." Professor Fields emphasized the importance of the parents' attention to youths in senior high school. He also spoke of the responsibility assumed by the parent in rearing and influencing the boy at this strategic age.

Professor Cheney announced that the school is putting on a drive to increase the number of volumes in the library, by asking the alumnae and parents to contribute a book. An attractive sticker is being given out which is to be autographed and placed in back of book. Mr. Barron brought to the attention of this association the city school budget for 1928 and asked for their continued support.

Smillie Pre-School Circle Holds Meeting.

The pre-school circle of the Ella W. Smillie school met in the school auditorium Friday morning at 11 o'clock. Mrs. J. C. Malone spoke to the 20 mothers present on the pre-school child. This was the first real meeting since the organization of the circle, and hereafter the pre-school circle will meet on the morning of the second Tuesday in each month.

Faith P.-T.A. Emphasizes Child's Health Program.

At each of the regular meetings of the Faith P.-T. A. this year some phase of the child's health has been the subject for discussion and study. Due to the cooperation of the mothers of the P.-T. A. with the school great things have been accomplished already this year in the advancement of the health of the children. In the fall there were 40 per cent or 242 who were seriously underweight. At the last weighing this month it was found that there were only 154 seriously low in pounds. Four hundred and seventy-four children have gained weight and only 36 have lost. The total number of pounds gained in the school is 1,551.

At the meeting Thursday, January 19, M. E. Coleman, of the census and attendance department, talked on the subject of health and school attendance. At the roll call of mothers it was found that Miss Elizabeth Ramey's class, the high third, won the attendance prize.

P.-T. A. Thrift Chairman Issues Suggestions.

Mrs. F. W. Boring, chairman of thrift for the Atlanta council of Parent-Teacher associations, makes the following suggestions for the thrift committee: Plans should be begun now for holding a thrift exhibit. This exhibit can consist of such things as old garments made over, refinished articles of furniture, something different made out of something old, things which have been converted into something useful at a small expense. From the articles exhibited at your own Parent-Teacher association, the best should be selected to send to the fifth district exhibit, and in turn the best of these will be sent to the state exhibit. Do not get the idea that a thrift program is confined to the month of January. It is usually observed in that month, because Benjamin Franklin, the great exponent of thrift, was born in January, but thrift should be a matter of all the year round conservation of time, effort and resources. If you have not had a thrift program this year put one on. Write to Mrs. John W. Lloyd, associate chairman of programs for the state, and secure a suggested thrift program.

Adair P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

Adair Parent-Teacher association met Wednesday in the school auditorium. Mrs. A. J. Dunlap, the president, presided. An interesting program was enjoyed. Mrs. H. G. Parks, city chairman of pre-school work, gave a talk on pre-school work; Miss Broadnax won first prize for having most mothers present. Mrs. Thomas won second.

Lakewood P.-T. A. Reports Activities.

The Lakewood school P.-T. A. met January 20 with Mrs. F. A. Shiels, the president, presiding. Reports from different committees were most satisfying, particularly those of the house and lunch room. All grade chairmen gave interesting reports of the work being done in the class rooms. Mrs. Stephens, chairman for third grade, with Mrs. Dame, teacher, sold a quilt recently, clearing $10. This money will be used to purchase books for the book shelf in the class room.

The lunch room is being sponsored by the grade chairmen with Mrs. Folsom in the lead, she having cleared $23 in one week.

The ways and means committee, with Mrs. Peak, chairman, and Mrs. Nunnally, as vice chairman, put on a paper sale recently and realized $9.18. They also sponsored a musical entertainment in the school auditorium Friday evening. Miss Campbell gave a very interesting and instructive talk. Mrs. Dame and Mrs. Hart won the reward for the best attendance of mothers.

P.-T. A. Council Meets Thursday.

The Atlanta council, Parent-Teacher association, meets Thursday, February 2, at 10 a. m., at Rich's school room. All representatives are urged to be present.

The executive board of the Atlanta council, Parent-Teacher association, meets Monday, January 30, at 10 a. m., Rich's conference room.

I. N. Ragsdale P.-T. A. To Hear Address By Miss Postell

Miss Mary W. Postell has selected "Child Welfare" as her subject for an address to be given at the meeting of the I. N. Ragsdale P.-T. A. Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. As assistant superintendent of the elementary schools, Miss Postell is well qualified to speak on this most vital subject. Parents and friends of the school are certain of an afternoon of real value.

The association plans a valetine party to be held in the school hall early in February. Valentines, cakes, candy and drinks will be on sale. Mrs. David E. Barnett has arranged an attractive program. The date of the entertainment will be announced later.

The school is to receive a beautiful banner, pennants and caps as a gift from a particular friend of the school. Mayor I. N. Ragsdale. Jerry and India Upchurch, the grandchildren of Mayor Ragsdale, brought the news of the intended gift to the school.

The present banner and pennants carry the words, "Oakdale City School," and since the name of the school has been changed to I. N. Ragsdale, in honor of Mayor Ragsdale, it is most suitable that the new banner proudly bear the name of Atlanta's distinguished mayor.

During January the milk drive has made giant strides. A large per cent of the children have gained in weight.

On Friday the school observed their first midterm certificate day and many patrons and friends attended the exercises in the school hall.

R. L. Hope P.-T. A. Plans Benefit Bridge.

The R. L. Hope school P.-T. A. will sponsor a mammoth benefit bridge party on the Ansley roof Monday afternoon, February 6, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Joe Beutell is chairman and tables may be reserved through her by calling Hemlock 6390-J. Details of this party will be announced later.

Crew St. Pre-School Circle Holds Meeting.

The pre-school circle of Crew street met at the school Wednesday afternoon. Miss Lillian M. Alexander gave a very interesting talk and showed by charts the improvement found in the children at the time of registration for kindergarten each year, which she thought was due in a great measure to the education of mothers in the various circles throughout the city.

Peachtree Garden Club To Meet Monday.

The Peachtree Garden club meets Monday, January 30, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Thomas P. Hinman on Fifteenth street. An interesting feature of the meeting will be the talk given by J. D. Mr. and Mrs. Crump arrive early Monday from Macon and during their stay in the city they will be the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun at their home on Andrews drive.

Bradford at Spring Place. A few relatives and close friends were present. Rev. W. F. Huffaker, pastor of the Baptist church, officiated.

Mrs. King is a graduate of Central Heights school and a student at the University of Chattanooga. She is a talented musician, having been the organist of the Second Presbyterian church.

Mr. King is the youngest son of Colonel and Mrs. C. N. King, of Spring Place. He has been with the highway department in Florida, but is now connected with the Georgia highway department.

Mr. and Mrs. King will make their home in Spring Place.

Home Park P.-T.A. Daddies' Meeting Is of Interest

The Home Park P.-T. A. lived up to what the name implies Friday evening when the fathers attended, making it truly an association of parents and teachers instead of merely one of mothers and teachers. "The P.-T. A is to Home Park school what the Rock of Gibralta is to England," was the simile employed by the principal, Miss Perry Henderson, in expressing her idea of the worth of the association.

To attract, a thing must be attractive and Parent-Teacher associations are not excepted, according to Dr. Willis A. Sutton. In speaking of the P.-T. A. Dr. Sutton said: "An association that is really doing something has no need for membership drives, while one that merely holds meetings soon finds there is no one to meet." Dr. Sutton gave his famous lecture on "Health and Character," sending many parents home with many good resolutions. For the benefit of the visiting fathers the different chairmen gave reports of the past year's work.

Mrs. J. M. Hodnett, publicity chairman, pointed out to the fathers the advantages of keeping informed about the activities of the association through the local newspapers, calling their attention to the generous portion in both daily and Sunday papers devoted to P.-T. A. news. Mrs. F. C. Groover presented a handsomely decorated cake to the "lucky daddy," C. T. Causby. The regular attendance prize was won by High-4, Miss Ruth Tuggle teacher. A special prize given by Mrs. Groover was won by Low-2, Miss Lida Mell teacher. This prize being given for the class having the greatest number of daddies present.

Peeples St. P.-T.A. Meeting Attended By Two Hundred

More than 200 members of the Peeples Street school P.-T. A. were present at the meeting held at the school Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. J. Q. Hooper, presiding. Dr. Harvey Clarke, school chaplain, offered prayer.

Promotion day exercises of art and skill, combined with instructions in every subject taught in the elementary schools, was arranged and produced by the members of the sixth grade, who enter the junior high school this month. A copy was given each one as they entered the hall, and by following closely, the usual announcing was eliminated, displaying alertness of the pupils to a great advantage. All members were well given, and credit is due the entire class and their teacher, Miss Stella Murray.

The usual promotion luncheon in honor of the classes leaving the school to enter junior high was announced for Friday noon, January 27. This event is always looked forward to with much excitement by the pupils of the sixth grades.

Applause was given when Miss Ruby Jones, principal, announced that the school had attained 100 per cent perfect teeth, and named the date for a spring holiday. The membership chairman's reports show 340 mothers and 211 daddies enrolled this year. The count of parents gave the high prize to Miss Murray's class, and the low grade prize to Miss Ramey's low kindergarten.

C. to the present. Each girl appeared in a costume she had reproduced from a study of the chief characteristic of the period she represented and cleverly presented to the audience the salient features, showing the relation between the religious, political and social events of a certain period and fashions of the same date. The characters appeared in the following order: Egyptian woman, Lillian Smith; Grecian woman, Dorothy Warthen; Roman man, Grace Reid; medieval woman, Sarah Banks Walton; early renaissance woman, Mary Sams; early renaissance man, Katherine Crumpler; late renaissance woman, Mary McBrayer; late renaissance man, Ernestine Mincey; early 17th century or Puritan period woman, Margaret Conn; early 17th century man, Edna Earle McGehee; Louis period woman, Mary McCaslin; Louis period woman Ione Walling; Louis period man, Virginia Newmeyer; Empire period woman, Kathleen Winn; Empire period man, Sara Wilson.

P.-T. A. Assists Public Schools In Study of Georgia History

Intensive study of Georgia history and Georgia resources will be featured by the public schools the entire month of February. As the P.-T. A. desires to cooperate in every way possible, Mrs. George W. Price, chairman of children's reading, has secured from Carnegie library lists of books for both elementary and high school students which will be helpful in the preparation of this home work.

Mrs. Price also recommends the placing of Georgia books on the child's individual bookshelf. "For," she said, "the spirit of loyalty and self-sacrifice animates all of those who practice patriotism in every-day life and this should be fostered in the hearts of children in the home as well as in the schoolroom."

In speaking of this patriotic program Superintendent Willis A. Sutton said: "The Atlanta schools expect to use the Georgia motive throughout their work during the month of February. General Oglethorpe landed at Savannah on February 12, and that day has been observed in the Atlanta schools as Georgia day, and this year all the teaching will be around the theme of Georgia. In science, for example, the great scientists like Crawford Long and John and Joseph Leconte, and other great Georgians will furnish the motive. In literature, Joel Chandler Harris, Sidney Lanier, Frank L. Stanton, the Longstreets, Corra Harris, and great hosts of others will be the center of teaching. In history, politics, civic and statecraft the long, illustrious line of men like Toombs, Stevens, the Colquitts, Ben Hill, Henry W. Grady, and a mighty host of others will be the remainder of the study. The art teachers will cooperate with the teachers in other departments in preparation of posters. During the month of February the radio programs given by the school department at 10:30 a. m. on school days will feature Georgia history. Pilgrimages will be made to the shrines of famous Georgians. The entire past history of the state will be carefully reviewed.

"As a climax to this study, each student will carefully contemplate the resources of the state of Georgia, and decide how he or she may best develop the forces and products of the great state. Each child will be required to formulate a creed to govern his or her life in order to make Georgia a still greater and better state."

Books on Georgia.

The following is a list of books about Georgia that are in the children's department of the Carnegie library for use of elementary and junior high school students: 975.8, Avery, I. W., "History of the State of Georgia 1850 to 1881," 1881; 917.58 Bloodworth, J. A., "Getting Acquainted With Georgia," 1926; Bowden, H. S., "Building the Empire State," 1925; J-975.8, Brooks, R. Gives Your Hair Unusual Beauty

The attractiveness of even the most beautiful women depends upon the loveliness of their hair.

Fortunately, beautiful hair is now easily obtained. It is simply a matter of shampooing.

Proper shampooing makes the hair soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

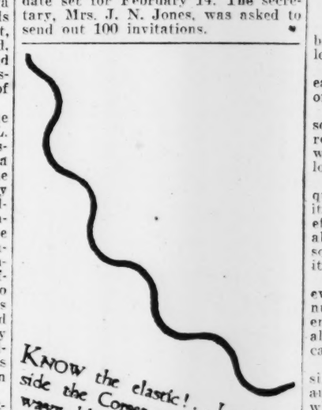

That is why discriminating women everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

It leaves the hair soft, silky and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store.

A four-ounce bottle lasts for months.—(adv.)

Prayer vs. Worry.

Prayer is an acknowledgment of faith. Worry is a denial of faith.

Prayer is putting one's hand in God's, trusting to his guidance. Worry is withdrawing the hand and denying His power to lead.

Prayer leads through the door of faith into the presence of God. Worry leads through the door of anxiety into the darkness of loneliness and discouragement.

If prayer does not cancel worry, worry will cancel prayer.

North Carolina Glee Club Comes To Atlanta Monday Evening

One of the most noteworthy artistic attractions ever offered the Atlanta public will be the performance of the University of North Carolina Glee club Monday evening, January 30, at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium, at 8:15 o'clock.

Many homes have been opened wide for their entertainment, and a spirit of comraderie is being manifested by the sister colleges of Atlanta, each college sending representatives and the respective glee clubs to this performance as especial honor guests.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, and Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, general chairman, will be the official hostesses, assisted by the officers of the junior department and the Debutante club of 1927-28. The officers of the club who will assist are Mrs. J. R. Hornaday first vice president; Mrs. De Los Hill, second vice president; Mrs. J. R. Billups, recording secretary; Mrs. J. P. Womble, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John S. Brogdon, treasurer; Mrs. E. B. Havis, Jr., assistant treasurer, and Mrs. W. F. Melton, auditor. The hospitality committee, with Mrs. M. L. Thrower chairman and Mrs. George L. Brower co-chairman, and the house committee, with Mrs. T. G. Delph chairman, will also assist.

Especial guests of honor will be Dr. E. R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott; Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory university; Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia School of Technology; Professor Sutton, of the Atlanta public schools; Mr. Peacock, principal of the Peacock School of Boys; Professor Dendy, principal of the University school; Miss Rosa Woodbury, principal of the Woodbury School for Young Ladies, and the different glee clubs of the city.

During a recent tour abroad these North Carolina boys made a wonderful record for themselves and critics in London, Paris and other European cities have much favorable comment of these Tar Heels in the press of these different countries. A special dispatch from a Paris paper says: "The club sang a varied program, with folk songs, chorales, negro spirituals and madrigals. A feature was inclusion, for the first time, of several negro 'work songs.' Excellent tone, clear diction and earnestness of presentation marked their singing."

The Stratford-Upon-Avon Herald had to say of these North Carolina boys upon their recent trip abroad: "In 'Now Is the Month of Maying,' Morley's madrigal, using the right nuances, they seemed to capture the spirit of our old English community song. Certainly they deserved the warm round of applause. The lilt of this quaint composition, 'Little David Play on Your Harp,' was such that the audience could have listened all the afternoon."

Composing the committee of entertainment are Judge Shepherd Bryan, alumni and director on the university board; J. W. Speas, president of the Alumni Association of the University of North Carolina; T. B. Higdon, president of the North Carolina club, and G. F. Willis, Atlanta capitalist.

Entertaining these young men, who will arrive by bus tomorrow from Chapel Hill, will be Mr. and Mrs. George Forrester, Mr. and Mrs. Clark H. Howell, Dr. and Mrs. Claude Hughes, Dr. E. G. Ballenger, T. B. Higdon, Judge and Mrs. Shepherd Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Speas, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Neely, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Prescott and Graham Dozier, one of the students at the University of North Carolina, whose home is in Atlanta.

New Hair Mode from Broadway

Everyone admires my hair, now that I'm doing it the new way that nearly every really smart girl I know is using," says Miss Agnes Traney, popular dancer, now appearing in the Broadway hit, "Rio Rita." "My hair doesn't need shampooing more than once a month now. My scalp feels better than it ever has felt. I have gotten rid of all my dandruff. My hair is much easier to arrange, and it stays that way. All I do to keep it like this is put a few dashes of Danderine on my brush every time I use it. It's wonderful how Danderine adds to the beauty of your hair, makes it look so silky and lustrous."

Danderine is not oily. It removes the oily film from each strand of hair and restores the natural color and lustre. It dissolves dandruff, cleanses and invigorates the scalp. It is delightfully fragranced. The big bottles are just 35c at all drug stores. Beautiful, smooth, gleaming hair and a healthy scalp for a few cents.—(adv.)

Pattillo Society.

The Woman's Missionary society, of the Pattillo Memorial Methodist church held its first literary meeting of the year at the church Thursday afternoon, January 19. Mrs. L. L. Barnes, chairman of circle No. 1, in charge.

The program was a celebration of the jubilee year which marks the fiftieth anniversary of the Woman's Missionary society in the Southern Methodist church. The first meeting was held in First church, Atlanta, in 1878.

The seven Sabbaths of years were represented by seven women bearing lighted candles. The first Sabbath of the years 1878-1885, was the period of preparation, of foundation; the second, 1886-1829, saw the organization of the parsonage and home mission society; the third, 1893-1899, saw the beginning of pioneer work in Korea and China; the fourth, 1900-1906, was marked by the raising of a great twentieth century fund known as the "silver jubilee" offering; the fifth, 1907-1913, the era of union of the two boards of woman's work into one, the woman's missionary council; the sixth, 1914-1920, was marked by the development of the native missionary societies, and the seventh, the period of 1921-1927, was the "Sabbath of giving" to the Belle Bennett Memorial, of Scarritt college.

Haygood Methodists.

The junior church at Haygood Memorial is functioning as well as a grown-up church. Manned by junior stewards, this young organization is taking its place in the foretront of all junior churches. The directors of this growing concern are Mrs. M. E. Tilly, conference officer in charge of children's work, and Mrs. R. H. Dominick, president of juniors at Haygood Memorial.

All the adult organizations of the church are giving the juniors a helping hand, and by their hearty cooperation and support are lifting it up to the place of dignity and honor it deserves in the body politic of the church. The junior church is no longer looked upon as just a "children's affair" but has become the great concern of the church. Haygood Memorial is setting the pace. Let the other junior churches fall in line.

State W.C.T.U. Headquarters Are Transferred to Atlanta

BY FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

The new state W. C. T. U. headquarters have been located at 605 Thrower building, Atlanta. Miss Ruby Rivers, who was secretary and manager in Macon continues in charge. The state president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, has her private office there. Already visitors from different parts of the state have begun dropping in for a chat about the work, to look over the new literature and to get in closer touch with the state plans and activities. The Thrower building formerly the Austell building, has stood in the center of Atlanta amid its grime and smoke and the outside at first seemed rather gloomy and forbidding. But the new steam process of cleaning is giving it a fresh appearance, so that it will soon look like a brand new office building. Is this an example that things always are cleaner wherever the W. C. T. U. goes? The letters W. C. T. U. have been interpreted to mean washing contracts taken unconditionally. Come to think of it, about the time the Georgia W. C. T. U. headquarters were established in Macon two years ago in a suite of rooms in the Macon National bank that building was beautifully remodeled throughout and white marble made clean and elegant its exterior. It cannot be truly denied, however, that the W. C. T. U. has made brighter, cleaner, more presentable and more agreeable many men, women and children—in a mental and moral as well as a physical sense, also that because of its efforts cities and towns, homes and highways are cleaner and safer. The W. T. C. U. may be depended upon to continue its "dry" cleaning work as long as the need exists. To change the metaphor, as Miss Anna Gordon, president of the World's W. C. T. U., expressed it: "In the punctuation of the W. C. T. U. there isn't a period within a million miles of us."

IN MEMORIAM.

The February issue of the Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin will carry tributes of love and esteem from each of the state W. C. T. U. officers for the late state treasurer, Miss Josephine Lewis Hammond, of Monroe. Miss Hammond's funeral was held in the Monroe Methodist church Thursday afternoon, January 19, and was conducted by her pastor, Rev. E. W. Jones, assisted by two former pastors, Rev. G. F. Venable, of East Point, and Rev. W. T. Irvine, of Covington. The service was unusually beautiful and was featured by impressive eulogies, songs and prayers.

The honorary escort was composed of Mrs. Marvin Williams, Atlanta; Mrs. W. G. Cotton, Columbus; Mrs. J. L. McGarity, Monroe; Mrs. Robert H. McDougall, Jr., and Mrs. N. C. McPherson, Atlanta; Mrs. W. P. Perry and Mrs. E. L. Almand, Sr., Monroe; Mrs. W. P. King, Athens; Mrs. W. C. Clark, Covington; Mrs. E. R. Cooke, Winder, all state, district, county or local officers, also the members of the Monroe W. C. T. U.

A great concourse of friends and relatives were in attendance. Quantities of flowers from numbers of unions and groups of officers and many other friends gave fragrant testimony of admiration and appreciation for Miss Hammond which words fail to express. The numbers of letters and telegrams sent her family was very large. The Georgia W. C. T. U. has suffered a severe loss in the passing of Miss Hammond.

MRS. McGARITY APPOINTED.

Mrs. J. L. McGarity, of Monroe, has been appointed to fill the unexpired term of Miss Hammond, as state W. C. T. U. treasurer. Mrs. McGarity is fitted for this office by her knowledge of W. C. T. U. methods and aims and by her experience in business affairs. She has worked long with Miss Hammond in the W. C. T. U. and loves the organization. She has served as local president and as treasurer, also as president of the eighth district W. C. T. U. and she served efficiently.

She was associated with Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard one year as assistant state recording secretary, and was made recording secretary when Mrs. Dillard did not stand for reelection at the Savannah convention last fall. Mrs. McGarity compiled and edited the annual state report, so that her work in that office is practically finished for the year.

CAMPAIGN CONFERENCE.

The one of the eleven campaign conferences in which the Georgia W. C. T. U. is especially interested is to be held at Jacksonville, Fla., February 21-22 when Georgia, South Carolina and Florida will unite in making it a success. Every Georgia member is cordially invited to attend. It will be pleasant to make up parties and go by automobile from all about over the state. Mrs. Williams, the state president, says: "Let every woman who can, especially those who are near the Florida line, plan to take a trip to Jacksonville on the dates mentioned. Let us crowd Jacksonville with 'dry' southern women at this meeting."

Five state W. C. T. U. presidents will be on the program, including: Mrs. Sarah H. Hoge, of Virginia; Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, of Missouri; Mrs. Joseph Sprott, of South Carolina; Miss Minnie E. Neal, of Florida, and Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Georgia. In addition to these, Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Georgia, one of the most popular speakers of the national W. C. T. U., and others. It will be a notable occasion.

A SPEAKER IN FLORIDA.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Tate, and Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins of Milledgeville, are filling lecture engagements in Florida. In writing of a great get-together meeting to be held in St. Petersburg Monday, February 6, the Florida Good News says: "Mrs. Mary Harris Armor will have a part in the discussions and will be the speaker at night. Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Georgia; Mrs. Elizabeth Perkins, of Ann Arbor, Mich., and other distinguished and outstanding temperance workers are expected, as well as a number of south Florida directors and district presidents. Make a note of the date and plan to attend. If it is fair time in Tampa, you can take advantage of the reduced railroad rates."

SYMPATHY EXTENDED.

The many W. C. T. U. friends over the state sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. N. C. McPherson in the death of their little grandson, Hoyt H. McPherson, Jr., and of course the sympathy extends to the parents of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt H. McPherson. The fine little boy died at the family home in Atlanta Saturday morning.

DUES TEA.

The Columbus, Theresa Griffith union gave a dues tea Saturday in the parlors of St. Luke church. One hundred and nine paid dues. The cash Penny-a-Day members for the headquarters fund paid $42.90 and others pledged to pay. The state work budget was not overlooked by those contributing.

Hill-Norris Wedding Ceremony Is Beautiful Twilight Event

One of the loveliest weddings of the winter season was that of Mrs. Genevieve Harper Hill and Joel Davis Norris, which was solemnized Saturday evening, January 28, at Sirron Gardens, the lovely suburban home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Norris, which is situated between Chamblee and Dunwoody. Rev. T. H. Shackleford performed the ceremony.

The decorations of tall, stately palms, which formed an altar for the ceremony, were arranged in one end of the long living room of the home. At either end of the altar tall cathedral candles were interspersed with a profusion of white roses. A prie dieu of satin, showered with roses and valley lilies, completed the improvised altar.

Preceding the ceremony a beautiful musical program was rendered. "Just a Song at Twilight" was sung by Mrs. Al Tates. Ushering in the bridal party, a choir of voices rendered the bridal chorus from Lohengrin.

Bridal Party.

Little Jimmie Ahern and Edmonde Massa, nephews of the groom, entered first carrying the white ribbons, which formed an aisle for the wedding party. They wore white satin suits. Then two dainty little maidens, Elizabeth Colley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Colley, and Genevieve Stevens, niece of the bride, acting as flower girls, entered. They wore exquisite dresses made alike of ruffles of pink tulle over taffeta, picoted in silver. On the shoulder was a shower of pink ribbons and a bandeaux of ribbon was worn on the head. They carried lovely colonial bouquets of mixed flowers in lace holders and wore pink socks and pink kid slippers to match their costumes.

Little Edwin Clark Hill, wearing a white velvet suit with lace collar and cuffs, bearing the ring on a white satin pillow showered with lilies of the valley, preceded the bride and her mother, Mrs. W. J. Harper, who gave her in marriage. The bride and her mother were joined at the altar by the groom and his father, A. L. Norris, who acted as best man. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. H. Shackleford.

Mrs. Harper's dress was a beautiful model of oyster white net made over orchid satin and elaborately trimmed in gold and white crystals. It was made basque effect, with an immense bow of orchid tulle at the side. Her slippers were orchid satin. She wore a cascade shoulder bouquet of orchids, valley lilies and violets.

Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful brunette beauty of the bride was enhanced by her exquisite bridal dress of flesh-colored tulle. A panel extending the length of the dress in front was radiant with trimmings of rhinestones and crystals and a succession of ruffles across the back and sides of the skirt gave a very bouffant effect. The uneven hemline gave a view of dainty flesh hose and pink suede slippers, adorned with pink pearl buckles. A turban arrangement of tulle was worn on the head with a soft fold falling gracefully around her neck, which was caught on the shoulder with an exquisite bunch of apple blossoms. Her bouquet was of pink butterfly roses, white lilacs, gardenias and valley lilies edged with real lace ruffles and a bow of pink ribbon and lace.

Mrs. Norris, mother of the groom, was gowned in black transparent velvet and her shoulder corsage was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Frank M. Stevens, sister of the bride, wore a charming gown of pink chiffon with trimmings of velvet bands studded with rhinestones. Her shoulder corsage was of pink roses and lavender sweet peas.

Mrs. E. A. Massa, sister of the groom, wore an imported model of white with trimmings of crystals, and her shoulder corsage was of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. J. C. Ahern, another sister of the groom, was gowned in rose chiffon, and wore a shoulder corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Marguerite H. Burke, sister of the bride, wore peach-colored lace and georgette embroidered in gold.

Mrs. E. W. Born, of New York, aunt of the bride, wore black lace.

Reception Follows.

Mrs. Massa and Mrs. Ahern assisted at the reception which followed the ceremony. In the dining room, where the decorations were similar to those in the reception rooms, the table had as its central decoration a cake of rare beauty, composed of two tiers, with white candy basket on the top, decorated with two butterflies. The cake was decorated with pastel-colored flowers with two love birds on the sides.

Unshaded tapers shed a soft light over the table, with its cover of lace and silver dishes of decorated mints and nuts.

The bride's book was kept by Mrs. E. C. Ripley, Jr., and Mrs. Roy Le Craw. Mrs. Charles Evans presided at the coffee table.

Mrs. Norris is the daughter of Mrs. William James Harper. Mr. Norris is the production manager of the Norris Candy company. He attended Riverside academy and the University of Georgia, where he was a popular member of the S. A. E. fraternity.

Out-of-town guests for the occasion were Mrs. Joseph Harper and Edward Harper, of Jacksonvile, Fla.

After a wedding journey the young couple will be at home at the Della Manta apartments on The Prado.

Miss Kirkpatrick is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace M. Kirkpatrick, life-long residents of Atlanta. Mr. Kirkpatrick was long prominently known in the business world as a member of the Kirkpatrick-Hightower Hardware company. Mrs. Kirkpatrick, the former Miss Leila O'Keefe, who was a belle and beauty of Atlanta and a graduate of Lucy Cobb institute ,numbers her friends by the score. Her paternal grandfather, Honorable James Mason Kirkpatrick, of Decatur, Ga., was distinguished during a long and useful career in positions of honor in educational and religious circles. Her paternal grandmother, Elizabeth Anne Dabney, is descended from the famous theologian, Dr. Dabney, professor of theology at Union seminary, Richmond, Va.

She is the niece of Mrs. Chalmers Fraser, Mrs. Kate Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Mattie Kirkpatrick, all of Decatur, Ga.; Mrs. Drury J. Powers and Mrs. J. O. O'Keefe Nelson, of Atlanta. She is the sister of Mrs. Eugene Wrigley, of Miami Beach, Fla.; Wallace M. Kirkpatrick, Jr., of New York; Mrs. H. Renwick Dunlap and Miss Edith Kirkpatrick, of Atlanta, Ga. Miss Kirkpatrick, who is a graduate of the Girls' High school, and a lovely member of society, has been a leader in the young people's organizations of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Fiege, son of Mrs. J. Roscoe Fiege and the late J. Roscoe Fiege, was born in Kentucky but has resided in Atlanta for a number of years. He attended Boys' High school and the Georgia School of Technology, where he was a popular member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Mr. Fiege has been connected with the Royal Insurance company for the past four years, and is now special agent for this company in New Orleans, La. His mother was formerly Miss Mabel Claire Lyons, of Louisville, Ky., and on his maternal side he traces his lineage from the present representative Lillard and Ripy families of Kentucky back to the widely known Whites of Virginia ancestry. On his father's side Mr. Fiege inherits Virginia ancestry through the well known Howard family of the southwest part of the state.

The marriage of Miss Kirkpatrick and Mr. Fiege will be solemnized Wednesday afternoon, February 15, at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Kirkpatrick, on Twenty-sixth street.

Travel Takes Its Toll

. . . in freshness of appearance and in one's soft, clear complexion! Train smoke that seeps in through windows—dust that settles thickly when one is motoring—these are the things that ruin the best complexion, and play havoc with one's plans for a "beautiful" trip!

Of course one can't overcome these difficulties, but one can remedy their injurious results — easily, pleasantly. The right cleansing creams will take away the grime of travel—the correct tissue building lotions will repair the ravages of the road. Take them with you and be prepared for further combat with wind and sun and shining sea waves!

FASHION'S FOOTPRINTS ON SOUTHERN SANDS

FOOTPRINTS have been a dead give-away from the time when Robinson Crusoe discovered Friday's tracks in the sand and knew that somewhere on an apparently desolate island there was life!

Fashion, trailing her casual way across Southern Sands, makes no attempt to disguise the fact that she has come straight from Allen's. In the jaunty twist of her hat—in the modish cut of her smart ensemble—in the snug fit of her shoe one sees the unmistakable signs of character and chic that are synonymous with Allen's.

There is that stunning white ensemble that she wears—the coat and skirt of white kasha, the blouse of heavy white crepe de chine, pictured above ($165.)

At the left, observe her sports frock of silk and silk jersey. The skirt of crepe de chine, in tan—the blouse of dull rose stripes shot with gold, alternating with tan jersey stripes, in horizontal pattern. ($29.75.)

Next, a Delman model in white kid with twisted strap of tan astralac that will leave the most aristocratic and youthful of footprints — Peter Pan, this shoe is called. ($27.50.)

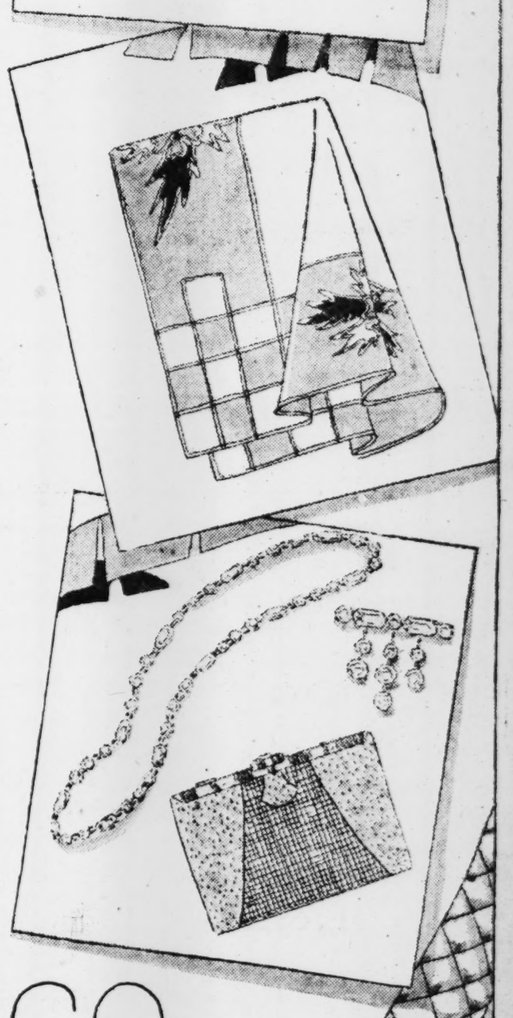

Her hat, an imported Baku straw, from Normandie, is edged with navy grosgrain ribbon, and follows the original brim line that lies close to the face, yet varies from the usual. ($35.)

The foundation of her smart silhouette — the Scantie—four garments in one, slim, silken piece! Brassiere, girdle, vest and panties. ($12.50.)

To flaunt color she wears a brilliant scarf—shown in rich greens and tans and golds and browns! Worn in careless grace. ($8.95.)

Her bag is of the smart Toyo Straw combined with Trout Calf. She chose green from a bewildering array of lovely colors! ($6.95.)

And her jewelry is light, clear and lovely—Chanel, of course! A glittering necklace and a novel style in a brooch to match. (Necklace, $39.75. Brooch, $13.75.)

"THE STORE ALL WOMEN KNOW"
PEACHTREE AT CAIN

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

VERILY, THE BALMY AIR of tropical countries is luring Mayfairites to turn their faces southward, and there is a noticeable depletion in the smart set ranks to such sunny climes as southern Europe, The Bahamas, Cuba and Florida. A pleasurable cruise into the mysterious lands lying beyond the horizon of every day life awaits Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Elkin; their sister, Miss Jennie Duncan, and niece, Mrs. Edward Barnard, of Washington, D. C., who sailed away from New York aboard the Carinthia, a little more than a week ago, on a Mediterranean cruise de luxe. They will view the scenic splendor of the Riviera and other thrilling sights in interesting old world lands will afford seventy-two days of delightful diversion. It was the prospect of visiting the Holy Land that enthused Mrs. Elkin and Miss Duncan more than any other place listed in their itinerary, and from whence they continue their travels into ancient Egypt, so filled with historic interest.

Harkening to the call of the pirates of pleasure, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Atkinson are comfortably settled in their home in the Bermuda Islands, the international playground occupying an enchanted spot in mid-ocean. They built a home at Tuckerstown, and christened it "Atlanta," and they belong to the Mid-Ocean Golf club colony, entertaining at their home in Bermuda with the same distinctive charm that characterizes the quality of hospitality for which they are famed in this city. No motors disturb the restfulness of this British isle of perpetual summer where golf stands preeminent as the game of the hour, augmented with tennis, bathing, sailing and driving. As honorary members of the Golf club, Mr. Atkinson and Charles B. MacDonald, the latter dubbed the "father of golf," seek happiness in the activity offered by a game played over the superbly kept and inviting greens. From this enchanting rendezvous, Mr. Atkinson is weaving his plans and directing with a master hand the April grand opera festival to be held in Atlanta.

The glorious sunlight and Venetian skies of Palm Beach, which won the hearts of Spanish conquistadores, hold alluring invitation to Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. English, leaving early in February to enjoy their annual pilgrimage to this wonderful American Riviera, and swell the Atlanta colony, which is certain to be augmented at this fashionable resort by such prominent personages as Mrs. John E. Murphy, Miss Katherine Murphy and Mrs. William T. Healey, whose charming personality and repartee attract admiration from a following in every clime.

Augmenting the fairest ranks of feminity in Miami are two Atlanta belles, Miss Margaret Elder and Miss Edythe Coleman, who form the inspiration daily for a round of luncheons, teas and dinners and are rarely missed from the scene of aquatic sports at the beach. Miss Elder divides her time between the charming Spanish bungalow of her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Elder, in Coral Gables, and the palatial residence of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Nolan, on Brickell avenue. Her mother, Mrs. Sterling Elder, shares honors at many of the lovely parties planned in her honor.

Miss Coleman is the attractive guest of Miss Edith Carpenter, who formerly lived in the city joining the Atlanta colony in Miami, a few years ago, when her family moved to the Florida city.

Mrs. Lee Ashcraft accompanied Mr. Ashcraft, who journeyed to Florida climes a few weeks ago to recuperate from a recent illness. They spent some time at Bellaire, enjoying the quiet and the health-giving sunshine, and are now ensconced at Tampa Terrace, in Tampa, for a stay of some length.

The handsome winter home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hagan, at Sarasota, Fla., has been opened for the season and is the scene of much social gaiety, due to the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Hagan's lovely daughter, Miss Julianne Hagan, and her close friend and companion, Miss Lutitia Johnson, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Johnson. A perfect foil for each other, Miss Hagan's blond beauty appears in striking contrast to the vivid brunette coloring of Miss Johnson, and they are never separated for long, making an annual pilgrimage to fashionable Florida resorts. This season they will add to their itinerary a trip to picturesque Havana and other points on Cuban shores.

From Cincinnati to Florida is not such a jaunt especially when the sights of Atlanta are viewed en-passant. That is the opinion of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Schaffner, Miss Mary Schaffner and Miss Jeanette Albers, a congenial party who spent some time here with Mrs. Louise Spalding Foster en route to the land of palms. While in Atlanta this party from "Cincy" were delightfully entertained until the thought of Palm Beach breezes and sunny shores brought forth the big touring car in which they had just traversed the snow-clad mountains of Tennessee and took them, golf sticks and all, toward balmy southern climes.

BEING whispered over the oolong is the intention of a very attractive widow and equally attractive bachelor of entering a Darby and Joan existence in the springtime. Theirs is not a leap year romance for it began several years ago and has weathered several storms which threatened to submerge the romantic ship upon which they sailed.

Their extraordinary understanding of one another and the certainty that their tastes coincide have convinced their friends and relatives that perfect bliss and happiness awaits them in their venture into matrimony. They like to ride, dance, play bridge, and motor, and possess the same priceless quality for enjoying life in a wholesome manner. Then too—there is quite a deep affection existing between the bachelor and the widow's charming children.

THE HOUSE PARTY being entertained by Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little at Oakland plantation, 20 miles from Albany, recalls a social regime existing in the days when the aristocracy of the south lived in leisurely elegance. The hosts motored to this point last week to meet Mr. and Mrs. John Jay Watson, those interesting New Yorkers who have often visited them in the grand opera season in Atlanta, with Colonel and Mrs. Alexander R. Lawton, so well identified with Georgia's social and cultural life, journeying forth from Savannah to be their guests over the week-end. Mrs. Little dispenses that same hospitality at her country estate, for which she is noted and which is very expertly and charmingly tested in her town apartment at the Biltmore. The pleasing and thoughtful quality of her graciousness at Oakland plantation creates an ideal atmosphere harmonizing with the restfulness of the home.

A bus, seating some bakers dozen, meets the train at Albany and the 20-mile motor trip is made over splendidly paved roads, and tea is served immediately upon their arrival. The house is a large, two-story structure built of clapboard, painted white, while wide, copper screened verandas, inlaid with Spanish tile, run around three sides of the upper and lower floors, and windows look out on one side upon gorgeous specimens of flowers blooming in an old-fashioned garden, while a pecan grove on the other attracts the vision. Seven boudoirs and connecting private baths provide comfort for the individual guest. The days are passed in a manner to seem as quaintly impossible of reproduction and belonging to a past era, so unhurried is the program as compared to the present day, and there are servants to administer to their needs, who have been there for generations, one in particular, a man born on the plantation 70 years ago.

A slight summary of the events brings to mind the steaming hot breakfast served on trays with crisp, golden-brown waffles and home-made sausage to tempt the appetite. Many, in fact nearly all of the delicious dishes served at the plantation are prepared from products raised there. Later on in the day, say at about noon, Mr. and Mrs. Little meet their guests in the spacious living room on the first floor. Walks and motor rides over a very attractive bit of south Georgia country afford great amusement, with stops for informal visits to Mr. and Mrs. Little's brother, Samual Dunlap, beau ideal and a most eligible, fascinating bachelor, residing at Hickory Grove, only a mile or so distant, and at Listnen Hill, the plantation belonging to their sister, Mrs. Henry F. Wortham, located something over four miles away. An interchange of hospitality between the owners of these estates brings the company together for many happy hours, smacking of a period when southerners entertained in a fashion excelled by no other part of the United States.

A dinner at the casino at Blue Radium Springs, three miles out from Albany, and one of the most beautiful spots in Georgia, with Barron Collier as host, is on the list of entertainments for the house party guests.

The congenial group of Atlantans enjoying the forthcoming week at Oakland plantation include Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, Mrs. John E. Murphy and W. E. Chapin.

"Oh, we are proud of our club today
For it has reached an age when we can say
Give a cheer, three times three
For the 21st birthday of the Coterie."

SO EXCLAIMED the members of the Twentieth Century Coterie at the January celebration of the twenty-first birthday of the organization.

"And why did you decide to celebrate the twenty-first birthday anniversary," an interested member was asked.

"Oh, why we are of age now," was the prompt reply.

For helpfulness in study, research and social intercourse this club with only 15 members was formed in 1906. It was first known as the "Minerva Coterie," but the volley of questions which they soon received left little doubt that they were indeed considered wise. So they became "The Twentieth Century Coterie."

Mrs. Ella C. Merrill was the first president; Mrs. Norman Poole the first secretary, and Mrs. Milo T. Morris was the first teacher.

Among the distinguished members of this club are Miss Mary Brent Whiteside, Mrs. Will Cole Jones, Mrs. H. R. Berry, Mrs. J. A. Campbell, of Decatur; Mrs. S. W. McCallie, wife of the state geologist, and Mrs. Mary Nunnally Lawton, of New York city, an associate member.

An annual meeting at which was served food typical of the country which they had studied throughout the year, was a feature of the club.

EVEN a canary has a will of its own; that is, judging from the fluffy little songster that brightens the corner of Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore's sun parlor.

Every morning at breakfast she takes her place beside Mrs. Moore at the breakfast table.

Every morning she must have her biscuit at the same moment that her mistress is having her tea.

Every morning she refuses to be disturbed.

For this remarkable bit of a bird is as devoted as she is determined. Her feathers ruffle, her little head ducks, indignation speaks through her very presence if any one dares to suggest a return to the cage by the door. To try and remove her biscuit is to bring forth a determined little foot, and a chirp that says louder than words, "No, no."

But fortunately she is a privileged character.

She still has her breakfasts beside Mrs. Moore.

AN AMUSING incident occurred recently in the home of a beautiful Atlanta widow where a group of friends gathered for tea. Prideful ownership gleamed in the sparkling brown eyes of the widow as she displayed a 10x14 likeness of a masculine admirer hailing from an eastern city who sent her the photograph as a Yuletide gift. A well-known Atlanta widower in the group commented most extravagantly upon the sartorial splendor worn by the widow's friend, remarking upon the smartness of his business suit, the swankiness of his walking cane and his extremely ritzy spats. Not once did he allow his jealous gaze to travel to the face of his rival, and in so far as the Atlanta suitor was concerned the gentleman in the photograph was entirely without countenance. Was it a delicate way of reprimanding the pretty widow to whom he has been paying court with matrimonial intentions?

A ROMANCE which has piqued the curosity of society revolves around a very attractive visitor who was here but recently, and an equally attractive bachelor hailing from another southern state, is predicted to have its culmination in a marriage. The bride-elect, by rights, belongs to Atlanta because her parents lived here for many years before moving to a distant midwestern city and when she returns for visits to Atlanta relatives a perfect whirl of social gaieties make her the center of much attention.

The sweetheart of the subject of this bit of chatter happens to be the brother of her best friend. Should she elect to embark on uncharted matrimonial seas her reception into the family circle will be invested with deep affection and to her will be extended a welcome fraught with meaning and perfect understanding.

League Membership Drive Begins Wednesday Under Mrs. Payne

Mrs. Harvey Payne, chairman of the membership committee of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, announces that the membership drive opens Wednesday, February 1. Members of Mrs. Payne's committee have been organizing their squads during the past week and all of the drive workers are to meet for the last instructions and their material on Tuesday morning, January 31, at 10:30 o'clock at the league headquarters, 356 Candler annex. There will be 18 squads composed of a captain and six workers. Each worker has a minimum quota of six members to secure, which will assure a total during the drive of 756 members. Mrs. Payne emphasizes that four objectives have been suggested for those joining, first, prompt registration (if eligible); second, consideration of both sides of political questions; third, encouragement, by example, of personal tolerance and individual thought; fourth, voting in all elections, when reasonably possible; fifth, reading the "Pilgrim and Facts;" and sixth, prompt payment of league dues.

Mrs. Alfred Bailey, league president, announces that the league in pursuance of the policy adopted at its recent annual meeting will send out the first issue of its new bulletin, "Facts," this week, with its purpose stated to give the public non-partisan political facts without rancor or bias.

Registration in Fulton County.

Mrs. R. L. Turman, chairman of efficiency in government, asks the question: "Are you registered for the county democratic primary on March 7?" She says that every citizen wishing to vote in the primary should see that his name is on the registration list in the office of the Fulton county tax collector on or before February 6, 1928.

The league members in DeKalb county do not vote in the primary of March 7, but register at the DeKalb county courthouse for state and national elections or primaries. These members must register at the city hall in Atlanta if within the city limits. This registration at the city hall should be done at once, although it may be done any time during the year, as the list closes 30 days prior to each primary or election.

Mrs. Fred Ardary, chairman of the ninth ward, calls a meeting Wednesday, February 1, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Claude McGinnis, 1042 Oakdale road. Mrs. Emmitt Quinn, chairman of the committee on industry for the Georgia league, will be principal speaker. Mrs. R. M. Carraway, chairman for the same committee in the Atlanta league, will be honor guest.

Mrs. R. S. Goulden, chairman of the twelfth ward, calls a meeting Wednesday, February 1, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. C. W. Butler, 309 Gordon avenue, N. E.

Mrs. Emil Breitenbucher has been appointed chairman of the league committee on education by Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president of the league. Mrs. R. M. Carraway was appointed chairman of women in industry.

Reservations for the Georgia league luncheon to be held in honor of Miss Jeanette Rankin, first congressman, must be made at league headquarters, Walnut 8264. Atlanta league members have been invited to attend and may bring friends if reservations are made in advance. Plates will be $1 each and the luncheon will take place on Wednesday, February 1, at the Atlanta Woman's club.

The voters' service continues to be of interest to members. The subject put on the air at 6 o'clock Tuesday, January 31, will be "Flood Control," broadcast from WRC, Washington, over the red network of the National Broadcasting company. Three experts, Brigadier General Edgar Jadwin, chief of engineers, United States army; former Governor John M. Parker, of Louisiana, and Colonel Robert Isham Randolph, of Chicago, a widely known construction engineer, will be speakers. A list of books on this subject, compiled by the American Library association, are as follows: Lyle Saxon, "Father Mississippi," the story of the last Mississippi flood; George W. Pickels, "Drainage and Flood Control Engineering," and Arthur L. Morgan, "The Mississippi." Meeting a Mighty Problem, Atlantic Monthly, November, 1927.

Miss Bessye Allen To Become Bride of Ira Hamilton Hardin

Miss Bessye Allen, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Stephens Allen, of Decatur, whose engagement is announced today to Ira Hamilton Hardin.

Cordial interest is centered throughout Georgia, South Carolina and Virginia in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Bessye Allen and Ira Hamilton Hardin.

Miss Allen is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Stephens Allen, of Decatur. She possesses great personal charm and is unusually talented.

After finishing high school in Decatur she completed her education at Brenau college, Gainesville, where she was a popular member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and took a leading part in all school activities.

Mr. Hardin is the elder son of Dr. and Mrs. L. Sage Hardin, of Atlanta. He was graduated from the Georgia School of Technology in the class of 1924, was a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity and is now identified in business as a member of A. K. Adams and company, of Atlanta.

Fashionable Ceremony Unites Miss Maria Brown and Mr. Blake

Miss Maria Christine Brown, beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Ten Eyck Brown, became the bride of Thomas Dawes Blake, II, of Orlando, Fla., formerly of Boston, Mass., at a fashionable ceremony solemnized at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at St. Luke's Episcopal church.

The marriage service was read by Bishop H. J. Mikell, the ceremony being witnessed by a large and representative assemblage of southern society.

The interior of the church presented a scene of tropical beauty, with quantities of large California Woodwardie ferns banking the choir loft and massed in the window recesses. Interspersing this background of green were tall white wicker floor vases filled with stately Easter lilies and fragrant pink radiance roses. Flanking either side of the altar were brass cathedral vases filled with Easter lilies, denoting purity. Large clusters of the same lovely blossoms marked the pews reserved for the members of the family connection.

A program of beautiful nuptial music, arranged and rendered by Hugh Hodgson, eminent Georgia musician, preceded the ceremony and included the "Swedish Wedding March," by Soedermann; "Memories," by St. Clair; "Andantino," by Batiste; "Cantilena," by Widor; "Adulation," by Gaul, and "Canzonetta," by Armstrong. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" announced the approach of the bridal party and Mendelssohn's wedding march was played as the recessional.

Bridal Processional.

Leading the bridal processional were the ushers who included Samuel Weyman, Hunt Chipley, A. H. Bancker, Henry B. Scott, Tom Fuller, of Charlotte, N. C.; Frank Inman and Alfredo Barili.

Miss Susan Blake, of Boston, Mass., sister of the groom; Mrs. Alberta Lewis Campbell, Mrs. Fitzhugh White and Mrs. George Weyman served as bridesmaids, while the bride had as her maid of honor, her sister, Miss Frances Brown.

These attendants were gowned alike in Parisian costumes of rosy beige satin combined with tulle of the same shade. Fashioned with yokes of tulle the bodices of the gowns were appliqued with satin in V-shape, the satin extending below the hips where the skirts, formed of two layers of tulle, were joined with rows of shirring, and finished at the back with two tulle panels which formed graceful trains. Long, close-fitting sleeves of tulle, and narrow stitched satin belts fastened with handsome rhinestone buckles, were other distinctive features of the gowns. The hats worn by the attendants were wide-brimmed French felts in the same shade of rosy beige as the gowns, banded with grosgrain ribbon which was caught at the left side with exquisite topaz buckles, the gifts of the bride to her maids. Their satin slippers were dyed to match their gowns, and completing the effective ensembles were arm bouquets of pink radiance roses, sweet peas in two shades of lavender, and yellow snapdragons arranged in sheath effect.

Acting as groomsmen were Sam Swift, of New York city; Baird Kilgore, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Dave Beard, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Richard Cobb, of Atlanta.

Mr. Blake had as his best man Percy Musgrave, of Boston, Mass.

Beautiful Bride.

The lovely bride entered the church with her father, A. Ten Eyck Brown, by whom she was given in marriage.

Of a dainty, patrician type, the beautiful young bride, enveloped in priceless old lace, was a charming and exquisite figure. Employing the handsome ivory tinted point applique lace which was worn by the bride's great grandmother at her wedding, the bridal robes were fashioned along simple, straight lines, slightly draped over the hips and posed over soft cream colored satin. The Vionnet point in the back, he rather high V-neck line in the front, and the long close-fitting lace sleeves were modish notes of the gown. The train, an exquisite lace panel, was lined with satin and extended from beneath a lace motif just above the waist line in the back. The bride's veil of rare point applique, also a treasured heirloom of her family, was arranged in a simple cap effect, caught across the back with a single strand of tiny orange blossoms, a graceful spray of these flowers being appliqued flat on the veil. Her ivory tinted satin slippers were finished with lace buckles, and the only ornament she wore was an exquisite miniature set in an oval of pearls and diamonds, which formerly belonged to the groom's mother.

Completing the bridal ensemble was a gorgeous bouquet of gardenias, showered with valley lilies and introducing an occasional single Ophelia rose.

Elaborate Reception.

Following the church ceremony, an elaborate reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on East Seventeenth street.

The lower floor of the home was transformed into a bower of spring-like loveliness, the golden motif featuring the floral decorations. Quantities of Claudia Pernet roses were used to effective advantage in floor vases, bowls and urns. The chandeliers, softly shaded in gold, were garlanded with asparagus fern and showered with Pernet roses. The enclosed porches were banked with palms and ferns, the canvas walls being festooned with ropes of smilax, and the lights concealed with showers of yellow rosebuds.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown and the members of the wedding partly received the guests in the living room, standing before a bank of Woodwardi ferns and palms.

Mrs. Brown received the guests wearing a Mayer gown of transparent velvet, etched in black and gold, and a black satin hat, becomingly draped in black lace. A shoulder spray of orchids completed her costume.

Mrs. M. T. H. Blake, mother of the groom, was handsomely gowned in black chiffon, appliqued in black satin, and fashioned over flesh colored crepe. Her becoming black satin hat was untrimmed except for a smart ornament of rose quartz.

Mrs. H. B. Whitmore, of Hartford, Conn., aunt of the bride, was smartly gowned in blond satin, worn with a brown velvet coat and hat.

During the evening Mr. Blake and his bride left for a cruise in southern waters, going to Havana, Cuba, and touching at points of interest on Florida shores. They will make their home in Orlando, Fla., where Mr. Blake is prominently identified with the financial and social life. Mrs. Blake will be among the notable social acquisitions of recent years.

The bride traveled in a smart sports costume of brushed wool, combining the shades of beige and brown. A small beige felt hat, a brown coat and a handsome cross fox fur completed the ensemble.

Among the prominent out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McGoodwin, of Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. George Huntress, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Whitmore, of Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. T. H. Blake, of New York; Miss Susan Blake, of New York; Sam Swift, of New York; Baird Kilgore, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Dave Beard, of Philadelphia; Percy Musgrave, of Boston, Mass., and Thomas Fuller, of Charlotte, N. C.

COULD you imagine a three-piece solid walnut bedroom suite for $89.00? No, neither could I, if I hadn't actually found this in Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Furniture Department.

You see the February Furniture Sale is on and for this sale Chamberlin-Johnson are offering many wonderful values. But this suite is being offered as an especial "drawing card" and the manager of the

OF COURSE you know that you can always find the newest and smartest in furs at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Company, but yesterday I found something very new and different in the Fur Department.

It was a "kit fox" neckpiece. The kit fox is no larger than a good-sized stone marten, but the colors are much prettier. Beige and light shades of brown are the predominating colors in these double kit fox neckpieces. A choker such as one of these would enhance the loveliness of a spring costume. They are exceptionally pretty and the price is $39.50 for a pair.

I also saw red fox furs at Chamberlin's. They, too, are worn in pairs, and are so luxuriant and soft. The red fox, you know, is quite the newest and smartest neckwear for spring. Do by all means see the exquisite assortment of fox furs for spring and summer at Chamberlin's.

HAVE you seen Adolphe Maison's Beauty Shop lately? And have you heard of the new ring roller reducing machine? are some of the questions that were asked at a bridge party I went to the other day.

So to Adolphe's I went, to see for myself. I was most agreeably surprised, because the shop looked beautiful. It has been completely redecorated and the beautifully tinted walls, the shining floors and the booths, private dressing rooms and rooms for the shower baths are of a restful green shade. Along with redecorating the shop so beautifully Adolphe has installed the most up-to-date equipment. He now gives Contouration treatments, a unique system which reduces double chin and fatty limbs, creases, lines and wrinkles. Restores the contour of youth.

Mrs. Lamb gives a treatment which she learned in Paris. This treatment positively rejuvenates the face by exercising the underlying muscles of the face which form a cushion for the skin; thus she can help you to avoid the terrors of old age.

At Adolphe Maison's, 622 Peachtree Street, you can receive the most modern and scientific methods of rejuvenation, but the new ring roller reducer is something that will interest anyone who is overweight.

Dieting reduces you but usually weakens and sometimes makes one's face haggard. But the ring roller reducer is a positive reducer of fat and reduces you wherever you wish to loose flesh.

Adolphe Maison, 622 Peachtree Street, can help you to stay both young and thin, and this is done by proven scientific methods.

Ensembles take their place well up in the foreground of fashion. Two-piece suits are also very important parts of the picture.

One of the most amusing hats of the season is a double hat of felt, looking very much like a pirate's "slouch hat." One removes the black felt to show a close cap of cream jersey straw painted in various colors.

MR. RICH tells me that the latest and most popular bob is the molded haircut, finger-waved into soft lengthened waves that follow the head line.

Mr. Rich is an artist, for he can cut anybody's hair so that a bob will be becoming to them. The reason he can accomplish this is because he studies the contour of the face and then decides upon the style of bob that will be most flattering.

At the Artistic Bob Shop on the Balcony of Jacobs' main store at Five Points the Eugene and Frederick permanent waves are given with care by skilled operators. Here the finger wave again plays an important part. Because your permanent can be finged-waved into any style of coiffeur that you wish to effect.

Mr. Rich is well known as the south's modern hair dresser. His patrons are ever praising his skill, just as I do.

THE dainty shoe pictured above is one of the new spring styles on display at the Mirror Shoe Department. The vamp and heel are of honey beige kid, the quarter is of dotted kid and the strap is a gold and bronze combination. The buckle slide is of shell, glazed in gold. This smart spring slipper is $9.50.

Another shoe that attracted my attention was of honey beige, vamp and heel fashioned of honey beige, the quarter being of a darker shade of brocaded leather. The bow is edged in bronze beads with topaz studded rhinestone buckle. This adorable little slipper is priced at $7.50.

The Mirror has for your selection twenty different styles in spring footwear for your approval, in all of newest spring shades that blend so charmingly with the soft tones of spring's smartest colors. Shoes for street, sport and evening.

If you will notice the window display at the Mirror you will see some of the most beautiful shoes in shades that are new and styles that are unique. The Mirror has one of the largest selections of spring footwear in Atlanta, and best of all the merchandise is of excellent quality and the prices are very reasonable, making it possible for Milady to have many pairs of shoes for her many costumes.

Within a Stone's Throw

WHEN Mrs. Carroll Payne opened the new Allen store with the golden key, she was on familiar ground. The site was formerly that of her ancestral manor. In those days the property was residential, almost suburban. That was not so very long ago.

Now look at the changes Time and Man have wrought.

Here at Peachtree and Cain is the hub of a new business community. Within the proverbial stone's throw there are theatres, hotels, drug stores, clubs, restaurants, a great department store, and for man's spiritual needs, a magnificent church.

It is an entire and perfect, self-sustaining city, quickly, immediately accessible by rapid street car and motor transportation. Garages and thoroughfares offer ample parking space.

Shopping is again a pleasurable pastime in Atlanta—free of the wham, bang and break-neck of the down-town maelstrom.

Thus does our city grow!

D. A. R. Sponsors Naming Of Highway for Nancy Hart

Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, state regent D. A. R., at the last state conference introduced a resolution that the D. A. R. endeavor to have a highway through Georgia named for the revolutionary heroine, "The Nancy Hart Highway." The resolution was adopted, the regent appointed a strong committee for the work and obtained consent of the state highway board to name a route in Georgia not previously named.

The Nancy Hart highway committee, with Mrs. J. L. Massey, of Hartwell, chairman, held a meeting in Athens, January 17, at which plans were completed for naming and marking "The Nancy Hart Highway." The committee chose the highway from Hartwell to Augusta via Elberton and Washington. Hart county is the only county named for a woman and as Nancy Hart lived in that section the selection of this route is most appropriate.

The committee is composed of the following prominent D. A. R. members: Mrs. J. L. Massey, Hartwell; Mrs. C. E. Pittman, Commerce; Mrs. J. H. Rucker, Athens; Mrs. Ada Walker Davis, Toccoa; Mrs. L. D. T. Quimby, Atlanta; Mrs. J. H. Pledger, Winder; Mrs. W. H. Paine, Elberton; Mrs. John A. Montgomery, Decatur; Mrs. A. C. Kelly, Monroe; Mrs. B. H. Hooks, Dublin. In cooperation with the state regent they are making efforts to mark the highway before the state conference meets in Augusta, March 27, 28 and 29. A special feature of the program will be the unveiling of a marker on this highway.

Reports of D.A.R. Chapter Meetings Are of Interest

The following reports of recent D. A. R. chapter meetings will be of interest to readers of the D. A. R. page.

Mrs. George Riley, regent, was hostess to the Dorothy Walton chapter, D. A. R., at the January meeting. The reports of chapter chairmen indicated that the chapter would be among those making the state honor roll. The chairman of the committee on marking the graves of revolutionary soldiers reported the grave of John Phinazee as located in Harris county, which will be appropriately marked. An historical volume will be donated to Continental Hall library in Washington, D. C.

Interesting plans were formulated for observance of Washington's birthday when an elaborate tea will be given, to which other organizations will be invited. Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, C. H. Leavy, Mrs. Bun Wylie, Mrs. Mell Knox and Mrs. John D. Pope were indorsed by the chapter for state offices, these ladies having recently announced their candidacies.

An excellent history study on the life of Benjamin Franklin was led by Mrs. M. L. Lawson. A feature of the program was a paper written by Mrs. H. A. Wilkinson, "The Stranger Within Our Gates." Mrs. Walter Smith, Mrs. Wyatt Bridges and Mrs. Herbert Moon were assistant hostesses.

Savannah Chapter.

The Savannah chapter, D. A. R., met at Bethesda, the program being on this historic orphanage. The hundred or more boys who make Bethesda their home took keen interest and assisted with the program, later escorting the visitors over the place.

The gymnasium was the place of meeting, and Mrs. B. F. Bullard acted as hostess. Prizes in the essay contest were awarded by Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, honorary state regent. First prize, $5 in gold, was awarded John Wesley Dean, of the fifth grade; second prize of $2 went to Watson Mitchell, also of the fifth grade; honorable mention was made of William Lloyd Garrison, Hubert Coleman, John W. Ellis and Fred Stein. Resolutions were read on the death of Mrs. J. T. Johnson, for years a faithful member of the chapter.

Delegate elected to continental congress was Mrs. Charles L. Sykes; ten alternates were named. Delegate named to attend the state conference was Mrs. R. H. Roux, and five alternates were named. Mrs. H. F. Gaffney, Mrs. John D. Pope and Mrs. Bun Wylie were indorsed by the chapter for state offices.

Plans were made for the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the founding of Savannah, in cooperation with other organizations. Mrs. Walter Anthony read a paper on "America's First Orphans' Home, Bethesda," and Dr. A. L. Patterson gave an address on "The American Boy."

McIntosh Chapter.

The Colonel William Few chapter, D. A. R., wah held in the home of Mrs. Charles K. Gailey. With the chapter in good financial standing, the forestry committee will plant many trees and shrubs in Conyers during the early spring. An interesting event for which plans were made will be the unveiling of the "Hightower Trail" marker by the chapter at an early date.

The chapter indorsed Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, Mrs. Bun Wylie, Mrs. John D. Pope and Mrs. Mell Knox for D. A. R. state offices for which they recently announced.

At the February meeting Dr. J. L. Jordon will deliver a patriotic address before the chapter, of which Mrs. J. H. McCalla is the regent.

John Ball Chapter.

The John Ball chapter, D. A. R. met recently in the home of Mrs. Victor Davidson, in Irwinton.

Application for a marker for the grave of William Mitchell, revolutionary soldier, has been approved and the grave will be marked soon. A handsome glass front cabinet, which will contain relics being assembled by the chapter, is to be purchased and placed in the Wilkinson county courthouse for safe keeping.

John Ball chapter is active in the state work of "patriotic home-making," and to this end has offered one gold and three silver thimbles, and a scholarship to Camp Wilkins to members of the 4-H club, for excellence in domestic art. A framed copy of the painting of "Old Ironsides" recently presented to the chapter by Mrs. H. T. Nichols, is offered to high school students as a prize for excellence in history. The chapter paid a deserved compliment to Mrs. M. T. Nichols, of Medford, Mass., an associate member, in the gift of a silver vase at Christmas time, though at present Mrs. Nichols is an active worker for John Ball. Among the contributions made was one to the Oglethorpe fund, which will apply on the tablet to be placed at his burial place in England.

Bonaventure Chapter.

Mrs. J. W. Rourk, regent, was hostess to Bonaventure chapter, D. A. R., for the January meeting, when three new members were elected to membership. Chairmen of all standing committees were present and gave reports, that on "Americanization" receiving especial commendation for a valuable box of supplies being shipped to Ellis Island, N. Y.

An interesting incident related by Mrs. P. V. Boggs was one regarding a Chinese boy, born in China, and employed in a newspaper office in Savannah. It transpired that some workmen were desecrating the United States flag when he intervened, telling the men the flag must be respected at all times.

"Bethesda" and "Peter Tondee" were subjects of the splendid program given. A distinguished guest was Mrs. J. D. Du Puis, a great-great-granddaughter of Tondee, who spoke interestingly of his life at Bethesda. Joseph Babcock gave an address on "The American Boy." Mrs. Rourke talked on "The Union Society" and the poem, "Boys Wanted," was read by Mrs. C. E. Felton.

Houston Chapter Presents Mrs. Weaver.

The John Houston chapter, D. A. R., of Thomaston, presents the name of Mrs. Alvah Weaver, Jr., for the office of state assistant editor, Georgia society Daughters of the American Revolution, subject to election at the state conference in Augusta, March, 1928. Mrs. Estelle Pye, regent; Mrs. H. H. Birdsong, vice regent; Mrs. J. F. Lewis, honorary regent.

Mrs. Weaver is one of the best known women in Thomaston, being prominent in patriotic and civic affairs. She has served in some official capacity in the John Houston chapter since it was granted a charter some years ago. Serving as registrar for ten years, then as genealogist, Mrs. Weaver was later elected regent of her chapter, from which office she voluntarily retired after a most successful regime. Mrs. Weaver is at present recording secretary of the John Houston chapter. As general chairman of arrangements for the state conference of 1927, which met in Thomaston, she was largely responsible for the success of the meeting. At present Mrs. Weaver is serving as state chairman of the historical and literary reciprocity committee. As historian for the Thomaston chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and corresponding secretary for the Thomaston Fine Arts club, Mrs. Weaver served with distinction.

The John Houston chapter considers Mrs. Weaver eminently fitted for the office of state assistant editor of the D. A. R., and respectfully asks the indorsement and support of her candidacy at the state conference in March.

Mrs. Jordan Presented For State Librarian.

The Hawkinsville chapter, D. A. R., presents Mrs. G. Walker Jordan for the office of state librarian, Georgia Society Daughters of the American Revolution, subject to election at the state conference, in Augusta, March, 1928. Mrs. L. A. Jordan, regent; Mrs. T. H. Bridges, vice regent; Mrs. R. A. Anderson, treasurer.

Mrs. G. Walker Jordan, well-known in patriotic and civic circles in south Georgia, was one of the organizers of the Hawkinsville chapter, D. A. R., and served with distinction as genealogist, registrar, vice regent and regent, at different times. As state chairman of the committee on "Real Daughters" for three years, Mrs. Jordan made an enviable record. She is a member of the C. C. Horne chapter, U. D. C. As U. D. C. state chairman Mrs. Jordan was instrumental in completing work for the Georgia room in the Confederate museum, at Richmond, besides serving as state chairman on relics and southern history and literature in schools and colleges. Mrs. Jordan was recording secretary at one U. D. C. state convention.

At present Mrs. Jordan is D. A. R. state chaplain and the Hawkinsville chapter, D. A. R., recognizing her fitness for the office of state librarian of Georgia D. A. R., asks the indorsement and support of its candidate for this office.

Mrs. W. H. Quarterman Is Sunbury Regent.

Following the resignation of Mrs. Henry Pledger as regent of Sunbury chapter, D. A. R., of Winder, Mrs. W. H. Quarterman, vice regent, filled the unexpired term of office. A year ago Mrs. Quarterman was unanimously reelected regent of Sunbury and has had a successful and brilliant term, which does not expire until next year.

State chairmen and others will please note that Mrs. W. H. Quarterman is regent of Sunbury chapter, and address all mail to her.

Mrs. Daniel Presented For State Editor.

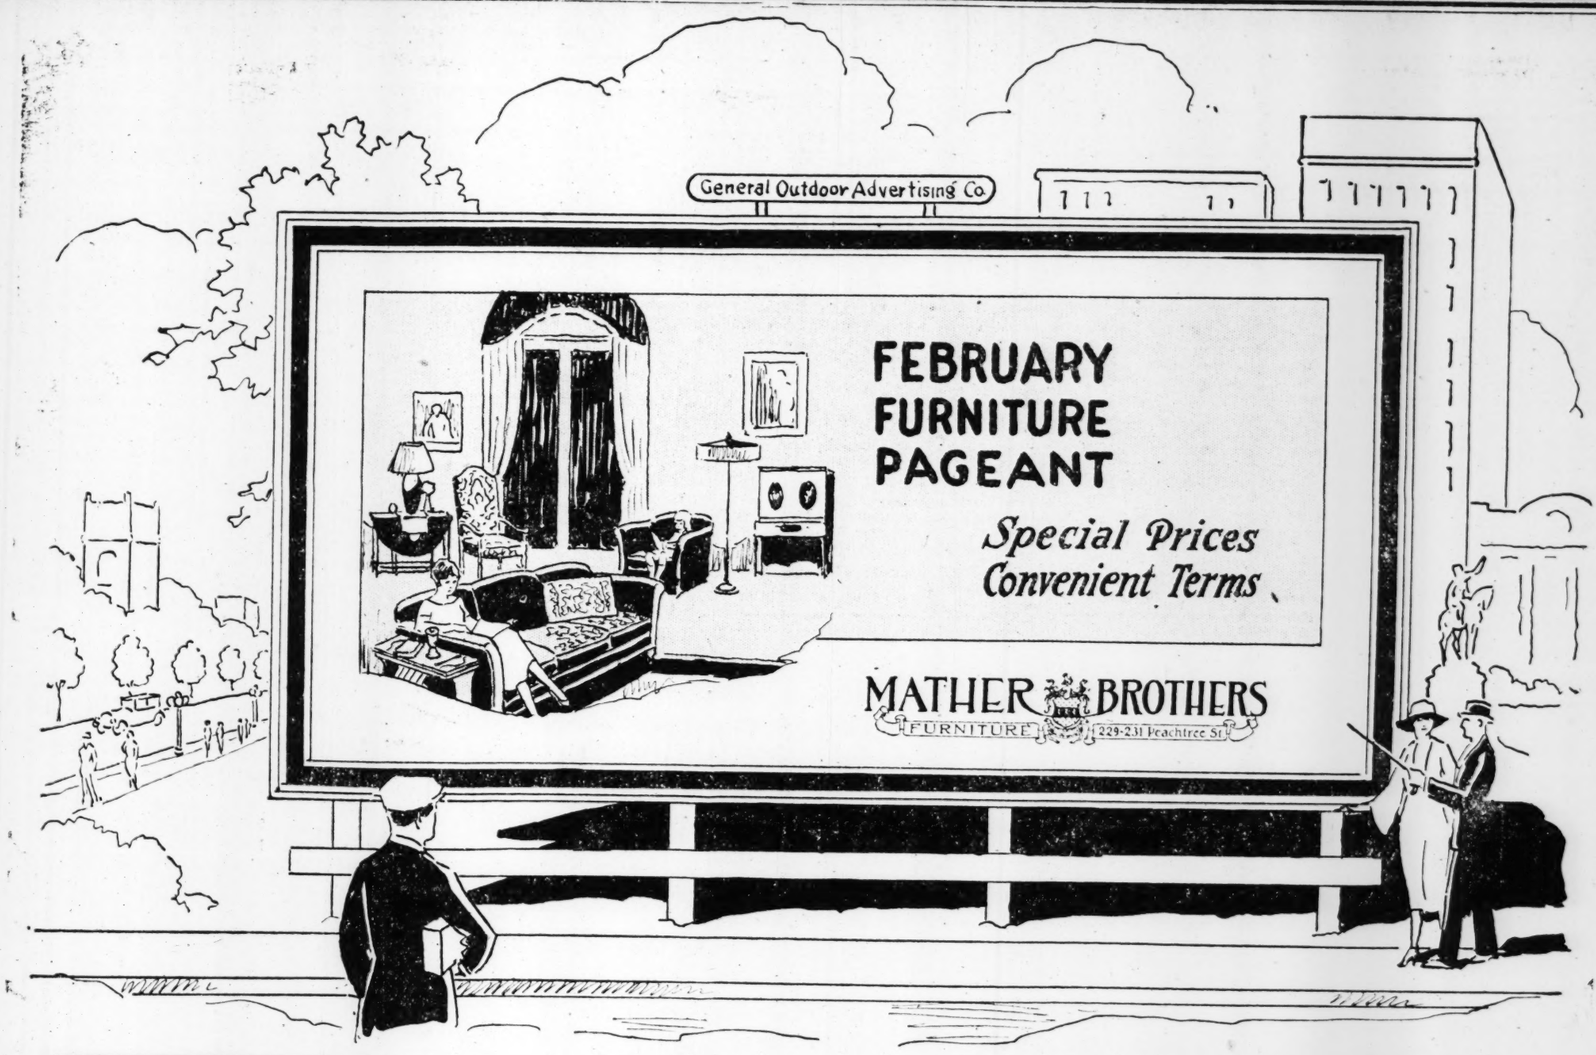

The Savannah chapter, D. A. R., presents its regent, Mrs. John W. Daniel, as a candidate for the office of state editor, Georgia Society Daughters of the American Revolution, subject to election at the state conference, in Augusta, March, 1928. Mrs. Tiffany Wilson, corresponding secretary.

Georgia Division President Issues Card to U. D. C. Members

To Members of Georgia Division, U. D. C.:

After a most satisfactory executive board meeting in Atlanta with the Fulton chapter, U. D. C., as hostess organization, your president is back at her desk and ready for work again. The Fulton chapter was a charming hostess.

Among the interesting letters and packages I find a book, "War Memories," by Frank A. Holden, of Athens, sent by his mother, Mrs. Horace N. Holden. It is a story by a world war soldier.

After reading the introduction by Lucian Lamar Knight and the high commendation by such men and women as Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, Senator Walter F. George, Senator William J. Harris, Dr. Mary Harris Armor and Miss Mildred Rutherford, I can hardly wait to read it through for my own pleasure and enlightenment.

The year book of programs of the Henry D. McDaniel chapter Monroe, with Mrs. Lena Felker Lewis, president, is full of interest and inspiration.

Thursday, January 19, 1928, the Liberty County chapter, U. D. C., Miss Laura Fraser, president, unveiled a handsome monument to the Confederate soldiers at Hinesville. Your president could not attend on account of having previously accepted an invitation to the Robert E. Lee exercises of the Fulton chapter at Base Hospital No. 48, Atlanta.

Faithfully yours,
(Mrs. W. Trox) FANNIE BATEY BANKSTON,
President of Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Un Mot Ici Est Bien

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Atlanta always most hospitable, was particularly so last week when the Fulton chapter U. D. C. entertained the executive board of the Georgia division U. D. C. The entire Gate City seemed to join hands with the Fulton chapter, and its most efficient president, Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, to do honor to the guests. Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, of Covington, presided at the board meeting and plans were perfected which will be carried on apace. She conducted the first official board meeting with dispatch and great ability, and there is every reason to believe the Georgia division will make great advancement the forthcoming year. She urges the emphasis to be laid upon "education" for the month of February. With her guilding hand at the steering wheel there is no doubt but that the Georgia division U. D. C. will continue to show increasing interest in scholarships and cultural departments. A card from Mrs. Bankston appears on today's official U. D. . page in The Constitution.

Mrs. Bankston was guest of Atlanta chapter, Rebecca Fulton chapter and of the Soldiers' Home. She made the motor trip Wednesday afternoon to Stone Mountain, in company with other members of the board. She attended the Robert E. Lee memorial exercises and was honor guest at the banquet given Thursday evening at the Ansly hotel by the Sons of Confederate Veterans. Seated at Mrs. Bankston's table were Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, of Montezuma, retiring president, and vice president general, Mrs. L. D. T. Quinby, president of Fulton chapter and chairman of the book of war records, Mrs. H. M. Franklin, of Tennille, state regent, D. A. R., and chairman of historical programs; Mrs. J. A. McCrary, Decatur, director of collecting books for foreign libraries; Mrs. R. M. McMasters, Waynesboro, chairman of the Mrs. Norman U. Randolph Fund; Miss Lillian Henderson, Atlanta, recorder of crosses of military service; Mrs. E. B. Williams, Atlanta, founder of Fulton chapter; Mrs. Howard McCutcheon, Atlanta; Mrs. W. L. Anderson, chairman of women of the south in war times; Mrs. P. H. Jeter, state president, D. A. R., and chairman of scrapbook, and Mrs. J. J. Harris, Sandersville, state editor. The delightful viands served were only excelled by the feast of valuable historical information as given by Judge Cozart, of Columbus. He stated that "there are twenty words in the Gaelic dialect to express love. We can use them all when we speak of Lee. He concluded his tribute to Lee by saying:

"Robert E. Lee had the training of a West Point graduate but he was more than a scholar; the chains of habit and passion did not fetter him, but he was more than a moral man, he possessed and practiced the virtues of a Christian exemplar; in his veins flowed the best blood of Virginia, but his virtues were not due alone to the fact that he was a cavalier of the cavaliers; in person he was one of God's handsomest creations, but his nobility did not reside in his physique; he was a great commander, but military achievements were not his sole praise. His prominent glory was his fidelity to duty. He was a model for and the type of our best Confederate soldiers."

Ashley Jones, commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, and Henderson Hallman are to be congratulated upon the brilliance and success of the banquet. It was quite an honor to have two general officers on the state executive board of the Georgia division U. D. C. and in attendance upon the meeting, including: Mrs. Frank Harrold, past president general, and parliamentarian of the division, and Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, vice president general, and chairman of resolutions.

Mrs. Hardy Richard, of Madison, chairman of veterans reminiscences, announces that Bartow chapter, of Cartersville, won the prize, which was written by Mrs. Anne Hopkins Daves, member of the chapter, and is published elsewhere on the official page, and is entitled "The Romance of Etowah Heights That Touched Sherman's Heights." Mrs. Richard has done much for the cause of the division and her interest in her department has brought it to the front in a most forceful manner.

The unveiling of the monument of the Confederate Veterans of Liberty county at Hinesville, Ga., was most impressive. The presentation of the monument was made by Miss Laura Frazer, beloved past recording secretary of the division. The occasion was fraught with the sacredness of past memories and of undying reverence for the cause upheld by the veterans of the grey. It was the state editor's regret that she was unable to be present but attendance at the board meeting made her acceptance of the invitation impossible.

The following took part in the unveiling exercises: Rev. E. M. Elder, school children of the county, Miss Laura Fraser, Liberty Independent Troop, Honorable C. B. Jones, Honorable N. J. Norman, Savannah, Ga.; Honorable W. F. Mills, General E. J. Thomas, U. C. V., Savannah, Ga.; Colonel Raymond Cay, U. C. V., Valdosta, Ga.; Honorable R. M. Martin, General P. W. Meldrim, Savannah, Ga.; Rev. J. F. Merrin, Joseph B. Fraser and J. R. Morgan.

Bartow Chapter, U.D.C., Wins Prize on 'Veteran Reminiscences'

Mrs. Hardy Richard, of Madison, who has done brilliant work in her department, and in all lines of U. D. C. work, sends in the prize article today, won by Mrs. Annie Hopkins Daves, a member of the Bartow chapter, of Cartersville, entitled "The Romance of Etowah Heights That Touched Sherman's Heart." The story tells of how Sherman, on his march to the sea, spared the historic mansion because he had loved the proud southern girl who reigned under its roof with the grace and majesty of a queen. The article follows:

"The history of the old mansion at Etowah Heights was so closely interwoven with that of Bartow county that when the news came, Etowah Heights is burning down, there was sadness in the heart of every citizen of the county. After the old home with its contents had been destroyed, the gentle ladies who had been sheltered all their lives in its ancestral walls gathered up the few fragments saved from the holocaust and came to Cartersville to make their home. There were few among the citizens who had not at one time or another been recipients of the hospitality of the Sherman home, and they felt themselves honored in the presence of these daughters of the old south, who had lost their home and an almost priceless collection of family relics.

"It is asignificant fact that the loss of home and personal possessions was secondary to the loss of library and mementos. There was a collection of scrapbooks dating as far back as 1836. Files of papers, a storehouse of Georgia history, fed the flames; and family portraits and rare old mahogany furniture handed down from colonial days were licked up by the relentless fire. It was a singular coincidence that the home which was left by Sherman as a tribute to the power of association should, fifty years later, meet the fate of the homes which fell before him on the famous "march to the sea". This story, which has been handed down from generation to generation, has lost none of its romantic interest.'

Reports had come out of the south of the charm and beauty of Miss Stovall, and when she arrived at West Point she was the belle of the ball, just as she was the "bright, particular star" of all such occasions in her native city, Augusta, Ga. In after years, she loved to dwell on the delights of that evening, and the grandeur of the ball dress made in New York for the occasion, and the coiffeur arranged by the New York hair dressers, and which, for fear of disarranging, the fair Cecelia suffered a night's loss of comfortable sleep.

Southern Beauty

The young southern beauty at once became a reigning belle. Among those who lost their hearts to her charms were two of the most prominent of the cadets, Joseph Hooker, afterwards "Fighting Joe" of the War Between the States; and W. T. Sherman, who hitherto had been known as a "ladies' man." It is not recorded how Miss Stovall disposed of Hooker, though, in language of the present day, she "turned him down," but her reply to Sherman is historical.

"'Your eyes are so cold and cruel.
How you would crush an enemy!
I pity the man who becomes your foe.'

"The infatuated young cadet pressed his suit with all the eloquence and impetuousness which characterized his future achievements.

"But in vain he repeated, 'I would ever shield and protect you.'

"The wilful beauty only shook her head, and said him, nay.

"She returned to her southern home, heart whole and fancy free, but more dangerous than ever to the susceptible youth of her native soil.

"There in Augusta she found a young West Point graduate in charge of the arsenal in that city. Gallant Dick Garnett succumbed at once to the charms of the Georgia belle, and she gave him her heart and plighted her troth to him.

"But alas, for the young lovers—parental objections were raised. The marriage was forbidden, and the young people were not allowed to see each other. Miss Cecilia was sent on a visit to South Carolina kinsfolk, for an indefinite period.

"While in South Carolina she met a wealthy planter, Charles Shelman, of Cherokee, Ga., and was wooed and won by him. This time her father interposed no obstacles, and Miss Cecelia Stovall became Mrs. Shelman. and went to live in the magnificent home built by Mr. Shelman for his young bride on the banks of the Etowah.

"To the elegant furnishings of the home the young wife brought the gifts given her by the large and influential family connection at her marriage, and the many lovely souvenirs of her travels in Europe.

"Time passed on in peace and prosperity; children came to bring joy and gladness to the spacious halls and broad acres of the Shelman home.

"Then the war came, and Mr. Shelman went to the front, and when the news was brought that Sherman was marching through Georgia, the young mother with her little children hastily fled, leaving her home with the faithful old negro butler.

"One day as General Sherman and his staff were riding through the woods in the vicinity of Etowah Heights, a turn in the road brought them in full view of this majestic home overlooking the Etowah, with its great windows looking out calmly and serenely on the signs of devastation and desolation all around.

"Through the avenue of oaks which led up to the house, the horsemen rode. A gray-hegded negro man opened the gate in silence for them, with hat in hand, stood awaiting their wishes.

"'Old man, who lives here?' asked Sherman.

"'My mistis, sah, Mistis Cecelia Stovall Shelman, sah.'

One who is familiar with the old-time colored "uncle" can imagine with what dignity and sonorous tones, the old butler announced the ownership of the place.

"Was she Miss Cecelia Stovall, of Augusta?" asked the general, after a moment, in which memories of other days came like a flood tide over him.

"Yas, sah, yas, sah, de very same, sah."

The troops which had reached the place had already begun pillaging the house, and had thrown out some of the handsome mahogany furniture, and were preparing to set fire to it; when Sherman in stern and wrathful tones ordered the men to replace everything they had removed, and place a guard around the place to prevent further depredations.

Then he tore a leaf out of his notebook and hastily scribbled the following lines, which Mrs. Shelman preserved carefully, and which were among the precious relics destroyed

Mrs. Cecelia Stovall Shelman,

My Dear Madam—You once said that you pitied the man who would ever become my foe. My answer was that I would ever protect and shield you—that I have done.

Forgive all else. I am but a soldier.
W. T. SHERMAN.

Of the loyalty of another one of the trio of army men to this fascinating woman, what further proof could be given than that he never married? General R. S. Garnett carried the image of Cecelia Stovall in his heart to the last. The news of his death on the battlefield was brought to her three weeks after the sad event. At the same time, came the tidings of the death of her brother, George Stovall, and of his dearest friends, Charles Norton, of Rome. Among the papers saved from the fire was a letter, dim and yellowed with age, which is among the cherished possessions of the Misses Shelman. It was written by a friend of Mrs. Shelman's early days, and is a bit of history itself.

"When the federal army entered east Tennessee and camped in our neighborhood, it looked as one of our old negroes said, like a blue blanket was spread over the whole face of the earth, and their presence affected not only the landscape, but our spirits also—we certainly were blue, and disheartened, and welcomed any little pleasant incident that drifted by upon the hurrying tide of these eventful days.

"One afternoon we were sitting on the gallery, when several officers in full uniform dismounted at the gate and came up the gravel walk, their sabers clanking at every step.

"We invited them in and were soon engaged in pleasant conversation. One of them turned to me suddenly as though an idea had struck him and said: 'Are you acquainted in Georgia?'

"'Yes,' I replied, 'I lived there several years.'

"'My father,' he continued, 'lived in the city of Augusta until I was 14 years old, and I have always had pleasant recollections of my boyhood home. There was a young girl in the family that lived across the street from us. I thought her then and have remembered her ever since as the most angelic human being I have ever known.'

"'Do you remember the name?' I asked.

"'Oh, yes; I have never forgotten it. She was Cecelia Stovall, and her father was a prominent man in Augusta.'

"Then I replied: 'She is now Mrs. Charles Shelman, and was a near neighbor of mine when I lived in Cass county, Georgia. It is singular that you should have addressed your inquiries to me instead of the other ladies present, for they have never heard her name, while I knew her so well.'

"Then followed a stream of questions about Mrs. Shelman, her appearance, her family, her circumstances, etc., which was kept up until the other officers rose to take their leave.

"Captain Powell, with a charming bow, thanked me for the information I had given him, and with his pleasant memories of the southland and his ideal southern beauty, disappeared with his moving regiment, and I never heard of him again."

To the very last Mrs. Shelman retained that grace and charm which won for her admirers wherever she went. As the years crept on she was the embodiment of a beautiful old age, and was enthroned as queen of the home in the mansion on the Etowah. My last glimpse of her was about three years before her death. She was then nearly eighty years old and sat perfectly erect in her high-backed mahogany chair, with its rich carvings, and looked as she was the "grande dame," just stepped down for a while from her high estate in a picture of the olden time.

"I have carried ever since the memory of that day, the gracious high-bred woman, the lofty walls, from which looked down the faces of a long line of distinguished ancestry, the wide halls, with doorways of hand-carved work, the massive doors themselves brought from many miles away, the flower garden with its wealth of old-fashioned roses and box wood borders. All this has passed away. Only the tall chimneys stand as silent witnesses of former grandeur and hospitable hearth stones."

Longstreet Chapter Elects Officers.

Gainesville, Ga., January 28.—The January meeting of Longstreet chapter, U. D. C., was held with Mrs. J. D. Twitty. Miss O. J. Lilly and Mrs. R. T. Lilly acting as joint hostesses. The president, Mrs. W. A. Roberts, presided. New officers were elected and are as follows: President, Mrs. W. A. Roberts; first vice president, Mrs. A. H. Swann; second vice president, Mrs. C. R. Frierson; secretary, Mrs. Bulah Evans; treasurer, Mrs. Jessie L. Meeks; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hayne Palmour; historian, Mrs. J. L. Waters; chaplain, Mrs. G. H. Prior; parliamentarian, Mrs. W. N. Bailey; registrar, Mrs. R. G. Harper. This marks the seventh year of the presidency of Mrs. Roberts, whose zeal and love for the cause makes her most capable for the office to which she was unanimously elected. Another interesting feature of this meeting was the drawing of names of Hall county veterans. Each member drew one or more, to be remembered with cards on anniversaries in behalf of the U. D. C. during 1928.

After the business, Mrs. J. W. Waters, chairman of the program committee, presented an interesting program. The hostesses were assisted by Miss Buelle Smith and Miss Pat Lilly. About 30 members were present. The February meeting will be with Mrs. J. R. Styles at the Princeton hotel Thursday afternoon, February 3, at 3:30 o'clock.

Charles D. Anderson Chapter Holds Meeting.

Fort Valley, Ga., January 20.—The January meeting of the Charles D. Anderson chapter, U. D. C., was held at the home of Miss Helen Marshall with Miss Nettie Marshall, Miss Dora Poole and Mrs. J. W. McCoy as joint hostesses. A veteran, Mr. Foster, of Lithonia, who is here for a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Pierce Green, was introduced by his granddaughter, Mrs. Paul Murray, and he made a brief address. Miss Wilma Orr, president, was in the chair and quickly dispatched the business of the body, which included the gift from the chapter of $50 to the local Thomas library. Mrs. W. D. Tharpe presided over the entertainment program and presented Miss Nettie Marshall in a study of Matthew Fontaine Maury, the "Pathfinder of the Seas." The southern states have signally honored him and the state of Tennessee has a Maury county in his honor. At the conclusion of the study of Maury and his activities, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones told interestingly of having been in Richmond on the occasion of a veterans' convention where she witnessed the laying of a cornerstone for the Maury statue and of meeting two of his grandchildren, who had a part in the exercises. Another feature of the program was a reading, "Marse Robert Is Asleep," by Miss Amy Duke.

It was through the efforts of Mrs. W. C. Clark, chairman of the Memorial day committee, that the chapter secured Dr. Quillian.

Atlanta Chapter, U.D.C., Thanks Mr. Borglum in Resolution

Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., of which Mrs. Stafford Seidell is president, passed a resolution at its January meeting thanking Gutzon Borglum for his gift in carving the statue of Alexander Hamilton Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy, which was recently placed and unveiled with appropriate ceremony in the Hall of Fame in Washington, D. C.

Mesdames T. J. Ripley, chairman; Warren D. White, cochairman; Chauncey Smith and Stafford Seidell composed the committee drawing up the resolution, the text of which read that "Gutzon Borglum, the great and beloved American sculptor, has given unique and memorable expression of his genuine friendship for the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., in particular, for the people of Georgia, as a whole, and for the citizens of the United States in general. His generous friendship has been manifested by a gift from him—through the Atlanta chapter to the state of Georgia, and, through the state of Georgia to the government—of his genius, time and labor, in the creation of a statue of Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the Confederate States of America, and a native of the state of Georgia. The statue, recently delivered to the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., by Mr. Borglum, by the Atlanta chapter presented to the state of Georgia, and by the state of Georgia presented to the United States government, has been officially unveiled, officially accepted by the government, and now stands permanently in its place in the Hall of Fame, to perpetuate forever before mankind both the loyal statesmanship of Alexander H. Stephens and the loyal friendship and genius of Gutzon Borglum. The placing of this statue in the Hall of Fame could not have been accomplished but for Mr. Borglum's creative genius, generosity of spirit, and tireless labor in behalf of his fellow countrymen. His genius, time and labor represents the greater part of the gift of this state now completed.

"The Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., while recognizing its indebtedness to other benefactors for funds, cooperation and disinterested services in this connection, declare themselves more indebted and beholden to Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, than to any other individual, or group of individuals, for the presence in the Hall of Fame at Washington, of the statue of the distinguished statesman.

"The Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., signifies by these resolutions its gratitude to Mr. Borglum for his generosity to them individually and unitedly; and they do hereby thank him, one and all; and they hold him and his family in loving remembrance, esteeming him not only as a great artist and a great American, but as a great friend."

Every pattern shown is distinct and exclusive in Atlanta with Keely's, and each piece contains only enough yardage for about four dresses, assuring you that any pattern you may select cannot be promiscuously duplicated. The fact that these silks are Cheney's, and shown at Keely's, is evidence of their style and quality value. See them Monday—Crepes de Chine, Flat Crepes and Radiums.

AS TO COTTON ACREAGE.

Governor Dan Moody, of Texas, who has dispelled politics from his mind for the present by declaring he will not permit his name to go before the national democratic convention as a "favorite son" for either nomination, has turned his attention to the more constructive undertaking of trying to hold the 1928 cotton acreage down to a sizable reduction as compared to that of 1927.

This is heartening, for in national campaign years the leaders of public thought are so apt to become engrossed in party matters that too often the more important economic matters are permitted to go zigzagging along in entirely dangerous paths.

Governor Moody is attempting to get together a conference of all the governors in the cotton growing states, and has written Governor Hardman, who will attend. In the meantime there has been made the suggestion that this conference be held in Atlanta, which is also desirable. This is a central point, easily accessible to all interested sections.

It is imperative that cotton acreage shall be, on the whole, materially reduced this year, and the efforts to that end cannot begin too early or become too vigorous. The great trouble as to possible increased acreage rests with Governor Moody's own state and with the other cotton producing states of the southwest. Texas has been taking in an enormous new producing area each year. So has New Mexico, Arizona and even southern California. Texas, however, has been the aggressor in this respect. It is fitting, therefore, that this movement should originate with the Texas executive. It is hoped that he may be able to control the situation in his own state.

In the meantime, it is obvious that there is a movement in Georgia, and in all of the southeastern states, to increase the acreage. This should be nipped in the bud, and now. Such a course can only mean production at a loss, and this is what has brought about farm depressions in the past and will always bring depression about as long as followed.

The course of wisdom is to cut the acreage in the southeast at least 10 per cent and to cultivate more intensively, thus producing more cotton to the acre than heretofore. The cost of production per lint pound automatically is reduced as acreage production is increased. Therefore, it is a pencil and pad proposition that every farmer and every business man should instantly recognize. This increased production can come not only from intensive cultivation, but by better preparation of soil and seed beds, more liberal fertilization and better farming generally.

By the same token this is the prescribed program, with the scientific use of calcium arsenate for the control of the boll weevil.

It is folly to think there will be no weevils this year. Indications are there will be more than during any year since 1922-'23. They are are in hibernation everywhere. The warm fall hatched out billions of them in cotton's second foliage growth, and there has not been sufficient cold of long endurance to kill them. Hence the emergence may be expected early and the infestation may be expected to be heavy. Farmers cannot in reason overlook these facts.

The recent declines in the cotton market have been predicated upon the possibility of largely increased acreages. It is a situation that must be handled and it is heartening that the young governor of Texas has taken the matter so vigorously in hand.

The farmer, by reducing his cotton acreage and intensifying his cultivation, can release that many more acres to food and feed, and this is an essential part of any successful program. Only the farmer who "lives at home" can hope to succeed and every farmer should so balance production that there will be more than one or even two so-called "money crops."

THE OUTLAWING OF VIOLENCE.

Lord Thomson, of Cardington, eminent British military leader and member of the supreme war council during the world war, writing in the February issue of the Century magazine, declares that an agreement between nations to "put law on the side of conscience is the most essential step toward permanent world peace." He declares there never was a time in human history when public opinion was more ripe for the outlawry of force and violence. Quoting from his article:

"The suggestion to outlaw war is not made by visionaries who believe that thereby the world will be absolutely and at once ensured against the crime of war. But when war is put in the same category as piracy and murder, that is to say when mass murder is eliminated as a lawful means of human action, when reference to and jurisdiction by an international judicial body is accepted as the means of settling international disputes, both war and armaments will be regarded from a different angle."

Quoting Senator Borah's definition of the outlawry of war as "the substitution of law and judicial tribunals for politics and force in international affairs," Lord Thomson points out that such an agreement is not entirely theoretical, that it is working, although almost without public consciousness, in the relations of the 48 sovereign commonwealths of the United States under the federal supreme court which, "although no power was given to it to enforce its decrees, did and does settle disputes between large states and small on a basis of absolute equality."

The League of Nations pacts, Lord Thomson points out, are based on the legality of defensive war, the chief point on which the league and the influential American faction led by Senator Borah are at variance. But he sees hope of compromise arising out of such negotiations as the current French proposal to the United States to outlaw war between the two nations.

WHAT GEORGIA SOIL CAN DO.

In the five-acre corn and cotton production contests in 1927 the awards that have been announced have demonstrated beyond argument that Georgia can produce yields equal to those of any state in the union, or anywhere in the especial corn and cotton belts.

In north Georgia lowlands—which led in yields—the first prize winner averaged 131.05 bushels to the acre. Even the fifth prize winner averaged 92.27 bushels to the acre. In the north Georgia uplands the best yield was 68.55 bushels to the acre.

In the south Georgia uplands the best yield was 126.50 bushels to the acre and in the lowlands of that section 89.25 bushels was the best yield. The state average was only 14 bushels, which illustrates the large number of farmers who do not properly cultivate corn. The contest shows what good lands, well cultivated by hard-working, scientific farmers can be made to do. Twenty-two farmers in the north Georgia lowland class completed the contests with an average yield of 78.17 bushels to the acre and an acre profit of $52.38, whereas based upon the state's average a great multitude of farmers produced their corn at practically what it would cost to buy the commodity on open market. The same relative figures hold true in all of the classes throughout the state.

There is not only significance but a valuable lesson in these demonstrations, as stressed by Dr. Soule, president of the state agricultural college. What one farmer can do another can do on similar soil and under similar climatic conditions. And yet the majority of them do not reach the profit stage. The reason is obvious. Building soil, to give it productive efficiency, should be the outstanding undertaking on every farm, and by doing this the complaint cannot be made that one farm is productive and another unproductive. That depends entirely upon the farmer. The results of these contests show conclusively the differences between good farmers, indifferent farmers and poor and unsuccessful farmers. The problem of farm success is largely with the individual.

In the five-acre cotton contests the situation developed the same general results and proved the same conclusions. In the general contest Luther Strickland, of Franklin county, won the first prize of $1,000 by producing an average of 1,287 pounds of lint to the acre, or two and a half bales. He grew this cotton at a cost of 6 2-5 cents per pound—another illustration of what we have repeatedly stressed, that is, that production costs are reduced as acre yields are increased. A large number of contestants in borth north and south Georgia produced from a bale and a half to two bales an acre. Why then should any provident farmer, applying business to his progress, make less than a bale of cotton average to the acre? The average yield in Georgia for 1927 was only 154 pounds of lint, with an average cost of production of 19½ cents a pound.

The situation is as plain as a pot leg. The general run of farmers do not farm properly. They do not intensify, do not prepare good seed beds, do not protect against weevils, do not cultivate properly, do not build the soil to maximum production fitness.

Farmers should study these figures. They should profit by them. The results of those who farm properly and who make satisfactory profits should inspire all to do likewise. Suppose even 60 per cent of the farmers of Georgia averaged the yields of these five-acre contest winners—and they can—Georgia would be the richest agricultural area of its size in the world. That Georgia soil can produce to the extent of even fabulous profits, if correctly handled, has been demonstrated time and again.

GEORGIA LEADS IN GAINS.

The tremendous gains in the south in the cotton mill industry are emphasized by the Southern Textile Bulletin as a result of a complete and definite survey that it has just completed.

Today the south has more than half of the spindles in America, having reached the supremacy in 1927. There are 18,740,000 in the south, as against 17,754,000 in northern mills.

The gain in spindles in the south in 1927 was 565,500, while the total for the nation fell from 37,404,000 in December, 1926, to 36,500,000 in December, 1927.

The progress that Georgia is making in the industry is forcibly illustrated by the statistics brought out by the survey. From the tabulations it is gathered that a total of 12,832 looms were installed in the south in 1927, of which 1,250 were placed in Alabama, 4,047 in Georgia, 3,326 in North Carolina, 2,898 in South Carolina and 1,001 in Virginia, with smaller numbers listed for other states. This gave Georgia a distinctive lead.

North Carolina obtained 3,571 of the south's total gain of 7,197 knitting machines installed in the past year. Other states' gains in knitting machines in 1927 were as follows: Alabama, 465; Georgia, 1,075; South Carolina, 120; Tennessee, 1,017; Virginia, 715, and smaller totals for other states. This placed Georgia second in gains and only slightly behind North Carolina.

Georgia in 1927 for the first time in many years outstripped North Carolina in the total gain in spindles.

These statistics, carefully and accurately compiled, speak more knowingly than any other voice as to the strides that Georgia is making in fabric and other textile manufacturing.

With the south now in a position of predominancy the momentum will naturally be quickened. The gains in 1928 will very probably exceed those of 1927, and with Georgia's marvelous hydroelectric developments this state may be expected to continue its lead in new looms and spindles.

TRADE BODY ACTIVITIES.

The City Builder for January contains the reports of the 1927 chamber of commerce administration and activities from the retiring president, George West; the executive vice president, B. S. Barker, and the late secretary of the industrial bureau, Frederick T. Newell, the latter report having been prepared just before the sudden and untimely passing of Mr. Newell. To illustrate the marvelously good services of Mr. Newell, who worked faithfully and resourcefully to bring new pay rolls to Atlanta it may be stated that from January 1, 1927, through December 31, 1927, 158 new business concerns were added to the industrial and commercial life. This is an average of 13.2 each month.

The total number of persons employed by these 158 concerns is 4,768.

The estimated new annual pay roll totals $8,009,350, which includes the salaries of executives, salesmen, clerical workers and wage earners.

The report of Mr. Barker is a comprehensive review of the trade body's activities along all lines, including committee work. Every business man in the city ought to read and study it. If so, a great majority of those who are not now active members would join in the work and become active in the continuous constructive undertakings of this organization. The chamber of commerce is a great clearing house, and it is as essential to the business life of Atlanta as any service department of city government. It ought to add not less than a thousand new members in 1928.

The report of the retiring president, Mr. West, is one of inspiration and optimism. It is also one of clear-cut discussions of some of the public issues involving the welfare of Atlantans and of all Georgians.

To illustrate, his reference to the need of a connected system of hard-surfaced — "all-weather" — highways north and south, east and west, is of especial interest.

In this connection he says:

"Our greatest need in Georgia is the early completion of the state-wide system of all-weather highways; roads which lead across the state in various directions and which form a part of our great national lines of tourist travel. Candidly, I do not believe that the present county system of building roads will prove of material benefit for the next several years. A good many of our people are opposed to road bonds, but they overlook the fact that the paved roads we enjoy today were built from bonds issued by these counties, and that the aggregate sum of bonds issued by these counties today is about $20,000,000. It seems to me that all the progressive states are issuing highway bonds and I want to see Georgia get in line."

In this Mr. West is entirely correct. It is a mistaken policy to call upon counties to help build the state highways. By such a policy a fully connected system is forever impossible, as many counties are not financially able to aid the state in this undertaking. They have their laterals to build and maintain, their schools and other public services to keep going. They haven't the taxable wealth to bond for state highway or to further bond, as many counties have already issued bonds and are still without their paved roads.

It is drifting far from the mooring for one to say he opposes a state bond issue for highway paving, to be retired by the motor taxes, and then proceed to advocate and vote for a local bond issue for the same purpose—except to leave the system disconnected—to be retired by ad valorem or property taxes.

Mr. West refers to this feature, and is to be commended for his wise attitude and courageous expression.

AS TO FLOOD CONTROL.

There is not a member of congress, not a citizen of the United States, who does not want adequate flood control legislation passed during this session. It is the most important subject matter congress is dealing with.

During the last summer there was not a man or woman in the country, with the tragedy in the lower valley fresh in their memory, who would not have said at once that it was the government's duty and the government's obligation to protect these people. This is what the bill introduced by Congressman Frank R. Reid, chairman of the flood control committee of the house, proposes. It has been indorsed by more than 1,000 representatives of the Mississippi valley and by hundreds of commercial and civic organizations of the nation.

The protection of life and property and the safe conduct of interstate commerce, as well as the protection of the mails is the solemn obligation and duty of the government of the United States, and that was the underlying thought in the preparation of this bill.

From Congressman Reid's statement it is gathered that his bid does not provide a specific engineering plan. It includes a direction to the Mississippi river commission to provide such flood-control works as will reduce flood heights on the main river to a point of real and actual safety, leaving to the commission's judgment at what particular place the control works shall be constructed in order to accomplish that purpose. Every phase of flood control work authorized or directed is contained in the recommendations and reports submitted to congress, with only one exception. The bill provides that all spillways, floodways and diversion channels shall be controlled and regulated, and does not allow the substitution of an artificial uncontrolled flood for a natural one under the guise of relieving the main river.

The bill retains the Mississippi commission with its valuable records and experience, but enlarges its membership from seven to thirteen. With its splendid record of honesty and integrity, and with the addition of prominent men from civil life who would bring to it experience and training gained in commercial fields and who would be unhampered by military regulations and restrictions, much can be expected from the commission.

The commission's jurisdiction is enlarged in the bill so as to include not only the Mississippi river, but all of its tributaries which produce the floods, and the commission is directed to make studies of all water sheds in the United States producing destructive floods, and to submit such recommendations to congress as will enable it to provide for the control of the destructive floods on navigable rivers where life and property are endangered.

An outstanding criticism of our past and present policy is that we have always awaited a calamity before enacting measures that might have prevented it. This bill directs the commission to make such studies as will enable it to foresee and prevent such catastrophies.

Most of the representatives who are laboring with the farm relief plan claim a sympathetic relationship with the soil trying to raise a lawn.

How Leaders and Favorite Sons Have Fared in Past Democratic Conventions

Washington, January 28.—(Special.)—Is it a lucky strike to be the high man when a national convention starts balloting to make a presidential nominee?

That largely depends upon various and sundry circumstances, among which are how many horses are in the field and how many of them are being seriously supported by their initial promoters.

As a rule mere "favorite sons" soon fall by the wayside after receiving a few complimentary ballots and certainly after it becomes manifest between which two leaders the decision is to be made, if either is to get it.

Having attended 12 of the 15 conventions of the national democratic party from 1868 to 1924, inclusive, I have a lively recollection of the many times when the "one best bet" failed to connect with the nomination.

This year may be one of the occasions when the loudest touted candidate for the blue ribbon may not only take the lead from the start, but hold it to a quick and strong finish. It is five months yet until the race will be pulled off and there are scores of unexpected things that may happen in that meantime to change the present state of the form-sheet.

Seldom in the last 50 years has there been a more favorable condition to cause the national convention to become a "surprise party" and end in the emergence of a thoroughbred "dark horse" with bells on!

* * * *

Some "Befo' De Wah" History.

The first real ballot fight for the presidential nomination in a democratic national convention was staged in that of 1844 at Baltimore. Every one of the then 26 states, except South Carolina, was represented. There were 325 delegates, but they cast only 266 votes. The electoral college contained 275 votes, but the 9 votes of South Carolina were not, as above stated, represented in the convention.

Ex-President Van Buren, elected in 1836 and defeated in 1840, was seeking a renomination. He started in the balloting with 146 votes, which was 32 less than the necessary two-thirds. The 120 other votes were scattered—83 to General Lewis Cass, of Michigan; 24 to ex-Vice President Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky; 6 to John C. Calhoun; 4 to Senator James Buchanan, of Pennsylvania; 2 to Senator Levi Woodbury, of New Hampshire, and 1 to Commodore Stewart.

Van Buren lost from the start and the "favorite sons" dropped out "until on the 8th ballot the roll call showed 104 for Van Buren, 114 for Cass and 44 for a dark horse, rung in by the southern delegates principally, by the name of James K. Polk, of Tennessee, who had been speaker of the national house of representatives from 1835 to 1839. On the ninth ballot the convention voted unanimously for Polk.

Polk and Dallas put up a whirlwind campaign against the whigs, who were in control of the government, and won the election by 170 electoral votes to 105 given to Clay and Frelinghuysen. The democrats also won both houses of congress.

In 1848 General Cass started with one vote less than a majority, gained through three ballots and was nominated with 10 more than two-thirds on the fourth ballot, and then lost the election, having only 127 electoral votes against 163 for General Zachary Taylor, the whig candidate.

* * * *

Another Deeply Dark Horse.

In 1852 there was a spectacular fight in the convention, which was presided over by a John W. Davis, of Indiana—a democratic moniker quite recently familiar to the party.

General Cass wanted another try for the white house and entered the convention with 116 votes against 93 for Buchanan, 20 for Stephen A. Douglas and 27 for William L. Marcy, of New York. There was a running fight for 49 ballots, with Cass losing and many votes scattering, until on the 40th ballot General Franklin Pierce, of New Hampshire, who had been both representative and senator, was presented with 29 votes. Then on he steadily gained until on the 49th ballot he got 282 votes to 2 each for Cass and Douglas. He won the election over General Winfield Scott, receiving 254 electoral votes to 42 for Scott, cast by Kentucky, Tennessee, Massachusetts and Vermont.

In 1856 President Pierce was entered for renomination, with Buchanan as chief contestant. On the first ballot "Old Buck" had 135, Pierce 122, Douglas 33 and Cass 5. After the 14th ballot the race was between Buchanan and Douglas and on the 17th the former went over the two-thirds and his nomination was made unanimous. He was elected president by 174 electoral votes to 114 for Fremont, republican, and 8 for Fillmore, Know-Nothing.

In the ill-fated Charleston convention of 1860 Douglas started with 145, or 7 less than a majority. In 57 ballots he failed to get more than 151 votes, and then came the fatal split, leading to two democratic tickets—one carrying Douglas and Johnson and the other Breckenridge and Lane. In that way the democrats gave the presidency to Abraham Lincoln and the republican party.

After the War Instances.

In 1868 I went with my father to the democratic national convention in New York city. He went there in the interest of his old friend, President Andrew Johnson. The convention was held in Tammany hall and was presided over by General John M. Palmer as chairman pro tem. as keynoter and by Governor Horatio Seymour, of New York, as permanent chairman.

There were 317 votes in the convention and 212 were necessary to nominate. Senator Pendleton, of Ohio, led on the first ballot with 105 votes. President Johnson came next with 65, and the "favorite sons," including Hancock, Church, Packer, Parker, English, Doolittle and Hendricks, divivided the remainder.

Twenty-one ballots were without a decision. Pendleton's high mark was 156 1-2 on the eighth ballot; Hancock reached 144 1-2 on the 18th and Hendricks went up to 132 on the 21st. Then on the next roll call came a stampede to Governor Seymour and when it ended he had been unanimously nominated.

In 1872 the democratic convention indorsed the "liberal republican" ticket on which Horace Greeley and B. Gratz Brown were the candidates.

When 1876 arrived there was again a true-blue democratic convention, with 744 votes, making 496 necessary to nominate. Here the leader galloped through. Sam Tilden started with 417 on the first ballot, with Hendricks, Hancock, Bill Allen, Bayard and Parker as "favorite sons." On the second ballot Tilden got 535 and the nomination.

That was the presidential race that produced the disputed election and led to the creation of the notorious "electoral commission" that finally gave Hayes 185 and Tilden 184. Hayes was inaugurated and figures in history as "the fraudulent president."

* * * *

The More Recent Cases.

General Hancock started in the 1880 convention with 171 of he 493 necessary to nominate. The field of "favorite sons" was formidable and well-supported. It included, in order of strength, Bayard, Payne, Thurman, Field, Morrison, Hendricks and 38 each for Tilden and Seymour—former nominees. Hancock rose to 320 on the second ballot, when a stampede, called for by Louisiana, occurred, and when the changes had been recorded Hancock had 705 of the 739 votes recorded.

The race between Hancock and Garfield, republican, was a hot one. Each of them carried 19 states. Garfield got a popular vote majority over Hancock of only 9,464. If New York had given her electors to Hancock he would have been chosen president by 190 to 179 for Garfield.

In 1884 Cleveland led off with 392 of 818 votes, with eight "favorite sons" trailing him, but on the second round he got 684 votes, was nominated thereby and was elected president. He won 20 states with 219 electoral votes over Blaine's 18 states with 182 electoral votes.

The subsequent convention records are fairly well known to readers of this century political history—how Champ Clark, reaching a majority vote in the convention of 1912 was beaten out by Woodrow Wilson and how, in the 1924 convention, McAdoo, although a pronounced leader in the ballotings, was unable to make the two-thirds grade.

Now we cock our eyes to glimpse the leader in the Houston convention in June, curious to see how he will fare in the final round.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

In your opinion are the children of today worth a mother's sacrifice? I am torn between staying or leaving my home and only choose the latter because of two small children under 12. My eldest, a boy of 18, has left home because of his lack of appreciation of the great suffering I have undergone to keep the home together. It is not wholly his fault, but largely due to his father, whose treatment of me he has understood for many years. When I was about to become the mother of my last child my husband deserted me for a single woman; that is, his body was at home for me to slave for, but his affections and mind were elsewhere. He has tried to right the wrong but I have since found that he has been committing it all our married life. It is very hard for me to forgive him in view of the fact that I have been a virtuous and loyal wife and have loved him to the point of idolizing him.

My spirit and heart are broken by the loss of my first child. What have I in life to look forward to under such conditions?

Yours is a sad confession to hear and a far sadder one to make. Your love for this husband, selfish, treacherous and unworthy though he is, tips the pain you feel with flame. There is no agony so deep and unendurable as that of outraged and betrayed affection.

Your son may inherit his father's baser tendencies, in which case, to be frank, he is not worth any woman's unalloyed devotion, not even his mother's. I recall an elder sister who broke her health in rearing a large family of her brothers and sisters, one-half of whom proved utterly inferior.

Certainly you must consider yourself from now on far more than you have done. Whatever lessens your load, alleviates your anguish, or casts a gleam in your shadowed life should come first. Christ Himself commanded that we must love others as ourselves and neither more nor less. You have disobeyed by excess. Stay within the commandment. Idolize nobody, least of all a dissolute husband. He couldn't have worse medicine for his disease.

If you left home what would it be to you? It may cost more than it is worth to register a protest against your husband's wretched behavior. Consult your own life and its requirements and act accordingly. I believe it preferable for you to stay with your family. Your eldest son is at an awkward age. He will yet appreciate your position. His case deserves pity as well as blame. And you are his mother.

Your husband shows some willingness to amend his ways. He is not the paragon you dreamed but he may be a partner you can tolerate. Show some firmness for the future and make him responsible for the boy's return to you in dutifulness and obedience. An 18-year-old youth can be brought back if approached in the right way.

Then there are the other children. May they restore to your deserving spirit the dew of youth. Last of all is the pleading of your own bruised but faithful spirit. Experience shows that whatever toll its exacts, a woman had better pay it. Do so, remembering that there ariseth a light to the upright in heart

What was St. Paul's "thorn in the flesh?"

This was known only to the apostle himself and he has not revealed it. The Greek word rendered "thorn" might almost be translated "stake" and indicates the severity of the affliction. Some scholars think it must have been a physical infirmity; a probable speculation in view of the innumerable perils and hardships to which this hero was subjected during his missionary labors.

Others attribute it to a painful disease of the eyes then common in Asia Minor, where St. Paul spent considerable time. We know he employed amanuenses to write some of his later letters, who may have been called to his aid because of his impaired vision.

Not a few commentators think that his malady was mental rather than physical, due to a remorseful conscience which perpetually reminded him that he had been instrumental in the death of the Deacon Stephen, the first martyr of the church. This supposition, however, can hardly be made to agree with II Corinthians xii, 8. The same difficulty defeats the suggestion that "the thorn" was a domestic trouble arising out of his conversion to Christianity.

Whatever it may have been St. Paul prayer that he might be delivered from it, and after his supplication was denied he made his burden a means of moral and spiritual discipline.

Missing the Mark.

I was interested, in reading a description of an old English game of archery, to find that when one missed the mark, He was called a "sinner." Curiously enough, both the Hebrew and Greek words in the Old and New Testaments, which we translate "sin," mean literally "miss the mark." It looks as if the sportsmen of the earlier days knew their classics. There is, too, quite a modern suggestion here. To be good means to "shoot straight," and to be bad is to be crooked.

Character in Parable.

Indeed, on closer observation, this old game seems to express like a parable the fundamental truth of the building of character. The purpose of the game is positive—to hit the mark. A "sinner" is one who fails. No matter where else he shot, if he did not hit the mark, it was accounted a sin. One may imagine two games of archery being played very near to each other. A wild arrow of one group goes straight to the center of the target of the other group. Not being the mark agreed upon by his own group, he is declared a "sinner," because he failed to hit his own mark. What is the right mark for one player is the wrong mark for another.

So, in the building of character, there must be a positive purpose. There must be some mark to shoot at—some standard, or ideal, of character to attain. Sin is a failure to attain, or to measure up, to one's standard. No matter what else one does or says—no matter how innocent or harmless the words or acts—if he fails in word or act to harmonize his life with his ideal, he sins. For this reason, you cannot make a list of words or acts, and call them good or bad, any more than you can divide the keys of the pianoforte into good and bad keys. It depends upon whether the keys struck harmonize with the motif of the piece, whether they are right or wrong. So words and acts must be judged by whether they harmonize with a righteous ideal.

But every man must have his own ideal, for a mark at which he is aiming. It is his sense of "I ought." This is an inner sense of compulsion, or impulsion. It may not be very high, or very strong. No one can impose his sense of "ought" on another.

He may arouse within another a sense of "ought," by revealing to him a more attractive ideal of beauty, truth, or honor. Nevertheless, not until that higher ideal is revealed within, and challenges my sense of "I ought," does it become my duty or my right.

Principle of Growth.

Here we reach another fundamental principle. One's sense of right, or one's ideal of character, is capable of growth. In every man, there is the possibility of a better man, yes, even a best man. Every man is conscious of this possibility, though it be a vague and unexpressed consciousness. And he has some sense of "I ought to be better." That sense of dissatisfaction with life, which comes into the consciousness of every man at times, is, in its last analysis, a sense of failure. Few people analyze it or express it in moral terms, but all have the experience. From this standpoint then, sin is a failure to be your best.

It is well, too, to put the emphasis here on your best, not on others. Here is the supreme responsibility, and glorious privilege, of individuality. We must make laws for directing the conduct of society, just as we must make highways and thoroughfares along which the tides of traffic may freely move, with the greatest possible order. But conduct is not character, any more than movement is life. It is only a mode for the expression of character, and along the orderly thoroughfares of conventions and laws, there is abundant room for the free play of individual characteristics. And just here is the salvation of individuality. There is a best for each man, which challenges all the latent faculties and forces of his personality to a free and full expression.

Christianity and Character.

Christianity's contribution to the building of character is the revelation of the highest standard of personality which we know. Christianity is not a code of morals, or a legal decalogue. It is the challenge of the true, the beautiful, and the good, in terms of a personality. This challenge wakes up something which is sleeping within. It arouses something which is akin to the true, the beautiful, and the good, and there comes into being a sense of "I ought."

When did sin come into the world? With the coming of the first sense of obligation, there came the possibility of righteousness in the fulfillment of the obligation, but at the same time, the possibility of sin, in the failure to meet the obligation. Without righteousness, there could be no unrighteousness. Unless there was a right, there could be no wrong. Unless there was a truth, there could be no lie.

Jesus made possible a John, "the beloved disciple." He called to his latent love and loyalty, and it responded. But Jesus also made Judas, the betrayer, possible. He called to Judas, and he failed. Had there been no Jesus to whom he might have been loyal, there would have been no Jesus for him to have betrayed.

Three Straight Failures Ruin a Big Fee Lawyer—Commuters Army Now Fifty Miles Long—Underground Poets.

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance

New York, January 28.—"If a lawyer in my position fails three times straight he is ruined."

Those are the words of Max D. Steuer, whose income from the law is estimated at $1,000,000 or more a year. In 1928 he is getting a strong start as attorney for the Borough President of Queens, in a big sewer investigation. Mr. Steuer doesn't take his preeminence very solemnly. "There's little difference between one good lawyer and another," he says.

Standing in his skyscraper office on lower Broadway, and looking across the bay to the immigrant station where he first landed, Steuer thinks, a bit wistfully, of his father, once distiller to a prince in Vienna, then Grand street clothing worker getting less in a year than Mr. Steuer gets a day in a divorce action. It's $1,000 anyway.

This smiling, soft-spoken, persuasive product of the ghetto and of his own genius has argued in court for W. E. D. Stokes, Lillian Gish, Tex Rickard, Raymond Hitchcock and Harry Daugherty, former attorney general. Before the bench he has denounced the stock exchange and—when that person was alive—Charles Murphy, tammany boss.

YEAR OF THE BIG SHOW.

It was on February 1, 1880, that the train containing Henry W. Gaines, commuter, got stuck in a snowdrift while it was carrying him from New York to his village home on Long Island. Some passengers stayed aboard, but Mr. Gaines dropped off and with a few others went to a hotel in Mineola, where the flying fields are now.

"I remember," he tells it, "that the conductor came in and found us sitting around the stove. 'Make yourselves comfortable gentlemen,' he said, 'the railroad pays for it'."

Next day Mr. Gaines set out afoot, but gave up at Hicksville and paid a farmer to get out his sleigh and drive him back to the train. They lost the road and had to tear down fences in fields through which they passed. Mr. Gaines then returned to New York. Two days later he was notified that the train was ready to proceed. He then rode out to Mineola and boarded it again.

After 50 years of commuting Mr. Gaines is still at it. He is 70 and has passed two years of his life on the Long Island railroad.

THE COMMUTERS' RUSH.

By tube, ferryboat and railroad train direct the commuters invade New York daily, making their entry at dozens of points; each the scene of furious activity in the rush hours. Yet detraining as they do at many widely separated terminals, and then scattering, the commuters themselves have no proper appreciation of their numbers, as they would have if all poured in at one gate.

Suppose that at a place like the battery, the southern tip of Manhattan island, they all marched into the city, advancing in a column, four abreast. This column would be more than 100,000 men and women deep. By the army's terms for a compact march, the last four would be more than 50 miles away from the first four. Marching four miles an hour, the last of the column would pass a given point more than 13 hours after the first of it.

So, if the commuters began entering the city at 9 o'clock in the morning, the last of them would not reach the office until toward midnight. That would never do.

LECTURING ABOUT UNCLE GEORGE.

Miss Fanny Washington, great-great-grandniece of the father of his country, has come here from Virginia to do some lecturing about Uncle George, and to sing the folk songs that she says he used to sing to the children on the plantation.

The progress of the south has been retarded, says Miss Washington, because parents have sheltered their daughters too much and not sent them to college. It happens that Miss Washington has a high regard for Abraham Lincoln. She believes that if he had lived he would have begun the reconstruction of the south with generosity and intelligence, and his name, below the Mason and Dixon line, would have the standing it has in the north.

As for Uncle George, he would be a prohibitionist today.

THE SUBWAY MOTORMAN'S JOB.

There still lives, but not in this city, a nice, old-fashioned lady who makes it a custom, at the end of every railroad journey, to step forward to the cab and personally thank the engineer. This is mentioned only as an excuse for pointing out the difference in the lot of the railroad locomotive engineer, sitting at a sunny window ringing a bell, or waving across a varying landscape to well-wishers, and the lot of the subway motorman, hidden in a dark cab that seldom comes out of the cellar.

Yet the absence of distractions does not make the job unpopular. The subway companies have waiting lists, and if ever the system becomes truly static, with no more extensions, a man may have to wait six or eight years for a chance to handle an express train underground.

THE UNDERGROUND POETS.

The size of the list of applicants makes the companies suspect that the job of subway motorman has a poetic or imaginative appeal for some men. It's true that the box, cab or cabin that the motorman occupies is the nearest thing in town to a hermit's cell. In the brilliantly shining cars behind him the crowd wrestles with itself in growing annoyance, but the motorman has solitude and even space.

Like a dragon his train roars out of the dark, underground cavern into a stretch of daylight, on the outbound trip to the fringes of New York. Like a demon, racing with time, it returns, to plunge under a river, and crash into the catacombs of Manhattan, the sub-cellars of skyscrapers. Like a 500-ton reptile the train twists its way from under the 55 floors of the Woolworth building.

Block signals, blinking from yellow to green, peer at it like goblin eyes. And this monster express, plunging 45 blocks underground at a stretch, and carrying 1,000 people in the rush time, obeys at the slightest touch the will of a man seldom seen by any passengers, except small boys standing at the front door of the foremost car, staring enviously through the darkened pane of the motorman's box.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

A PRESIDENT IS BORN.

The story of how Fannie Hurst came to write her latest novel, "A President Is Born," was when she asked herself the following questions:

"What are the essential characteristics necessary to enable a man, whether north or south, successfully to fill the most difficult position in the world? The position of president of the United States?"

Before writing this novel Miss Hurst made a tour of the United States studying the life of the American in the various states, the man in the store, law office, newspaper office, the boy in the streets, etc. She had studied the boyhood of the different presidents all the way back to the master of Mount Vernon. The result of her observtaion and study is a composite impression, not a study of any particular president, or of any particular state.

After reading it Grant Overton, whose name and sayings have become quite popular in the world of literature, remarked:

"A president of the United States is probably born this very minute, being born, or cutting his first tooth, or trudging off for his first day of school, or earning his first dollar."

The following is a most interesting write-up by Grant Overton about Fannie Hurst. It is full of human interest and will be thoroughly enjoyed by her numberless readers:

"The opulently handsome young woman, whose big studio living room in West Sixty-seventh street, New York, gleams like a Gothic chapel, is a charming hostess. Her gestures are as warmly impulsive as any girl's, She was made, you feel, for the incomparable furs, the lace and brocade, the glowing colors which she makes more beautful by wearing. She is Mrs. Jacques S. Danielson and has been for ten or a dozen years. Her closest friends are, perhaps, editors and other writers. Kathleen Norris, for example, is giving a tea. Fannie has to leave early and the two slip away to exchange confidences and affectionate good-bye kisses.

"What fun it is to sit and talk to Fannie Hurst, really to let her talk to you, especially if she will consent to tell about something that she is writing or that is buildin in her mind to write! Her enthusiasm, her modesty, her anxiety, her clear ambition! As she talks you find yourself suffused with an envy complete though harmless—not of her nor of what she has done; not of the things she hopes to do and doubts her power of doing. Is it your knowledge that she will succeed in doing them, that there will be nothing she cannot do? Perhaps. You try to track down the envious source . . . yes. . . it is because she does not know that those golden lands over the horizon are hers. . . Lindbergh over mid-Atlantic, Paris waiting.

"For the last three years she has been maturing a novel which bears about the same relation to her earlier novels as the Mississippi does to its tributary rivers, a symphony to sonatas. 'A President Is Born' may not be the great American novel, but it stands among us as the greatest novel of the new world yet achieved, a towering fugue of new world destinies."

FANNIE HURST.

Sorrell and Son Comes True.

If it had happened in this country, someone would have been sure to say that it was a publicity stunt; but we have the story from the London Daily Express that an actual occurrence paralleling "Sorrell and Son" has happened in Guildford, England. Sorrell, in this case, has been a head waiter in a hotel for 49 years. His son, a rising young lawyer, has just been elected mayor of Guildford, without opposition. In the book, "Sorrell and Son," the father was a hotel porter, and the son a surgeon. Thousands of motorists who drive along the Portsmouth road know Robert, the head waiter at the Lion hotel, for his fine presence and urbanity of manner. Robert will continue in his job, but he was taken on a new dignity, for he is now the father of the mayor of the town.

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Spreading Dawn. By Basil King. The following comment is made on the author's six uncanny stories that he claims no more than what Emily Dickinson calls "the right of supposing."

The story is woven around the death of Mrs. Vanderpyl, and the will in which she designed to break the lives of her nieces and nephews, etc. Mr. King has always been a popular writer, no matter the style or the subject, his many friends always found it interesting and worth reading. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

The Magic Tooth and Other Tales from the Amazon. By Elsie Spicer Eells. With illustrations by Florence Choate and Elizabeth Curtis. This book contains 26 stories, all taken from the folklore of South America. While they are for children but the grown people of every country find real pleasure in reading the folklore of other countries. There are ten illustrations in black and white with frontispiece in color. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

The Entertainment and Other Stories. By E. M. Delafield, who is a most popular writer of short stories or long, and her short stories are immediately recognized as having the novels.

This collection consists of sixteen stories of more than average length. While they are English in their settings they will be just as popular as if written on American soil instead of by a daughter of Count Henri de la Pasture and Lady Clifford. Her home is in Devon in the depths of the country. Her first novel was written during the war in the intervals of Red Cross work. The reader always finds an entertaining story if Mrs. Delafield is the writer. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

Wallflowers. By Temple Bailey. This is one of her cleverest stories—and she has written several. This story is woven around two young girls who were dubbed "wallflowers" even though they had behind them a long list of Virginia Claybournes, and even though they were young and such charmingly pretty things—but they couldn't dance as society danced in Washington.

These beautiful young wallflowers—Sandra and Theodora—were real girls and thoroughly alive—one dreaming bright dreams of a time when the little Cupid of romance would find his way to her home, and the other longing for a successful career right there in Washington.

It is a beautiful as well as a clever story of youth, and the author whose lovely face immediately convinces the reader that youth meant love and happiness for her, and that she thoroughly understands, as well as sympathizes with the young girls who are longing for these things—ambition, luxury, admiration which do not bring happiness but the friend fairy with one wave of the magic wand usually brings, as in this case, the final triumph of youth's rightful heritage—love. (The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

The District Bungalow. By Cecil Champain Lowis, who while not a young man was not known in the world of bookdom until he wrote "Green Sandals," and of which it was said that it had one of the most unanimously favorable presses of any mystery story produced in 1927.

It is an unusual story with its settings in Burma, where the author spent many years there and in the surrounding country—an atmosphere which is the background for all his writings .

POETRY AND DRAMA.

You That Come After. Poems by Mary Siegrist. With foreword by Nathalia Crane and Edward Markham, and the latter writes: For long years I have known Mary Siegrist as a faithful friend, an earnest student, a devoted humanitarian and a serious and thoughtful poet."

The reader will soon realize the beauty that lies in Mary Siegrist poems. (Harold Vinal, Publisher, New York.)

The Play's the Thing. By Herbert F. Allen, Ph. D., University of Michigan. In this little book Mr. Allen discusses four things: The Enjoyment of Tragedy; The Modernity of Aristophanes; The Natural History of the Biographic Drama and The Cynic Utopias. (Published by The Torch Press, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.)

The Song of Solomon. A play by Professor Hubert Osborne who is a member of the faculty at Yale and is also the author of "Shore Leave" and other successful plays. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Characteristic Monologues and Readings. By Noreen Ellers Camill. Distinctive selections for young people and children. (Published by Raymond Youmans & Co., Kansas City.)

Nine Dragons. Poems by Bertha Ten Eyck James. A collection of poems in which the writer "flashes from Africa to Chicago with impressionistic ease, and her imagination records the pageantry of this changing world with bright assurance." Her verse is delightful:

Fantasy For February.

This fragilely blue sky today
Seems like a forward dream of May.
Far lovelier blossom than it has
Is hoar-frost, blooming on brown grass,
And the snowflakes, wind-scattered here,
Are petals from a flowering pear.

The Road to Plenty. By William T. Foster and Waddill Catchings. This is a most flattering title and the authors have had the encouragement of Hon. Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois; Hon. Nathan L. Miller, former governor of New York; Victor M. Cutter, president United Fruit company, all of whom write that it is not only interesting, but full of stimulating thought and much sound advice.

Among the most important questions at the present time is how can we bring greater prosperity to business, and more of the good things of life to all the people?

This is a plain and practical reply which should be read by the merchant, the banker and the politician. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

The World Talks it Over. By Burr Price, who was the editor-in-charge of the European edition of the New York Herald in Paris during the crucial years of the world war.

If the reader will glance over the table of contents he will be interested in the subjects discussed—the first chapter being "From the American Revolution to the Civil War," this being followed by many interesting chapters in which is discussed many things since then. From the American point of view this is the first time that a full account has been given of the 150-year peace movement which culminated in the League of Nations. (Rae D. Henkle Co., Inc., New York city.)

Interpretations. By Emory R. Johnson, dean of the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, University of Pennsylvania, is a volume of essays based on Mr. Johnson's observations in China and England.

The writer gives his views on the economic, religious, social and political life of the people he has seen. It is the story of the present, past and future problems. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

CURRENT MAGAZINES RECEIVED.

The South Atlantic Quarterly, published by the Duke University Press, in which Benjamin Elysses Ratchford writes most interestingly of "The Public Finances of North Carolina Since 1920." There are quite a number of other articles by well-known writers.

Harper's for January has almost as many pages as the average novel and with the table of contents published on its cover of red makes it most attractive, especially the leading title, "The Wetness of Al Smith," by Walter Lippmann. In fact this number is simply running over with subjects worthwhile—There's "Our Racial Amnesia," by James Truslow Adams, a well-written and a most practical argument; "Farewell to Pedagogy," by Bernard De Voto; "Our American Leisure," by Irwin Edman, and others equally as entertaining.

Current History for January. This is another magazine that is filled to overflowing with live articles by progressive writers. The frontispiece is a picture that is seen almost every day on the screen, newspapers and magazines—Calvin Coolidge, president. The leading articles discusses "Hands Off Europe's Wars—American Aloofness to Be Maintained." A number of the views of American statesmen are given. Under the head, "Education," there are instructive articles by many prominent writers. And there are a number of other articles by well-known writers bearing on conditions as they exist today in the United States and across the ocean.

Review of Reviews. On its front cover is a map of the world showing progress in every direction. Frank H. Simonds' article, "Europe Headed for Wars," "Cuba—in Pictures," "All America Goes to Havana;" a message from President Machado; "Our Investment in Latin America," by Francis H. Sisson; "Youth and Its Problems" is most interestingly discussed by Dr. Parkes Cadman, and with other articles, illustrations, cartoons, comments, etc., make this one of the most interesting numbers of the January magazines.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

An Englishman Who Will Not Lecture.

H. M. Tomlinson, the distinguished English author, arrived in New York several weeks ago, and has left for the west to gather material for articles which will appear in "Harper's Magazine." Mr. Tomlinson is one of the few Englishmen who do not lecture. He has consented to make but few public appearances during his American stay, although invitations to the author of "Gallions Reach" have been pouring into the Harper offices.

American Author Writes in French.

Julien Green, whose first novel, "Avarice House," is an American born in Paris. He is now 27 years old and has never been in this country for any length of time except for a few years passed at the University of Virginia. When "Avarice House," which he wrote in French, was published in France, the French press placed him at once in the front ranks of French writers. The novel has been translated by Marshall A. Best.

Bertrand Russell Discusses His Wife's Book.

Bertrand Russell, who has arrived in this country for a lecture, says he agrees with every idea expressed by Mrs. Russell in his just-published book, "The Right to Be Happy." (Harpers).

Wilbur Daniel Steele Was Once an Artist.

"Meat," a new novel by Wilbur Daniel Steele, begins in the November "Harper's Magazine." Few of Wilbur Daniel Steele's readers are aware that he was an artist before he turned to writing. Mr. Steele came east to study at the Boston Art Museum after graduating from the University of Denver in 1907.

My Soul

BY ERNEST NEAL.
Poet Laureate of Georgia.

'Tis night, and broodings deep upon me steal;
On thee, my soul, my solemn musings dwell.
Thee all things hide, yet all things thee reveal;
All that to archangel ever yet befell,
Or demon dared to dream in depths of hell,
Or man on sin-curst earth hath wrought.
Thou spark of God! Thy scintillations tell
Of star lit realms where I may read His thought,
Nor cease to live until His universe is naught.

Whence art thou immortal essence? Whence
These half-wake recollections of a day
Beyond the morn when thou wert ushered hence
Within this fragile tenement of clay?
Art thou of Universal Soul a struggling ray
Caught in environment of Time and Space?
Eternal and immortal only in the way
That matter ceases not? Though waves erase,
The ever-crumbling rocks in other forms find place.

This world, about whose crust a soft light glows
From all the stars that grace the midnight sky
Doth tell—in stone-writ words—of nature's throes;
Of solar fires and changing forms that die
'Mid earthquake shock and seething waters high.
Thus woven in the soul—deep-woven—run
Inherent lines of light brought from on high;
Instinctive threads of truth—like starlight spun—
Caught from the loving heart of God, the central sun.

Upon this rugged mount we call today
Or some tomorrow's last alluring step,
Somewhere—some when—the summons comes to lay
This mortal down in earth to sleep;
But when the stars have ceased their watch to keep
The never-dying soul shall still explore—
In realm of dream or truth—the ocean deep
Of its own mysteries; though on this hither shore
Dark clouds arise to thwart and threat'ning thunders roar.

ATLANTA'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS

What They Are Doing—What They Are Trying To Do

This is the thirteenth of a series of articles on the Atlant Public Schools, prepared under the direction of the Personnel Association of Atlanta. They are published to inform the parents and public about the schools and their work. The entire system will be discussed.

History for Children.

Perhaps it may sound just a little queer to think of the little kindergarten child learning history, and he probably doesn't know that he is, but as he passes on through the grades he will recall having been introduced to some of the same heroes his first year in school. The kindergarten child gets his history from the observance of various special days. Thanksgiving and Washington's birthday are two examples. Imagine how he enjoys being an Indian, learning an Indian dance, and perhaps playing that he is a Pilgrim going to church; while at the same time he is learning customs, dress and habits of long ago. On Washington's birthday the children enjoy listening to stories about Washington, studying the flag and my! you should see how straight they stand and how well they march when parading with their flags.

In the first grade the child studies the history of his own home, and from the home he learns something of his relations and responsibility to the school. From the school it is an easy step to the surrounding community. In studying the grocery store for instance, the child discovers the value of the grocer to the community, the importance of transportation to the grocer and community. He also learns how purchases are made. Other community activities, as those of the fire department and police may be noted. In this way the child learns something of the community as a whole, how it helps them and what they, in return may do to help make their community better. Again he learns history from stories centering around special days, as Robert E. Lee's birthday, Georgia day and Stanton's birthday This is a beginning; and history, like charity, may well begin at home.

Primitive Life.

As the child is promoted from the first grade we find him in the second, the center of interest being in primitive life, studying stories of primitive man's activities, in meeting his needs for material supplies and defense from enemies. He is very much interested in how people lived before the discovery of fire, their crude weapons; the danger of wild animals; the discovery of fire and the improvement of food, shelter and bodily comfort due to this great discovery.

With the beginning of the third year how early people lived is continued, and they find the beginnings of progress in the activities in which man is today primarily engaged. When they reach the hunting and fishing stage they have a good time learning the kinds of game and fish, weapons used, and means of preserving. This hunting life leads to pastoral life resulting from the domesticating of cattle, sheep and goats, which furnish a considerable part of the food and clothing by a study of Hebrew history, the study of Abraham being a special type. The worship of God is emphasized in connection with Hebrew life. In this grade, as in all others, special days are used as centers, with which to associate the historic movements which they celebrate.

The Fourth Grade.

A fourth grade child revels in the study of the customs, ideals and life of the Greeks through their mythology and legends, continuing interests in history and literature. This is followed by a similar study of the Romans. They certainly do enjoy the legendary history of Rome, especially do they like the story of Romulus and Remus. Stories of early English history are taken up at this time and it is most interesting to see how they enjoy the stories of King Arthur, and the Knights of the Round Table. They also thrive over the story of Joan of Arc, one of their favorite stories from the French history, and William Tell, from Swiss history. The story of printing is made most vital to them in this grade, the first printing press, how books were printed long ago, and people grew wiser and better because they had good books to read. The last few weeks in the fourth grade brings them to the finding of the new world, and from this introduction they are ready to go on with American history.

In the fifth grade the study of American history becomes the center of interest. This is taken from the standpoint of leaders and achievements rather than from wars and bloody battles. Children like the rattle of arms and the scramble of the fight, but we are trying to train them for better things. We are now seeking the heroism that gives life and saves life, rather than that sort that takes lit, or hurts life. During this age the child has a strong desire for thrills. Love of adventure is strong, deeds of achievement and daring make a strong appeal, and if he is given in his history the right sort of thrills through service, adventure, courage, bravery and perseverance they offer an opportunity to develop lofty ideals of service in later years. They thrill over the leaders in the opening of the great west, Buffalo Bill and the pony express are favorites; Edison and Alexander Graham Bell in science and invention; Woodrow Wilson and his ideals and achievements for America and for his fellowman.

Biography and History.

History is made vital and concrete through biography. Children are continually transferring themselves into other selves. The boy sees himself a Columbus, Daniel Boone or Lindbergh. The child in his imagination is going to think himself somebody else much of the time, so why not introduce him to the best the world has? The glory of reward and peace are emphasized and our own American heroes are held up as examples for our present youthful citizens and future leaders.

Again in the sixth grade we find the emphasis being laid on victories of peace rather than on victories of war. As a framework around which to group other and greater facts we cling to making the rise and fall of governments the chief object of study. In tracing the development of nations, emphasis is laid upon the enduring element. The general aim is to point to world-wide peace as ideal. A brief study of the Egyptians, Chinese, ancient Babylonians, Hebrews, Greeks and Romans is made. This is most interesting. After finding what the old world gave the new the last half of the year is spent in the study of his own state and city, where the work centers around Georgia and Atlanta. A complete study of Georgia from the days of the Indians, to the first railroad, to the naming of Atlanta, first Terminus, Marthasville and finally Atlanta, being first spelled Atalanta is enjoyed. The ambition and enterprise of young Atlanta, her part in the war between the states, her progress since the war, Atlanta today compared with Terminus. Some leaders and makers of Atlanta bring them up to the present government of Atlanta.

Each pupil is taught to appreciate the opportunity and the responsibility of living in a great democracy, so he may desire to participate actively in making a still greater democracy; and that they will do everything in their power to perpetuate American ideals. They are taught that should it become necessary to fight and die for the good of humanity, they must make the supreme sacrifice; but emphasis is placed on the patriotism that means living and serving for the good of our city, our state and our country and our fellowman throughout the world.

HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

LADY NIC VERSUS GODDESS HYGEIA.

Pyridine, not nicotine, with ammonia in tobacco smoke, probably accounts for the irritation of the throat, the morning cough, the "bite" of tongue in the pipe smoker and the conjunctivitis (red sore eyes) in the cigaret smoker. According to studies by Dr. W. E. Dixon, an English investigator, a cigar or pipe smoker gets much more nicotine than a cigaret smoker does, and yet it seems to us in America that cigaret smoking produces fully as much pathology as cigar or pipe smoking does. Dr. Dixon asserts that American tobaccos contain arsenic! Arsenic is present in American tobaccos in amount many times greater than that permitted in foods, he avers. As a consumer I'm not going to worry much about the arsenic in my favorite incense.

Tobacco, in whatever manner consumed has a specific selective effect on the great vagus or pneumogastric nerve, the tenth cranial nerve, which nerve controls the rate of the heart beat, sensitivity in the lungs and breathing passages and secretion in the stomach. Hyperchlorhydria (excessive hydrochloric acid secretion in the stomach) is a familiar effect of tobacco. In certain cases this effect becomes so marked that the patient developes a gastric or duodenal ulcer complex—he or she may readily persuade a facile surgeon to operate for an ulcer that isn't there.

The constant effect of habitual indulgence in tobacco is increase in blood pressure. Whether this eventually leads to arteriosclerosis is still debated by physicians, but you had better believe it does in many cases. Holding such a belief you are less likely to make a hog of yourself about tobacco. Certainly heavy or excessive smoking is a factor of premature hardening of the arteries. So be temperate and keep your arteries nice and soft.

Heavy or excessive smoking often produces palpitation, and with the rapid or distressing heart action there is likely to be more or less arrythmia or irregularity, skip beats, and the like. Young persons indulging even moderately are certain to suffer from lack of wind, lack of physical endurance, so that they are comparatively impotent or incompetent in any contest or race. Probably this is one good reason why employers are prejudiced against cigaret smokers.

There are on record an impressive number of cases in which habitual smoking, usually cigar smoking, has brought on a state clinically indistinguishable from that dread malady, angina pectoris. It is well for the inveterate cigar smoker to know this, in case his heart begins to give him trouble at a time when he should be in the full vigor of maturity.

Addiction to tobacco in any form is scarcely comparable with drug habits, because the tobacco habitue suffers no serious deprivation symptoms, merely a moral weakling's hankering for his regular solace. However, the very fact that the devotee has permitted the habit to master him, instead of keeping in control of the habit, indicates that he is morally anemic, and being shy in will or won't power he often needs medical aid in breaking the habit. Only his own physician can give such aid. The tobacco user who has reason to believe that his health may have been impaired by his habit should face the situation squarely and submit his problem to the judgment of his doctor. Any doctor worthy of confidence can render medical aid in the breaking of the tobacco habit. If the doctor himself is infatuated with lady nicotine he can scarcely summon the goddess hygeia to his aid.

The relation of the tobacco habit with cancer of the lip, tongue or throat is also debatable, since we do not know what the specific cause of cancer is. The consensus of medical opinion is that the prolonged slight irritation of tongue, lip or throat is a predisposing factor. At any rate, the smoker with an obstinate fissure, crack, alleged "cold sore" or other lesion persisting more than a month should not postpone consulting his physician about it.

A painful, disabling and well nigh incurable affection of the legs known as "thrombo angiitis obliterans" and in many cases leading to the loss of one or both legs, seems to be exclusively limited to habitual smokers, especially excessive cigaret smoking, and Jews in this country are notably susceptible to this disease. No physician here or abroad who has had much experience with this "smoker's gangrene" doubts that lady nicotine is an essential factor. Many physicians here and abroad have reported that they have never encountered a case of thrombo angiitis obliterans in an individual who was not a habitual smoker.

It is impossible, therefore, for a doctor to assure anyone that smoking does no harm.

Tobacco users who feel that they still have any won't power yet desire the assistance of hygeia in loosening the clutches of lady nic, may write me, briefly describing the extent and character of the habit and its duration, nothing more. I'll send hygienic advice to help overcome the habit. This advice I shall give only to the correspondent who tells me he or she wishes to break the habit. Inclose a stamped envelope bearing your address, and do not ask other questions in this letter.

Lest anyone assume I offer "anti-tobacco" tracts, let me repeat that I still believe the temperate use of tobacco by adults is seldom if ever harmful to health. By "temperate" I mean just an occasional indulgence, or not to exceed two or three smokes after your day's work is done. By "adults" I mean persons over 21 years of age. In my judgment tobacco is invariably injurious to children. By "children" I mean persons less than 21 years of age.

In the interest of good health, manhood and womanhood, I urge all parents to exact from each child a pledge that he or she will never use tobacco while under 21 years of age. This is surely a small trifle for a boy or girl to promise a father or mother, but I have never known a boy or girl who regretted having made and kept such a pledge.

If a man or woman desires to use tobacco and can afford to do so, that isn't so very abnormal. But it is abnormal when a young person seeks this substitute for natural stimulation, this imitation of wholesome rest or relaxation. It is sad commentary on the modern way of life when a youth hankers for tobacco. Such a youth is not genuine; he hasn't the right stuff in him. Perhaps if we gave children a fair deal in education, the right kind of physical education particularly, they wouldn't want to resort to these doubtful artifices.

Come Sing With Me of Georgia

I.

Come sing with me of Georgia—source of all my lullabies—
The leaping rills of Georgia,
The sleeping hills of Georgia;
Tell the bards that in her vaults an unsung epic lies,
Beauteous Mount McKeithan,
Ravined and violet-wreathen,
Lifts the mossy hemlocks on her shoulders to the skies.

II.

Come sing with me of Georgia—balmy land of springy bliss;
The dew is on the berry
And crimson on the cherry;
The unseen hand of Nature swings her censer in the mist,
And sweet the incense flows
From the dreaming rose
That lifts its glowing crimson to the April for a kiss.

III.

Come sing with me of Georgia—poets before have tried in vain
To interpret the trebles
That gurgle o'er the pebbles
Where the noisy brooklet gives the hills its simple strain;
Their feeble harps can't equal
That soft and lilting sequel
Of the bending pines that rock to sleep the Piedmont plain.

Dean Johnston To Give Lecture On Psychology

Knowledge of the fundamental principles of psychology will solve many of the problems perplexing to mankind, in the opinion of Dean Thomas H. Johnston, of St. Phillip's cathedral, who will deliver a lecture on the subject Tuesday night at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Dean Johnston's lecture, which will take place at 8 o'clock, will be delivered under the auspices of the St. Mary's guild, one of the women's organizations of the cathedral, and will be a resume of the series of talks which the speaker made last December.

The text of the lecture Tuesday evening will be "Power," Dean Johnston announced, and it will be presented in a popular way, devoid of academic and scientific involvements.

Long a student of the subject, Dean Johnston has learned how the lay mind can be benefited by the principles of psychology, he asserted, and regards the knowledge of this subject as one of the most important sciences in the world today. It is his purpose in the coming lecture, he pointed out, to endeavor to point the way toward utilizati n by the layman of the fundamental laws of psychology.

Proceeds from the sale of tickets to the lecture will be devoted to the furtherance of the work of St. Mary's guild.

Emil Jannings In New Drama At Howard

"The Last Command" Is Latest Masterpiece of German Star.

Emil Jannings' first screen appearance in America was in that mighty epic of the French revolution, "Passion." While the picture itself created a furore, Jannings was noted with only passing interest and it was not until subsequent pictures that he achieved the recognition that was due him.

Following "Passion" was an interlude of several years in which the film importation from the continent won recognition for Jannings, but the vehicles themselves, not measuring up to the American standard, Jannings did not gain that wide popularity that was justly his.

Then came "Variety"—the picture that was on every critic's list as one of the "best ten of 1926." A dramatic figure had crashed into the select circle of American film favorites. Everywhere Jannings was acclaimed the finest dramatic actor of the screen.

There was some fear with the release of "The Way of All Flesh," Jannings' first American picture, that the continental star in a new setting with a new director and surrounded by American ideas, might not be the dramatic force he had proven himself to be in "Variety," "Passion" and other German films. Its first showings were greeted with something like a wave of relief—for it was the old Jannings—no, an even greater Jannings, for who can ever forget the pathetic figure of August Schiller, the man who paid for a lifetime for the mistake of a moment.

The promise of those great productions has made the coming of each new production an event. "The Last Command," which comes to the Howard theater tomorrow, finds Jannings in a role for which he is admirably suited. It almost seems that the producers are prodigal with their materials when we note in the same cast that sterling character actor, William Powell, and the beautiful Evelyn Brent of "Underworld" fame. If anything is a guarantee of entertainment, Jannings with such sterling support most assuredly is.

Ray Teal and the Howard stage orchestra will present the Publix stage show, "Joy Bells," a John Murray Anderson production, featuring the Stefano Mascagno Ballet and a brilliant array of Broadway talent.

On the SCREEN

'GIRL FROM CHICAGO' FILM AT METROPOLITAN

"The Girl From Chicago," this week's presentation at the Metropolitan, is a tense, glittering melodrama and a thrilling romance of the underworld that keeps its audiences at high tension from the first scene to the final fadeout.

It recounts the adventures of a well brought up girl of the old south, who leaves her father and braves the dangers of a great city to save the life of her brother who has fallen into the hands of a band of crooks who have "framed" him for a murder that was committed by a member of their gang, and for which he has been sentenced to death.

Exciting and swift as mad horses is the action of this heart and human interest drama of the workings of the underworld, and whirls the girl now known as "Molly, the Gal from Chi," from one danger to another, until at last she accomplishes the task she has come to do.

Myrna Loy gives the greatest performance of her career. Conrad Nagel, always forceful and pleasing, triumphs as the dapper detective who is supposed by Molly to be another of the crooks.

William Russell gives a strong characterization of Big Steve, and Carrol Nye is immense in his part, that of Molly's brother. In addition to the four aforementioned players, the cast is greatly enhanced by Paul Panzer, Erville Alderson and other satellistes of the screen. There is love, romance, tragedy, comedy and action galore in "The Girl From Chicago."

The theme selected to accompany the feature picture is "Silver Moon." Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra will present as an overture one of the latest hits recently sung by Billy Beard entitled "If You Want to Miss a Heaven on Earth Stay Out of the South."

Charley Chase in one of his character comedies, "What Women Did For Me," fun from the press, and Metropolitan news and views will also be shown.

Alamo No. 1.

Buck Jones is here in a picture of a good bad man who smashed his way to fame, love and fortune through a series of daredevil adventures. The story is about a wild buckaroo who is born to mischief and trouble, and who at last is given an invitation to leave Pinon City by a committee of citizens.

Wednesday and Thursday, Gordon Clifford presents a film knockout called "The Fighting Gob." The story concerns the exciting adventures of one Smith, a fighting sailor from the U. S. S. Nevada, who, on shore leave, decides to take a flivver ride and ends up at a big ranch where he runs into all sorts of excitement and incidentally falls in love.

JESSE JAMES PICTURE ON RIALTO SCREEN

Another Jesse James picture, which purports to be the truth about the exploits of the notorious bad man of the old southwest, is at the Rialto for showing all this week.

It is called "Jesse James Under the Black Flag," and Manager W. T. Murray, of the Rialto, was careful to point out that it is not to be confused with the other pictures of like titles.

Jesse James, Jr., son of the bank and train robber, is the star in the role of his father, and caused the expenditure of a large amount of money in order to secure the right setting and the correct, as far as possible, facts concerning Jesse James.

The picture, Manager Murray said, after a recent preview is better than any of the largely fiction dime stories we read as children about the most famous bandit the west ever produced, in the days of guerrilla warfare and banditry following the War Between the States.

Many of the incidents in the thrilling career of Jesse James are being revealed currently in a weekly magazine and these are elaborated in detail and in a stirring manner in the film version, according to the Rialto manager.

"Jesse James Under the Black Flag," was produced independently, at a tremendous cost, apparently, for the settings and background for the exploits of the boldest bad bandit in the history of the country are reproduced in splendid detail.

There will be the usual Rialto secondary features.

RAY TEAL PRESENTS 'JOY BELLS' AT HOWARD

One of the outstanding features of John Murray Anderson's Publix stage show, "Joy Bells," at the Howard this week in connection with Ray Teal and the Howard Stage orchestra, is the dancing of the Staefano Mascagno ballet. This talented organization consists of seven girls headed by Eva Mascagno, and all are pupils of Stefano Mascagno.

Signor Mascagno was formerly one of the most noted dancers in Europe, having started his career in his native Italy and having appeared at "La Scala" in Milan and other leading opera houses and theaters on the continent. For a year a half he appeared in Moscow in the operatic organization which included Feodor Chaliapin among its celebrities. Mascagno and the world's famous baritone being to this day fast friends.

The Roma Brothers, who classic poses and sensational hand-to-hand acrobatics created such a furore when appeared in John Murray Anderson's Publix productions, "Memory Gardens," are back at the Howard this week. Their feats of strength and equilibrium seem almost unbelieveable and audiences would keep them performing indefinitely were it not for the time limits of the performance. The boys have been appearing for many years in Europe and America in the leading theaters and are recognized as the foremost artists of their profession.

The balance of the all-star cast consists of Charlotte Arren, Joseph Parson, Douglas Wright & Co., Scotty Western and Chauncey Brown.

On the screen, Paramount presents Emil Jannings in "The Last Command," one of the most dramatic stories ever to reach the screen. It is said to be Jannings' outstanding achievement.

ANOTHER WAR COMEDY ON GEORGIA SCREEN

"The Gay Retreat" is a laugh picture and one of the funniest war comedies of the year. The plot is built around the adventures of Ted McNamara and Sammy Cohen during the world war and gives these two comedians the same opportunity to show their stuff that was used in the big war drama, "White Price Glory," in which they had the leading comedy roles.

Those who have seen "What Price Glory" will never forget the two mischief making, trouble seeking marines, Ted McNamara and Sammy Cohen. "The Gay Retreat" was written specially for these two boys and gives bits of their military life with the ambulance corps, where life for these boys consists of a series of episodes that keeps them jumping out of the frying pan into the fire and back again. Of course there is a very intriguing romance for each of them and in the end their very propensity for mischief wins for them high honors.

Unlike other war comedies there is a definite plot in "The Gay Retreat" and it has to do with the sleep-walking activities of the son of a millionaire and the faithful watch kept over the boy by his two trusty body-guards, Ted and Sammy, who have been cautioned never to leave the rich man's son out of their sight. In the army this is some job! The action moves quickly from one situation to another while the thrills and laughs are about equally divided. "The Gay Retreat," in spite of bursting shells and every aspect of grim warfare, is based on the comedy side of life in the army and as such offers good entertainment and many humorous moments.

Famed 'Rose Marie' On Erlanger Bill All Next Week

We are to have at the Erlanger for week beginning Monday, February 6, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, Arthur Hammerstein's "Rose Marie." "Rose Marie" is unquestionably a smashing hit, a joyful entertainment. It is said this musical melodrama lends itself readily to superlatives; it has everything that goes to make a great show—brilliant cast, a score, adequate story, a marvelous chorus and magnificent stage decoration.

In the sensational dance arrangements three-score chorus girls are handled with positive genius. In the "Totem Tom Tom" number, the direction is a revelation. Seldom on the stage does a chorus work with more stirring effect, and the punches are delivered without a bare skin or immodesty. It is all as decorous as a seminary and yet the results outdo all the daring of the undressed shows.

The story of "Rose Marie" starts in the Canadian northwest in a snow-bound hotel with red-coated police, miners and frontier girls. There are campfire scenes, snow storms, smart tourist hotels and then a series of episodes in Quebec. There is every opportunity for local color, and the settings and costumes take full advantage of the pictorial possibilities. There is a long procession of luxuries for the eyes.

Beulah Berson as "Rose Marie" LaFlamme, the belle of Fond du Lac, Saskatchewan, plays with archness and charm and sings superbly. Her voice is rich and warm and has color and dramatic quality and Mr. Hammerstein has found sparkling songs for her. Paul Donah, Hazel Gaudreau, Charles Meakins, Peggy Pates, Houston Richards, Daisy Gibson, Sano Marco, Ross Gibson, Neil Moore and the numerically large chorus to sing. There is a large company of one hundred including a symphony orchestra that renders the richly scored melodies in a manner that you are not likely to hear in a whole generation of musical plays. Mail orders, accompanied by proper remittance, are now being received. The box office seat sale opens Thursday morning.

NORMA TALMADGE STARS "CAMILLE" AT PONCE DE LEON

You may scan the pages of motion picture books for two years past and you could not pick five more delightful films than is being shown at the Ponce de Leon, said Willis Davis, Friday. We have a variety that will entertain everyone this week. Starting with "Madame Pompadour" Monday, a play of a very real episode from the life of France's most colorful woman, the Cleopatra of the court of Louis XV. Romance and dashing adventure in the days of Parisian pomp and ceremony. It stars Dorothy Gish and Antonio Moreno. Then on Tuesday we go into the north country with such stars as Betty Blythe and Lon Chaney, who play the principal roles in "Nomads of the North." They are said to give a demonstration of histrionic teamwork which is seldom equalled on the screen. Both are called upon to portray characters which exact very accurate interpretation in order to accomplish the desired results in visualization and the manner in which they acquit themselves has brought profusely laudatory reviews from the leading critics.

"The Tigress," Wednesday, shows Jack Holt in a new type of role, an adventurous nobleman, who combines brain and brawn and finds plenty of excitement matching his wits against savage cunning. It is a very entertaining picture with plenty of action.

For Thursday and Friday we have a story that is generally acclaimed as the greatest triumph of the speaking stage's foremost actresses, notably Sarah Bernhardt and Eleanora Duse, "Camille," modernized for the screen, now becomes Norma Talmadge's crowning achievement.

"The finest screen performance of all time," is the tribute paid to Miss Talmadge by motion picture critics. Norma is supported by the new Spanish actor, Gilbert Roland.

Saturday we have a laugh riot. Beery and Hatton, as two ship stokers who are made ill even by a roller-coaster, suddenly find themselves blown into the air service during war time. It is called "Now We're In the Air."

Alamo No. 2.

(THE STOLEN BRIDE.)

A well-balanced cast, headed by one of the screen's most striking personalities, brilliance of direction and wealth of story, setting and atmosphere combine to make "The Stolen Bride," showing at the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday and Tuesday, one of the outstanding pictures of many months.

Introducing gorgeous Billie Dove to the screen as a star in her own right, this First National Picture is ideal as a vehicle for the beautiful actress, and her dramatic and moving performance more than confirms the judgment of the producer in advancing her cinematic position. In every scene of the picture Miss Dove's personality impresses itself forcefully upon the audience and she demonstrates that she is not only one of the most beautiful but one of the leading dramatic actresses of the screen.

With its locale in the intriguing atmosphere of central Europe, in the day before the world war threw that portion of the continent into chaos, "The Stolen Bride" is filled with glamour and romance and intrigue of the old world.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED BY LORENZO JONES JR.

'The Barker' Opens Monday For Week Run at Erlanger

Direct from a record run of 200 performances at the Blackstone theater, Chicago, "The Barker," a unique play of American tent show life, comes to the Erlanger theater Monday night for a week's engagement, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Richard Bennett, the favorite American actor who has the title role in this great play of canvas in the theater, has played the role of Nifty Miller since last April in Chicago, the greatest run there since Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'."

In this play Richard Bennett has a role which allows him the full range of his artistry. There are tense moments that make one gasp but quickly followed by some father and son scenes which are not to be witnessed in any production now before the American public. Nifty Miller so admirably played by Richard Bennett, is the barker for Colonel Gowdy and is in his element.

He has everything running smoothly and with Carrie, the Hawaiian dancer as his sweetheart. Everything is going so well until Nifty's son, who was left down on the farm in Indiana, unexpectedly turns up. It's vacation time, on the lot. He comes trailing into the carnival footsore and weary and demands to be given a chance to work during the holiday.

Nifty, who knows it is not much of a chance, allows the boy to stay. He tries to help his son's surroundings by giving Carrie the air and high hatting the rest of the company and the result is just what the audience enjoys. Carrie bribes the snake charmer to flirt with the boy and Nifty's plans come crashing down in a great debacle.

It is real tragi-comedy and made up of the innumerable cross-purposes of human beings, as life is. Richard Bennett's part of the Barker is superbly well acted and he is ably assisted by Marjorie Wood as Carrie and an extraordinarily well-balanced cast. Charles L. Wagner has given the production a magnificent and realistic setting. Seats for all performances may be had at the Erlanger box office and at Phillips & Crew Piano company.

MYSTERY BURLESQUE TOPS KEITH BILL

Thrills, shudders, shrieks and creeps are a few of the essentials of producing a mystery play and must be injected in all mystery comedy-dramas. This week at Keith's Georgia theater will be shown "Haunted," which is a burlesque on mystery plays and embodies part of several well known productions.

"Haunted" holds up to good-natured ridicule such well known thrillers as "The Cat and Canary," "Spooks," "The Gorilla," "The Bat" and others. It is a travesty presented by a company of players who have all seen service in mystery plays and know just what the public wants and how much of element of mystery must accompany the thrills and the chills of drama to compensate for the laughs and the comedy.

Florence Crowley has the leading female character, while "Billy" Wilson, in his character of the negro servant, is one of the principal comedians.

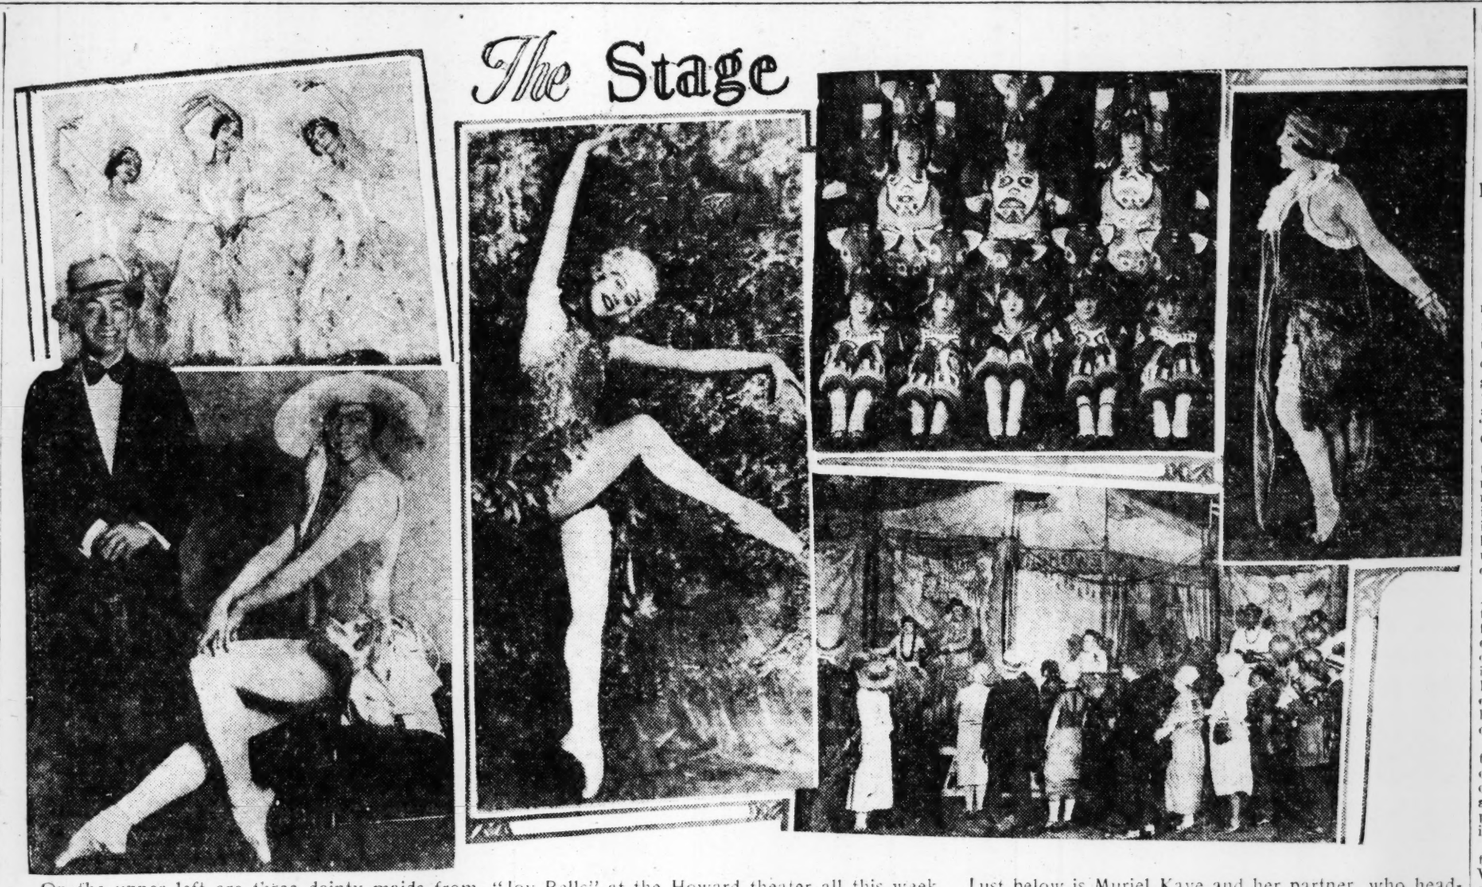

Muriel Kaye has three new strings to her dancing bow. These are Jack Lenny, Albert Bruneau and Gene Cass. Muriel Kaye belongs to the very modern school of steppers and has taught her companions all there is to know in fancy and trick stage dancing. This is without doubt one of the best of the dance offerings being shown, as Miss Kaye has a national reputation as a dancer and comes with a long string of stage successes to her credit.

After four years being featured with the Greenwich Village Follies, the Hickey brothers are back in vaudeville and will be seen at their best in a new line of eccentric comedy and dancing.

There's a little bit of everything worth while in entertainment bound up in the offering of Miss Gertrude and her boy friends, a quartet of singers and dancers, comics and entertainers. Miss Gertrude is extremely versatile, a sort of jack of all vaudeville trades, and has evolved something unique for the stage.

If any nation of people deserve the title "King of the Ukulele," that distinction should rightfully go to Hawaii. Nawahi comes under the head of "king," for he is a master of the instrument. In addition to Keith vaudeville the screen will present "The Gay Retreat," a comedy film of war times, featuring Sammy Cohen and Ted McNamara, the comedians of "What Price Glory."

The Stage

On the upper left are three dainty maids from "Joy Bells" at the Howard theater all this week. Just below is Muriel Kaye and her partner, who headline the Keith bill at the Georgia. The young lady so gracefully poised in the air is Vida Negri, who heads a company of seven beautiful girls on the Pantages Capitol bill this week. The girls in the bugaboo outfits are features of "Rose Marie," coming to the Erlanger. Just below is a scene from "The Barker," current at the Erlanger. On the upper right is the "half man, half woman" freak from the headlining turn at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Before the CURTAIN

By ELMO HAMBY

Perhaps it was the ever-exhilarative effect of the presence beside me of Miss Holly Hall, in the Howard theater's two-by-four backstage projection room last week, but it seems to me that "The Last Command," which is current at that theater, is just about the finest example of cinema art that Atlanta has had an opportunity of seeing.

As for Miss Hall, her presence should have equally as distracting an effect on those in her immediate proximity as an exhilarating one.

The picture is the first I have seen that I thought even approached "Variety" in point of artistry, but I doubt seriously whether the standard will stand before the onslaughts of this newcomer.

It represents an honest and serious attempt on the part of the producers to give the public a picture which is to the cinema what the classics are to music and the old masters to painting, and as such it should be given the hearty support of every picturegoer who demands his entertainment to occasionally stray from the narrow path of hokum and branch into intelligence.

"The Last Command" is magnificent. It represents all that before has not been done in the movies. A casual view of the picture may lead you to the opinion that this statement is grossly false. For the film deals with war, love and sorrow, but it treats war as it has not been treated, and it depicts love as it has not been shown.

If "The Last Command" is a box-office success, as I anticipate, it will be one of the greatest victories of the cinema in the last several years. Time and again the producers have tried to turn from the beaten path and produce pictures that did not offend even ordinary intelligence. But, one by one, they have failed. There may have been pictures of this type which were successful in New York, but not nationally successful.

New York is no standard. I quote a remark of Manager Ernest Morrison, of the Howard, whose vivid similes are unsurpassed, to prove that. He says: "If a picture were made expressly for one-legged taxi drivers, it would be a success in New York, for there are enough one-legged taxi-drivers there to make it pay."

I believe the answer lies in Emil Jannings. Somehow, the public isn't able to get away from Jannings, regardless of the fact that his opus is tragedy. There's some intangible something about him which overshadows tragedy.

He is unquestionably the greatest tragedian the screen has ever seen. He was made tragedies pay, where all others failed.

If you miss "The Last Command" this week, then misfortune is your bed companion.

Lighter Fare.

A picture which should also prove a big attraction to theater fans, offsetting the heavier diet of "The Last Command," is "Publicity Madness," which offers the quite delectable Lois Moran in a role which, for her, is completely new.

Miss Moran, in changing over from the sweet, domestic type she has played to the jazzy, peppy role, has left behind her the long hair which some have regarded as one of her greatest features. From advance "trailers" of the film, shown at the Capitol last week, however, I think that they will be delightfully charmed by the rather uniquely beautiful appearance created by the attractive bob.

Roy Teal, at the Howard, will this week demonstrate his skill to those of us who have been waiting his direction of a classical number by presenting "Kammenoi-Ostrow," the Rubinstein piece. If such a tenderly tranquil number goes over big, in this city which demands bombast and musical fireworks in its selections, Mr. Teal will have scored a great success.

She will be the Countess Ostermann, a friend of the Czar Paul I of Russia. Jannings will be the czar, and Lewis Stone will have the role of Pahlin, the minister from whom "The Patriot" gets its name. Ernst Lubitsch is directing.

"The Patriot" is being produced with a superlative cast and lavish settings, and is expected to be in every way a fitting successor to the previous Jannings pictures. The star's latest production, "The Last Command," a story of the Russian revolution, is expected soon to reach the screen.

BIG ARRAY OF FREAKS TOPS NEW LOEW BILL

The strangest, oddest and in many respects the most unusual act ever offered in vaudeville will come to Atlanta this week when Fred La Reine presents "A Night At Coney Island" as the headline attraction at Loew's Grand theater. With "Coney Island Charlie" the famous "barker," acting as master of ceremonies fifteen of the strangest living freaks ever exhibited will appear in their various capacities in the act.

In the congress of living freaks carried by the attraction may be mentioned such famed people as Albert-Alberta, half man, half woman; Mrs. Pete Robinson, fattest woman on earth who weighs 642 pounds and her husband, Pete Robinson, "The Human Skeleton," who weighs 57 pounds; the "Armless Wonder," Ajax, the sword swallower, Mrs. Tiny, the smallest mother in the world; Princess Nina, who fondles cobras and rattlesnakes; the Man-Mountain Giant; the "Spider Boy," who has baffled the scientific world, and that strange creature "Cuckoo, the Bird Girl."

All the oddest freaks of the great Coney Island amusement attraction have been collected in one gigantic act and will be offered here as the headline attraction. The freak performs all kinds of marvelous feats and provide a program which the reviewers of the amusement magazines pronounce one of the most entertaining acts of any kind seen in years.

Four other acts will be offered on the new bill among them being Demorest and DeLand in a non-sensical musical skit, "A Cuckoo Go-Cart." This is a clever musical act offered in an entirely new and original style.

Carimell, Harris and company will appear in a big singing and dancing act offered in three episodes. A lively line of comedy is provided in this act which is one that comes direct from a successful engagement in some of the biggest theaters in the east.

Noah Ferris and Harry Elles will appear in an Italian comedy skit entitled "Meet Mariutcha," while the opening number will be a skillful equilibristic act offered by Evans and Perez.

Along with this unusual bill will come "Baby Mine" as the feature picture attraction with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in leading roles.

West End.

FEATURES PAUL SHORT'S KIDDIE REVUE.

Patrons of the West End will be given a treat this week when Paul Short's Kiddie Revue will be staged on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Twenty-one acts, featuring Atlanta's most talented children, will be presented, together with the usual program of feature pictures, comedies and newsreels.

Among the children who will appear in the revue are the Wager brothers, Virginia Lee Coppack, the Wallace twins, Dorothy Young, Elaine Penn, Vadie Frances Aiken, Margaret Coan, the Rabern sisters and Gloria Matthews. The "Kiddie Khorus," which has been trained especially for this show by Miss Mildred Arnold, is composed entirely of West End children.

Does a man marry when he wants to, or when some woman wants him to? This question is answered by Norma Shearer and Lew Cody in "The Demi Bride," which will be shown on the West End screen Monday and Tuesday.

All the ingredients that go to make up a ribcracking farce comedy, plentifully interlarded with fast action, thrills, suspense and an appearing love theme, are embodied in "Fast and Furious," a Reginald Denny picture, which will be shown Wednesday only.

Jackie Coogan never played a more manly, lovable, boy-hero part than in "The Bugle Call," an epic of Indian warfare, which plays Thursday and Friday. Sandow, the world's greatest dog, appears in "Code of the Northwest," a thrilling melodrama of the north woods, Saturday only.

Capitol Film Keen Satire On Business

Lois Moran and Edmond Lowe Starred in "Publicity Madness."

A rollicking satire on modern business, "Publicity Madness," is the big feature screen attraction coming to the Capitol theater this week to accompany the regular bill of five "bigger than big time" Pantage's vaudeville acts on the stage. Lois Moran and Edmund Lowe, the sensational "Sergeant Quirt" of "What Price Glory," are starred.

According to all who have seen this production it is made up of five reels of laughs with a delightful romance and a variety of thrills thrown in for good measure. The situations in which the grandiloquent hero finds himself are especially funny and the unusual ending puts him in complete control of the business.

The story itself was adapted by Andrew Bennison from an original tale by Anita Loos. It deals with a fresh, garrulous, soap salesman, whose ego is only surpassed by the daring of his advertising schemes. After being fired from one concern he worms his way into another old-fashioned competitor, and from then on things begin to move swiftly and humorously.

The romance in the picture has to do with his love for the daughter of the president of the second concern, the thrills are connected with a a record breaking flight to the Philippines which is part of his advertising scheme.

Edmund Lowe plays Pete King, the salesman, and Lois Moran is Violet Henley. Others in the cast are Arthur Housman as a running representative of a credit clothing house; E. J. Ratcliffe as "Uncle" Elmer Henly, old-fashioned owner of the Henly Soap company; James Gordon, as his competitor; Bryon Munson as Violet's other suitor and Norman Peck as Wilbur, the highbrow office boy.

Albert Ray, who already has a long list of comedy successes to his credit, directed the production.

NEWS OF THE THEATERS AND MOVIES

'BABY MINE' COMEDY ON LOEW'S SCREEN

The classic laugh producer "Baby Mine" with the chief fun making parts in the hands of Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, the great team that scored so heavily in "Rookies" will be the feature picture offering at Loew's Grand theater this week and it ought to be one of the big fun weeks of the year, according to advance notices. The farce "Baby Mine" was one of the funniest ever presented to the stage and it is even funnier in the cinema version. The burlesque love making scene of Karl Dane and Charlotte Greenwood is one of the funniest bits ever presented according to the reviewers.

Four characters—a dozen complications, and a veritable hurricane of fun—these are what make up the details of "Baby Mine," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's second hilarious vehicle for the comedy team of Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, wafted to fame on a gale of merriment in "Rookies" and now the center of a new storm of laughs at the Loew's Grand theater.

"Baby Mine" is just one laugh after another. Adapted from one of the most famous stage comedies, the screen version preserves all the original fun—to which is added not only the Dane-Arthur combination of laughmakers, but Charlotte Greenwood, lanky comedienne of "So Long Letty" and other famous stage shows. It's Charlotte's debut on the screen, incidentally—but judging by the laughs she gets it's not going to be her last appearance by a good deal.

The trio are responsible for a solid hour and more of chuckles, giggles, and guffaws. The courtship of Dane and Miss Greenwood is excruciatingly funny, as are the varied episodes and complications over the stolen babies in the reconciliation scenes—and Arthur and the blueberry pie stage a series of scenes that reduces the audiences to the verge of hysteria.

Tudor.

Art Acord opens the week at the Tudor in "The Western Rover," a tale of the plains and of a man known the country over for his roving qualities, who just happened to be where there was a scrap and was always in 'em. It makes unusually good entertainment and Acord, with his horse and his dog, furnishes the audiences with ample thrills. "The Western Rover" plays the Tudor on Monday and Tuesday.

On Wednesday and Thursday George O'Hara appears at the Tudor in "Is That Nice," another of this star's exceptionally delightful pictures. O'Hara's recent pictures have had an abundance of speed and action and this one is no exception.

On Friday and Saturday the Tudor offers a story of the winning of California from the wilds. Ti McCoy, who has given to the screen some exceedingly well played pictures of frontier life, stars again in California which is rich in historical value and full of thrills, action and adventure.

Palace.

The difficulties that may arise through the introduction of a total stranger as one's husband are depicted by Colleen Moore in "Naughty But Nice," which shows at the Palace Monday and Tuesday.

In "The Taxi Dancer," which plays Wednesday only, Joan Crawford has the role of a girl who comes from a sleepy little southern town to conquer Broadway. What befalls her in a jazz-mad world makes the picture at all times fascinating.

If you think you have troubles, see "Chang" Thursday or Friday, and you will come away feeling that these are pigmy matters compared to the tribulations of a jungle pioneer. If you haven't any troubles and just want some thrills, go to see "Chang" and you will get them plenty.

RIALTO ANNOUNCES SCREEN PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY

The Rialto theater Saturday announced its tentative schedule for February and the list reveals that "Grandma's Boy," the Harold Lloyd comedy, will be there the whole week of February 6.

The Rialto schedule for the remainder of the month follows:

Week of February 12, "That Certain Thing," with Viola Dana in an all-star cast: For the first half of the week and "The Secret Hour" the latter half of the week.

Week of February 19: "The Leopard Lady," with Jacqueline Logan, for showing Monday Tuesday and Wednesday, with "White Pants Willie," with Johnny Hines for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Week of February 26: Marie Prevost's "The Girl in the Pullman," followed by "Dead Man's Curve."

"THE WEDDING MARCH" READY NEXT MONTH

With its release scheduled for February and a world premier planned for New York, "The Wedding March," the Erich von Stroheim dramatic spectacle which took more than two years in the making is receiving its finishing touches in Hollywood. Editing and titling are to be completed within two weeks, when the prints will be rushed to New York for preparation of the musical score.

The picture comprises 12 reels, with several in technicolor.

"The Wedding March," is expected to be recognized as Von Stroheim's greatest effort. Fay Wray, soon to be seen in "The Legion of the Condemned," with Gary Cooper plays the leading feminine role. The film's early scenes are a gigantic panorama of the pre-war glory of Vienna. It's basic romance is between a noble and a peasant, girl, with Von Stroheim, enacting the role of one of the Emperor Franz Josef's cavalry officers. Its theme is that marriage without love brings sorrow.

Brilliant night life scenes of the once gay capital of Austria are depicted as well as lavish sets of Tyrolean mountain scenery.

Tenth Street.

With the program submitted by Frank Harris, manager of the Community theaters, is an announcement of the appointment of R. H. Ripple as new manager of the Tenth Street theater. Mr. Ripple is from South Bend, Ind., and has been in Atlanta only a short while. Mr. Ripple, while in Atlanta, has been connected with the Capitol theater.

The program announced at the Tenth Street theater for this week is as follows: Monday and Tuesday, Billie Dove and Huntley Gordon, in "Sensation Seekers; the Wednesday picture has Adolphe Menjou in "A Gentleman From Paris," while on Thursday and Friday Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" is shown. Fred Thomson cavorts about the screen Saturday in "Arizona Nights."

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

David Belasco, the dean of the American theater, who has played practically every role in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" with the exception of that of Eliza, has issued a bulletin regarding the great Universal version of the Harriet Beecher Stowe classic now current at the Central theater in New York.

As Mr. Belasco himself says, the production thrilled him to the heart.

"Every teacher and minister, every rabbi and priest should tell of it to every person, children and adults, with whom they come in contact. Everyone should be encouraged to see it.

"It is inspirational as well as educational; full of pathos, humor and life—a great picture in every particular—a fascinating picture."

Five Headliners MakeNewCapitol Bill Entertaining

A bill on which every act is a potential headliner is a rare thing.

And yet that's just the case at the Capitol theater this week, where five acs of such high merit that all deserve topline position, will be offered in conjunction with one of the finest pictures of the new year, "Publicity Madness," starring Lois Moran on the screen.

Vidi Negri and company, an offering in which appear seven beautiful girls, each sufficient to be billed as a "single" headliner, is the first of the five big offerings. A brilliant program of song numbers woven around these seven girls makes a production rare in its exceptional merit. Elaborate costumes and colorful scenery complete the impression of beauty throughout the whole act.

In the department of blackface comedy talking acts, the turn of Will Rawls and Ella Von Kaufman stands ace high, and it comes on the current Capitol program. Miss Von Kaufman, in addition to possessing highly pleasing beauty, is a capable "foil" for the clever comedy which Rawls introduces.

"Throwing the voice" is one of the oldest of vaudeville entertainments, and this profession is seen at the zenith of its ability in the offering this week at the Capitol of Dave Rafael, who presents a clever ventriloquial offering with a big surprise finish. Rafael as the policeman who arrests two charges and attempts to convey them to the police station amid their protestations of innocence and all that sort of thing furnishes a situation which is new in the vaudeville field, and which, consequently, should prove excellent entertainment.

Lorraine and Minto, a very pretty girl and two nice-looking boys, present an offering of song and dance which has been acclaimed as possessing the beauty and the unique finish of the finest Parisian act.

As an opening feature, Miss Merle will present her feathered friends in a difficult routine of tricks. Flashes of color from the gay plumage of cockatoos together with beautiful scenery make this turn one of real entertainment.

"Publicity Madness" gives the highly personable Lois Moran one of the finest opportunities she has had in pictures.

Ethel Doherty is at work upon the adaptation of "Hold Everything," the new story upon which Bebe Daniels will start work for Paramount as soon as she has completed "Feel My Pulse," which she is now making.

Frigidaire Chiefs To Attend Southern Conference To Be Held Here Feb. 20

Frigidaire executives who will attend the southern regional convention to be held here February 20. Left to right, E. G. Biechler, president and general manager; R. F. Callaway, assistant to the president and a native Georgian; E. D. Doty, advertising manager. At right is B. B. Geyer, of the Geyer Advertising agency, who will also attend.

Advantages of electric refrigeration will be depicted by chart, playlet and speech to 600 members of the Frigidaire sales organization from the entire southern territory at a convention to be held in Atlanta February 20. Twenty executives of Frigidaire corporation headed by E. G. Biechler, president and general manager, an 8,000-mile swing about the United States, will be here to conduct the meetings which are to be in the Atlanta Biltmore.

The all-day convention session will be folowed by a banquet at night. E. H. Danford, Atlanta branch manager, is in charge of preparations. Represented at the convention will be practically the entire field organization from Atlanta, Birmingham, Knoxville, Asheville, Greensboro, Columbia, Jacksonville and Miami. A special car will bring the executive party from Dallas, where a one-day convention will be held, to this city.

The meeting in this city is one of eight being held throughout the country for the entire field organization in the United States and Canada. Other meetings are being held in Dayton, Omaha, Chicago, San Francisco, Dallas and New York. New Frigidaire household cabinets, finished in two-tone color effect and possessing many refinements, will be exhibited at the convention. New featurs will be explained to the salesmen.

Entire Line To Be Shown.

An exhibition of the entire Frigidaire line of products, embracing practically every use to which electric refrigeration has been put, will be set up in the Atlanta Biltmore. Special duty equipment, as well as the standard line of products, will be in the display, which will include the new electric water cooler, apartment house cabinets, ice cream cabinets and low priced household models.

Frigidaire executives from Dayton, Ohio, to attend the convention will include R. F. Callaway, assistant to the president; J. A. Harlan, household sales manager; B. J. Vandoren, assistant commercial sales manager; T. B. Fordham, works manager; L. E. Keilholtz, chief engineer; E. D. Doty, advertising manager; G. A. Ames, General Motors Acceptance corporation, manager Frigidaire division; J. E. Houser, chief inspector; R. L. Lee, head of sales educational division, and R. E. Smithson, service manager. B. B. Geyer, of the Geyer Advertising company will be a member of the party.

Mr. Callaway, assistant to the president, was born at Dalton, Ga. Before his appointment as assistant to Mr. Biechler, he was manager of the Frigidaire branch at Detroit, Mich.

Convention Speakers.

S. A. Long, Frigidaire distributor at Wichita, Kan., will supply convention oratory. He was formerly well known in chautauqua circuits. T. H. (Dusty) Miller, Ohio humorist, philosopher and newspaperman, will speak. T. B. Fordham, also on the program, is works manager of Frigidaire corporation and is nationally known in industrial circles as founder of the National Association of Foremen.

Another convention feature will be the awarding of $100 in gold to each salesman and dealer who sold his full quota in 1927. Many thousands of dollars will thus be distributed during the eight conventions.

Previous to this year, Frigidaire conventions have been held in Dayton with star salesmen from the organization in attendance. This is the first time that regional conventions have been held and the first time that such a convention has been brought to Atlanta by this corporation, according to Mr. Danforth. As a result all salesmen from the southern territory will be brought into direct contact with executive heads of the business.

President's Address.

Mr. Biechler, whose address will be one of the most interesting features of the Atlanta program, is one of the outstanding figures in General Motors and in American business. At the beginning of his career he was a laborer, working near the great tract of land where the largest of the Frigidaire factories has since been erected. Starting with his present organization in a minor position, he rose to the presidency in five years.

Plans for the program here call for a number of spectacular effects. Frigidaire conventions in the past have always been noted for their original features and highly organized presentation. Special entertainments, playlets, electrical effects, beautiful decorations and unusual stage settings will be utilized in getting the 1928 selling message to the salesmen from the southern territory.

"Frigidaire corporation has been the most important factor in the electric refrigeration industry almost since the beginning," Mr. Danforth said. "Its spectacular rise can be partly attributed to its association with General Motors. It was the first in the industry to place its business on a mass production basis, applying the same principles of manufacture and distribution which General Motors has found so effective in the automobile field. There are more Frigidaires in use than all other makes of electric refrigerators combined."

KINDERGARTEN OPENS ABOUT FEBRUARY 1

The efforts of the First Presbyterian church to establish an accredited kindergarten in the church annex has received expressions of approval from many of the pre-school presidents throughout the city.

Aims of the kindergarten are to afford training to children from 4 to 6 years of age under the most ideal conditions.

Mrs. Lee Worsham, a graduate of the Kate Baldwin kindergarten school in Savannah, has been secured as teacher. Mrs. Worsham is state president of the Georgia Kindergarten association. Assistants will be named at an early date.

The board of directors, governing the new school, is as follows: Miss Agnes Barden, supervisor of the primary grades in Bibb county; Miss Sallie Boone, librarian at Mercer university; Mrs. H. L. Whitehead, president of the pre-school council; Nelson Mallory, J. B. Hall, Dr. W. R. Mackay, P. A. McArthur.

It is expected that the school will open about February 1.

HOXSEY TOURS NEW BUSINESS HAVING HOME OFFICE HERE

Among new business organizations making home offices in Atlanta is Hoxsey Tours, with offices at 427 Atlanta Trust Company building. J. M. B. Hoxsey, Jr., who for years was Atlanta manager of Temple Tours, Inc., one of the largest touring companies operating in Europe, launched his own company as the result of a desire to afford the traveler an opportunity to visit the many interesting places off the beaten track of ordinary travel as well as those famous larger cities and points of interest in the old world. His work has carried him into 27 foreign countries in Europe, north Africa and Central America.

His personally-conducted tour of the summer of 1928, known as "Tour Continentale," will include many points entirely familiar to Mr. Hoxsey.

Hoxsey Tours has also taken on the agencies for a number of the larger tourist and steamship companies furnishing tours and transportation to any point on the globe.

Chamberlin, Famous Aviator, To Visit Atlanta Next Month

:: FLIER WILL MAKE TRIP HERE IN SPECIAL PLANE ::

Clarence D. Chamberlin, pilot of the first New York-to-Germany airplane flight and holder of the American endurance record for sustained flights, will pay a visit to Atlanta late in February and deliver several addresses. His visit will be sponsored jointly by the chamber of commerce and the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Chamberlin's program will include a big meeting of school children, probably at the auditorium, in the afternoon, and a dinner to prominent citizens at the Biltmore in the evening. He will also be the speaker at a luncheon to be arranged when the exact date is fixed. This cannot definitely be set until the flier's schedule for his southern tour is completed.

Arrangements for Chamberlin's visit are being handled by G. C. Bowden, district manager of the Southern Bell Telephone company, who is chairman of the chamber of commerce aviation committee. He is being given the cooperation of the Atlanta Aeronautical association and other bodies interested in the development of commercial aviation.

Chamberlin is making a tour of 100 cities, traveling in a "flivver" plane of his own design, patterned after the light De Haviland "Moth" so popular in England. It is capable of a speed of 100 miles an hour and can land or take off in a space of 100 feet. Chamberlin is using baseball fields, golf courses and other open spaces for landing, and is not wholly dependent upon aviation fields.

The longest nonstop flight in aviation annals was made by him, when he piloted his Bellanca plane, Columbia, with Charles Levine as passenger, across the Atlantic to a point in the interior of Germany. Since then he has made several attempts to break the record for keeping a plane in the air, and is persisting in his efforts to establish a new mark.

Chamberlin, in his Atlanta talks, will use motion pictures showing some phases of his trans-Atlantic flight. He will discuss the need of improved airports, the rapid growth in commercial aviation and his belief that flying will soon become as popular sport as was motoring only a few years ago.

Robinson's Style Show Attracting Attention

Announcement of the A. M. Robinson company last Monday of the big style and fashion show to be staged here in March is attracting attention all over this territory, according to C. J. Williamson, of the Robinson company, who is promoting this event.

The real backer of this big style show in Atlanta, and many more in smaller towns in the Atlanta trading territory, is the nationally-known firm of M. C. D. Borden & Sons, of New York city, which through the A. M. Robinson company wishes people of this section to know more of the qualities and varieties of Borden fabrics.

The Borden company is giving through the A. M. Robinson company $250 which will be divided into four prizes to girls living anywhere in the south who make out of any one of the hundreds of patterns and shades of Borden's fabrics the best "dressy" dress to be worn at the style show in March. The prizes will be $100, first prize, for the dress made out of Borden's rayon fabric, and $50, second prize, for the next best dress made out of the same material; $75, first prize, for the best dress made out of any of Borden's cotton fabrics, and $25 for second prize in the same material.

The firm of Lanham Sons company, of Rome, Ga., has entered this event.

C. M. Swigert, of Leesville, S. C., has engaged in the contest and will put on a style show in Leesville, as has also McMillan Brothers, of Acworth, Ga.; Brown Brothers company, of Elberton, Ga., and Bird Mercantile company, of Bowden, Ga.

As the element of time will play an important factor in this contest, it will be well if every merchant located in this territory who is considering entering one or more girls in the Atlanta style show, lose no time in getting in touch with Mr. Williamson for full particulars of th cooperation the A. M. Robinson company will render in putting on local style shows.

Mr. Williamson also announces that the A. M. Robinson company is extending a cordal invitation to visitors to the big millinery style show that opens in Atlanta tomorrow to drop in and see the gorgeous display of ready-to-wear and a big stock of the best array of newest shades and patterns in piece goods.

M'ANDREW SCORES 'RAH, RAH PATRIOTS' AND CHICAGO MAYOR

Moline, Ill., January 28.—(AP)—Condemnation for what he termed "rah, rah patriots" and the present-day methods of teaching patriotism punctuated a commencement address last night by William McAndrew, former superintendent of Chicago public school.

Speaking of "you and the U. S. A.," McAndrew said that the singing of patriotic songs and the pledging of allegiance to the flag were not understood by one-tenth of the children who took part daily. "No wonder, then, Chicago got the kind of a mayor it has," he added.

Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, made McAndrew a mayoral campaign issue, charging he was pro-British.

10-YEAR SENTENCE GIVEN MONSIGNOR OF KIEV CATHEDRAL

Moscow, January 28.—Monsignor Theophile Skalsky, Roman Catholic prior of the Kiev cathedral, who went on trial several days ago charged with various offenses including espionage in behalf of Poland, has been sentenced to ten years in prison and five years' loss of civic rights.

The monsignor was convicted of all the charges except that of espionage.

The court held that as the offenses had been committed before the amnesty on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the soviet revolution, Monsignor Skalsky should benefit thereby and should be sentenced to a prison term instead of to death.

ACTIVITY REPORTED BY SALVATION ARMY

Work of human salvage performed by the Salvation Army in Atlanta, as its distinct part in the closely-knit scheme of charity administration by agencies of the Community Chest, were described Saturday in its report of activities for December to the service department of the Chest.

This report, coming on the heels of the impression created by the recent regional convention of Salvation Army workers in Atlanta, was said by Chest officials to be likely to establish firmly a recognition of the important service of the Army to the community.

In the organization of Community Chest agencies, the Salvation Army is concerned largely with administration of emergency relief and care of destitute transients. For this work it maintains three social service departments—the relief department, the emergency home, sheltering lone women; and the industrial home, housing lone men.

In December, according to the report, the relief department under direction of Adjutant Eunice McCrae, cared for 184 families and individuals. The emergency home, in charge of Ensign Bertha Richter, sheltered 24 woman, and the industrial home housed 21 men.

In addition to these 21 men whom the home saved from the actual menace of starvation and exposure, the industrial home gave 555 lodgings and 849 meals to applicants, cared for six sick men and gave away 16 pairs of shoes.

Illustration of the coordination of work among agencies of the Community Chest was given in the report that a large number of the emergency relief cases of the army were handled in cooperation with other agencies, and that most cases were handled through the Chest's social service exchange, which is maintained as a central bureau available for the 36 agencies to prevent duplication and waste of charity efforts and funds.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED FOR HAMPTON SINGERS

Reports received Saturday from four box offices where seats are on sale for the concert of the Hampton Institute Glee club, to be given Tuesday night at the auditorium, indicate that the audience will come close to taxing the capacity of the hall.

The entire auditorium has been equally divided into sections for white and colored people, just as it was several seasons ago for the concert by the negro tenor, Roland Hayes, and a repetition of the great success of that occasion is expected.

The Hampton singers are acknowledged to be the greatest choral organization of negro male voices now before the public. They are famous both in Europe and America for their singing of negro spirituals and folk songs. They do not, however, confine their programs to this class of music, featuring modern English songs and a number of German and Italian classics sung in English.

R. Nathaniel Dett, director and piano soloist with the organization, occupies a position unique among his race. He is recognized as one of the greatest of modern composers for voice and instrumental music of the day, irrespective of race, and his numbers have been featured for some years on the programs of some of the greatest concert artists. He is a doctor of music of both Harvard and Oberlin universities. He is a remarkable pianist as well as composer and, in addition to his songs which will be sung by the glee club, he will play a group of his own compositions at the piano.

Tickets for white people are now on sale at the Cable Piano company and Phillips & Crew Piano company, while colored patrons may secure reservations at the Yates & Milton Pharmacy on Auburn avenue or at the Butler Street Y. M. C. A.

Auto Association To Hold Meetings In Nine Counties

Meetings for the purpose of completing county branches in the Georgia State Automobile association are to be held in nine counties of the state during the coming week, according to announcement Saturday by Leland J. Henderson, secretary of the association. Popular demand for the privileges of the organization, and the program which it proposes to put into effect in Georgia are widely apparent, he states.

Points at which these meetings are to be held include Cumming, Griffin, Vienna, Zebulon, Thomasville, Homerville, Dupont, Athens and Winder.

At Cumming, the five principal towns along state highway No. 9 are to form a single unit. Local membership has already been perfected in Dahlonega, Dawsonville, Cumming, Alpharetta and Roswell, and these will combine forces in one branch, which will have one of the largest memberships in the state.

Dooly county leaders have indicated that at least 5 per cent of all motor car owners in the county would be signed up for membership at the meeting which is to be held in Vienna on Thursday. The national association, the A. A. A., of which the Georgia state association is a part, has an enrolled membership of 5 per cent of all registered cars in America, and this has been set as the immediate goal of the Dooly county workers.

Officials of the association state that they plan to have at least 40 branches set up and active during February, with the remainder of the state to be completed as rapidly as points can be reached by the five district managers who are now in the field.

The immediate contract of as many emergency service stations as possible along the main tourist routes of the state is also proposed during the month. The annual directory of authorized hotels and service stations in America is to be published by the A. A. A. in March, and all Georgia stations to be included must be under contract by the end of February, it is stated.

Here's Your Chance To Win $2,000.00

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION'S "COW" FIGURE GAME

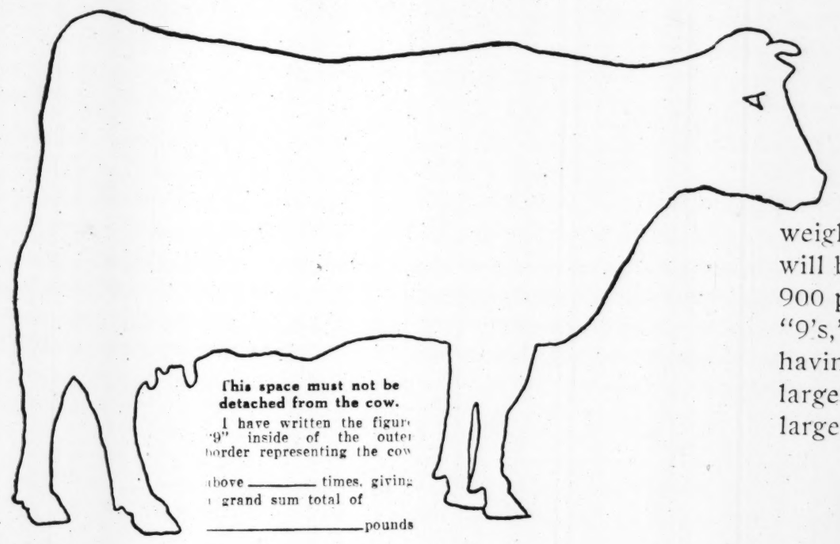

$2,000.00 First Prize—$1,000.00 Second Prize—$500.00 Third Prize

Twenty-five Cash Prizes in All--- Amounting to $4,515.00

THIS CONTEST CLOSES WEDNESDAY, FEB. 8

These big cash prizes are going to be given away to the lucky winners, and no one has a better chance than you if you will only make the proper effort. The object of the game is to see how much you can make the "COW" weigh by filling inside of the border representing the cow with figures "9." How many times can you write by hand, using a lead pencil, the figure "9" inside the border forming the cow outline? The sum total of the number of the "9's" that you put in the cow picture will represent your answer or what you give as the weight of the cow. For example twenty "9's" will be 180 pounds; one hundred "9's" would be 900 pounds, etc. Can you write in one hundred "9's," two hundred, or how many? The person having the greatest number of "9's," that is, the largest sum total, will win first prize, second largest second prize, etc.

How Much Can You Make the "COW" WEIGH?

THAT'S THE PROBLEM!

Try Your Hand at It by Writing the Figure "9" as Many Times as You Can Inside the Border-line of the "Cow."

Begin now on the game by clipping out the "cow" picture and start with lead pencil to filling in with the figure "9." You will find it absorbing fun, and every "9" that you write in the "cow" figure takes you further on your way to the big cash prizes that are to be given.

Be sure that the "9's" do not touch each other, nor touch the border of the cow. You may have additional copies of the "cow" picture by writing to the Cow Contest Dept., inclosing a stamped return envelope. The extra copies, however, will be on the same grade of paper as this is printed on.

You have a chance to earn $35.00, $250.00, $1,000.00 or $2,000.00, as explained and shown in the Prize List.

Closing Date

The "How Much Can You Make the Cow Weigh" Game Closes

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8TH, 1928

No Solution Can Be Changed After It Has Once Been Registered.

If you find that you can make the cow weigh more than the first solution which you sent, the only thing you can do is to send in another solution, which must be qualified independent of the first solution submitted. In other words, the qualification of one solution already submitted cannot be transferred to a later solution.

Important Facts to Remember!

While the amount you pay with the solution does not have any effect on your winning an award, it does affect the amount you will receive should you win one of the awards, as the value of these awards is determined by what the winners pay. This is explained in the prize list, which you should study carefully before sending in your solution.

Address your solution, remittances, etc., to the Contest Manager, Daily Circulation Dept., The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Observe These General Rules of the Contest!

1. All bona fide residents of Georgia and adjoining states may take part in this contest, except employees of The Atlanta Constitution and members of their families.

2. Contestants may submit as many different solutions as they desire, provided payment of one of the three amounts designated in the prize list shall accompany each solution, but no contestant will be permitted to win more than one award. Once registered, a solution cannot be changed.

3. The first prize will be awarded to the person having the greatest sum total, which is to be determined by the sum of the figures "9" written in the space designated inside of the border forming the picture representing the cow; to the second greatest total second prize, third greatest total third prize, etc.

4. Any lead pencil may be used. All writing or drawing pens of artists or engineers or their like are barred, as ink cannot be used on this grade of paper without blurring. The figures "9" need not be perfect in shape, but must be complete. Write as small as you like with any ordinary lead pencil of standard make—just so each "9" is fully shaped. Figures cannot touch each other, nor are they permitted to touch any part of the borderline forming the shape of the cow.

5. Copperplate type, shorthand, reproductions or reductions are barred, also duplicates of the original. Every "9" must actually be made by hand with any ordinary lead pencil of standard make, and must be discernible to the naked eye, meaning clear and distinct to a person of average good eyesight or equivalent. The natural eye by those who do not wear glasses, and ordinary reading glasses by those who wear glasses only guide allowed in filling in the figure "9." A "9" with either straight or curved tail is permissible.

6. Every contestant must give the correct total of the weight of the cow in the answer submitted by him. Incorrect statement disqualifies the solution. This weight of course is the sum total of the "9's" he has written in the figure representing the cow. This is important! Your name and complete address must be plainly written on margin of sheet on which your answer is given, or blank printed for that purpose, or a blank of your own selection attached hereto.

7. In case of ties, while there is hardly a chance in 10,000 of a tie, as many awards will be reserved as there are people tied. Before any awards are awarded for less correct solutions, another puzzle will be submitted to those tied on the same order of this one, except a smaller "cow" picture, after which should ties still result each contestant will receive the full amount of the prize tied for.

8. Only one prize will be awarded to a person, household, or group of persons. Any person or household, or group of persons submitting duplicates are barred.

9. The decision of The Atlanta Constitution must be accepted as final and conclusive in all matters, and participants by sending in their answers agree to accept the decision of the contest manager of The Atlanta Constitution as conclusive and final.

10. The Atlanta Constitution reserves the right to reject at any time any contestant whom it believes has violated the rules. The solution of the winner of first prize will be reproduced in The Constitution, together with the published result which will be published as soon as possible after the closing date of the contest.

11. All answers will receive the same consideration, regardless as to whether or not a subscription for the daily and Sunday Constitution be sent in.

12. The contest is open to new and old subscribers alike. The regular subscription rate of $5.00 for six months subscription or $9.50 for 12 months subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution will prevail. Daily only subscriptions or Tri-Weekly subscriptions not acceptable in this contest. Full amount of subscription must be remitted in every instance. When sent through an agent, postmaster, or otherwise, no commission can be deducted. In column 2 of prize list, six months' subscription there referred to can be either new or renewal; column 3, 12 months' subscription, $9.50, can be either new or renewal. Column 4, requiring two annual subscriptions, one can be a renewal, but one must be new. A new subscription means one who is not now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, directly or indirectly through any source, and has not within the past 60 days.

13. Subscriptions secured by the means of this contest in Atlanta and suburbs will be delivered by carrier service. In towns outside of Atlanta, where The Constitution has carrier delivery service, the paper may be delivered by carrier, upon request of the subscriber or contestant; otherwise the paper will be sent by mail.

14. A person who is now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, and paying the carrier or agent by the week or month, or otherwise, may send or bring directly to The Constitution a six or twelve months' payment to qualify a solution. Whatever is due such carrier, dealer or agent at that time must be paid to him as the remittance sent us will date from the date it is received. The carrier or agent will be notified by The Constitution of such advance payments. If all arrearages are not paid, the solution may not be considered valid. Renewals on mail subscriptions will be extended for the length of time paid for from present paid date of expiration. All qualifying subscriptions in this contest must be paid in advance.

15. Contest closes Wednesday, February 8th, 1928. All solutions delivered in person must be at The Constitution office by 9:00 p. m. of that date, but may be mailed any time before midnight. Solutions mailed at any post office in Georgia and adjoining states bearing postmark of no later date than midnight, February 8th, 1928, will be accepted if rules governing same are complied with. The contest extends from Wednesday, January 4th, 1928, to and including Wednesday, February 8th, 1928. Five days will be given thereafter for those who have not fully qualified for the larger prizes to do so, after which no further qualification remittances will be accepted.

The above rules are simple, easy to understand, and is all the information that can be given on the contest except that which appears in the announcement of which this is a part.

Local Amateurs To Present Play By Atlanta Girl

A play written by Mary Louise Booth, an Atlanta girl, will receive its first public presentation on Monday night at the Forsyth theater when "The Flame," a drama in three acts, is given by a cast composed of local young people under the direction of John J. Williams.

The production is to run for the entire week, it is announced, the proceeds to be for the benefit of the Ansley Babies' Home, on Capitol avenue. It is sponsored by Mrs. W. Clyde Drummond.

Many well-known amateur performers are included in the cast, some of whom have won distinction in their work of past seasons with the Oglethorpe Players, while others have have been active in one or other of the various "Little Theater" groups which have existed in Atlanta for some years.

Several added attractions are announced for the performances, including the Emory Four Quartet.

The cast is headed by Miss Marian Hull Smith, as leading lady, and by David B. Alleman, as leading man.

Others included in the cast are James Wallace, Louis Wood, Virgil Milton, James Duncan, Mary Harris, Mary McCord, Charles Willis and Hortense Elton.

Dr. Wise Worked In U. S. Shipyard During Great War

When America entered the world war, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, rabbi of the Free synagogue, of New York, informed his congregation that, until such time as peace should be declared, he felt it to be his duty to devote his entire effort to the service of the nation, in whatever capacity he could be most useful.

Unable to join the actual fighting forces, Dr. Wise quietly went out and secured work in a Philadelphia shipyard, working as a laborer and mechanic there for some months. Later, when the necessity of quick subscription to the Liberty loans was realized, Dr. Wise devoted his great oratorical gifts to public sales talks on the streets of the larger cities, on behalf of the national bonds.

Today, Dr. Wise is recognized as among the first half dozen of welfare workers and pulpit orators of the nation. Noted for his fearlessness, he has always been outspoken in his pulpit utterances, expressing whatever he feels to be true regardless of creed or belief of his listeners. It is because of this broad fearlessness in his views, that the Free synagogue has become a mecca for all shades of religious thought in New York, the Sunday congregations being composed of men and women of widely divergent creeds and religious beliefs, but all finding helpful messages in the sermons of Dr. Wise.

Dr. Wise comes to Atlanta on Tuesday, February 7, to give his famous lecture, "Jew and Gentile," at the auditorium. People familiar with his lecture work, say that he seems to sense, instinctively, the mental attitude of his audiences and to deliberately seek to express views that will surprise them and shock them into opposition. It is rarely that he completes a lecture without a challenge to debate from among his hearers.

The lecture in Atlanta is given under the auspices of the Junior Hadassah and all receipts will be devoted to the training work among young orphans in Palestine to which this Atlanta organization of prominent young women devote their efforts. Tickets may be secured from any member of the organization and will be on sale for a few days before the lecture date at Cable Piano company, Phillips & Crew Piano company, Jacobs' Pharmacy main store and other downtown points.

PLAN NEW EXAMS FOR PROHI AGENTS IN CIVIL SERVICE

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—The prohibition bureau has been advised by the civil service commission that new examinations will be held for some of the prohibition positions because of the large number of failures on the first tests.

The commission finally yielded up the pleas of the federal prohibition officials, judges of federal courts, attorneys and marshals, who contended that unless another examination was given, some of the best prohibition administrators and agents would be lost to the service.

New examinations for administrators will be held in the districts of Georgia-Florida, Missouri-Arkansas, Texas, Nevada-Northern California, and Arizona-Southern California.

Another examination also will be held for assistant prohibition administrators in 14 districts, including Maryland-District of Columbia, Virginia-North Carolina-South Carolina, Georgia-Florida, Mississippi - Louisiana-Alabama, Kentucky-Tennessee, Kansas-Nebraska-Oklahoma and Texas.

MILWAUKEE CLUB HELD UP BY GANG AND MACHINE GUNS

Milwaukee, Wis., January 28.—(AP)—Ten men, believed to be Chicago gangsters, who boasted of being armed with machine guns, held up members of the Wisconsin Athletic club, shortly after midnight, slugged one man, cut telephone wires and escaped with currency and jewelry estimated at from $10,000 to $12,000.

The club is in the heart of the downtown district, but police did not learn of the robbery until almost 6 a. m. The entire detective force was assigned to hunt for the robbers, who escaped in automobiles.

The men forced their way into the club, lined up the 25 or 30 members and leisurely robbed them.

CAMPBELL IS PROMOTED BY INSURANCE CONCERN

H. W. Campbell, of Atlanta, oldest general agent, in point of years of service, for the International Life Insurance company, of St. Louis, has been promoted to the office of state supervisor of Georgia, effective February 1, according to a statement issued by W. F. Grantges, first vice president and general manager of agencies.

Mr. Campbell became a general agent for the company in 1909, the year it was founded, and his success in the production field is said to be responsible for his promotion. The announcement was made prior to Mr. Grantges' departure for Memphis, where he met representatives of the company in Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana in a meeting on January 26-27.

C. M. T. Camp Applications Will Be Accepted February 1

Major General Richmond P. Davis, commanding the fourth corps area, announces that applications to the total of 5,200 for this summer's C. M. T. camps will be accepted beginning Wednesday, February 1. These camps are for thirty days, beginning June 17, at the following centers:

Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., near Chattanooga, Tenn., 600 cavalry; Fort Screven, Ga., near Savannah, 300 infantry; Camp McClellan, Ala., near Anniston, 700 infantry; Fort Bragg, N. C., near Fayetteville, 1,000 field artillery; Fort Moultrie, S. C., near Charleston, 800 infantry; Fort Barrancas, Fla., near Pensacola, 600 coast artillery.

Young men of acceptable character between the ages of 17 and 24, for the basic corps, from Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, North and South Carolina, comprising the fourth corps area, will be given camp life, supervised physical exercise and sports and training in morals and American citizenship at government expense.

A young man who can pass the required physical examination and is of good moral character, as certified to by a reputable citizen who knows him, may attend these camps. If he is under 21 the consent of his parent, guardian or nearest relative is required.

Training at Camps.

The training at these camps stresses citizenship, self-reliance, initiative, team-work, good fellowship and how to work hard and effectively. Moral and religious influence is kept at high standards. Attendance means no obligation for future military service.

Mornings are devoted to military training, calisthenics and instruction in citizenship, hygiene, first aid and marksmanship. Afternoons are usually set aside for such athletic sports as baseball, swimming, wrestling, tennis and track. Every man must compete in some form. The evenings are devoted to vesper services, moving pictures, concerts and other types of entertainment.

Scholarships and credits toward degrees are awarded annually by many leading institutions over the United States for camp attendance. Many high schools throughout the United States also give credit.

Aid to Commission.

Successful camp attendance provides a stepping stone to a commission as an officer in the organized reserves but the primary mission of the camps is to build up the manhood of the nation, upon which, in a national emergency, the preservation of our institutions must depend.

On account of limited funds, the young men accepted will be sent to camps nearest their homes as follows:

In Georgia young men from the counties of Catoosa, Chattooga, Dade, Fannin, Gilmer, Gordon, Murray, Rabun, Towns, Union, Walker and Whitfield go to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. From the counties of Decatur, Grady, Thomas and Brook they go to Fort Barrancas, Fla. From the counties of Franklin, Madison, Oglethorpe, Greene, Hancock, Baldwin, Wilkinson, Wiggs, Houston, Dooley, Crisp, Worth, Colquitt and counties east thereof they go to Fort Moultrie, S. C., and from all other counties they will be assigned to Camp McClellan.

Home Exposition To Demonstrate Beauty, Economy

The most complete demonstration of what a modern home can be, from the standpoint of beauty, convenience and economy of labor, will be made at the Southern Building and Household exposition, to be held at the auditorium March 19 to 24, it was pointed out Saturday by Baxter Maddox, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the show.

"The members of the Junior Chamber expect that every available bit of display space will be taken," said Mr. Maddox. "The manner in which the announcement has been received makes us confident that the exposition will be a huge success.

"Ideas of interior decorations have advanced so rapidly, and improvements in household equipment are being made so frequently, that it is hard for the planner of a home to keep up with them, and we believe that by assembling under one roof all that goes to make up a home at once beautiful and convenient we can render a great service."

One of Atlanta's leading firms is planning an exhibit of room interiors, decorated in the most advanced style and furnished with handsome furnishings. Another is at work on the idea for a kitchen which will offer the last word in electrical equipment and other conveniences. Building material dealers are arranging for exhibits of the many new materials which are being used for modern homebuilding.

Proceeds from the show will be devoted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce to bringing to Atlanta in 1930 the national convention of the organization.

Airship Succeeds In Dock Landing At 15-Knot Speed

Washington, January 28.—(AP)—Naval officials were able today to explain in more detail the feat of the airship Los Angeles in making a test standing yesterday on the deck of the airplane carrier Saratoga while 90 miles off Newport.

The landing was carried out, it was explained, when both the giant aircraft and the new airplane carrier headed into the wind at 15 knots an hour each. Three lines were dropped from the forward part of the dirigible to the aft deck of the Saratoga which were seized by members of the ship's crew. The forward part of the dirigible was brought near the deck until the control car actually rested on the broad, level deck.

Although most of the dirigible extended out over the sea in a manner in which it projects from the mooring mast of the Patoka, it was possible for members of the crew to reach the deck of the Saratoga and members of crews of the crafts could have been exchanged. Although it was not known for certain here whether members of the Los Angeles went to the deck of the Saratoga, it was thought probable by naval officers.

DE VALERA DENIES IRISH PROSPERITY IN CHICAGO TALK

Chicago, January 28.—(AP)—Eamon de Valera, Irish republican leader, was the guest of the Association for the Recognition of the Irish republic today, just one week after Chicago had feted William T. Cosgrave, present chief executive of Ireland.

Ireland is neither "free nor prosperous," De Valera declared in an interview and quoted extensive figures in proof of what he termed the failure of the Irish Free State. He declined to comment on the recent visit of President Cosgrave.

Women and Sport

By Gina Lombroso

Author of "The Soul of Woman" and Other Novels

The recent attempts by Mrs. Francis W. Grayson and Miss Ruth Elder to fly across the Atlantic Ocean have awakened feminine ambitions. Women have felt themselves touched in their sex pride. The feminist journals have seized upon the occasion to incite women not only to fly across the ocean, but to take a more serious part in all the trials, all the competitions in the various fields of sport, that are multiplying every day.

Naturally, this incitement has called forth protests, and the champions of each camp have appealed to me to put my opinion in the balance.

The feminists say that as in "The Soul of Woman" I maintain that woman is very audacious, more audacious than man, she is made for aviation, where courage plays so large a part, and that she should dedicate herself to all sports as much as a man. They have added that, since I maintain that life is in the course of becoming more difficult for woman, I ought to be in favor of her participating in those sports that develop courage, so needful for the daily combats with life.

The anti-feminists maintain that since I am opposed to woman gaining prestige, I ought to be opposed to woman taking part in any sports at all, aviation included.

Neither group has understood my ideas very well.

Things New and Old About the Bible

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga.

THERE is the true attitude of soul. It is a trust in love of God who transforms the disappointments of life into discipline of character.

Goethe says, "I never had an affliction which was not turned into a poem."

The finest graces of life are won out of conflict. We learn joy in the fellowship of suffering with Jesus Christ.

We learn love by victory over the wrongs of those that hate us. We learn peace by clinging to Christ in the storm.

We learn faithfulness by loyalty to duty in the midst of loss and hardship.

We learn kindness by returning good for evil.
We learn temperance by victory over appetite and passion.
We learn meekness and patience amid the evils of life.
We learn liberality by crucifying selfishness.

In "The Toilers of the Sea," Victor Hugo gives a long account of how Gilliat rescued the wrecked vessel, the Durande.

He seemed to be pitted against a world of contrary forces. It seemed a hopeless matter for one unaided man to rescue the valuable machinery from complete wreck. But Gilliat by a series of skillful contrivances, and by his daring and genius made the Titanic forces of nature his servants.

The wild waves and the fierce hurricane, and the rocks between which the vessel was sunk, and the power of gravity, and the tides were all yoked together in such a way as to raise and rescue the sunken vessel.

It is so in human life. We may become master of the fierce elements that rage about us, until the life is constantly lifted by the forces that would destroy.

It is not a visionary fancy, but a sober fact that "all things work together for good to those who love God."

All the events and circumstances of life may be turned into goodness. Man is to preserve that spiritual attitude of trust in which all the experiences of life shall work for his good.

It is a profound truth that should bring to the faithful soul ceaseless comfort and an unruffled peace that through grace he is master of all the forces of earth and heaven, and that every storm that beats against him, shall only raise him to a higher height.

"For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared to the glory which shall be revealed in us."

There is no weight of world calamities that can crush the faithful spirit.

There are no foes, but may be made to fight for us.

With a right attitude of soul we may always be more than conquerors.

All the things that happen to us may be transmitted into moral and spiritual good.

We can trust His love until all things shall be made clear.

"Even so Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight."

"And now men see not the bright light that is in the clouds, but the wind passeth by and cleanseth them."

No little child has ever come from God and stayed awhile in some home without making glad the home and leaving behind many peaceable fruits of righteousness and takes away shallow and trifling views of life.

Jean Ingelow has given us the truth in poetic form:

"Sorrows humanize our race;
Tears are the showers that fertilize this world,
And memory of things precious keepeth warm,
The heart that once did hold them.

They are poor that have lost nothing; they are poorer far who losing, have forgotten; they most poor of all, who lose and wish they might forget."

More agonizing than this kind of sorrow is the living sorrow in blighted homes where sons and daughters have been a bitter disappointment and a heart-breaking tragedy, and parents with saddened wail over some Absalom say, "Would God I had died for thee" or would God he had died in his childhood." But even this gives an insight into the heart of the eternal Father, whose children we all are and whose heart we have grieved. The best and holiest example of piety are such as have been tried and purified in the crucible of sorrow.

The discipline of sorrow is seen in the fact that only sufferers have made any lasting contribution to our world.

There is not a single great truth that blesses human life today but was given to the world by a great sufferer.

Job, but for his suffering, would never have expressed the immortal hope, nor reached the calm assurance, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

The sublime heights of St. Paul were reached in his prison epistles, and St. John entered into the vision of the eternal city from his exile in Patmos.

Take from the Bible the books that were written in prison, in captivity and in anguish of spirit, and you would remove the very heart of the revelation. Take from the world's literature the contribution of those whose minds have been chastened by sorrow and nothing would be left worth reading.

Take from the hymnals the contributions of those who have given us in song what they have learned in sorrow and nothing would be left worth singing.

Fannie Crosby became blind at six weeks of age.

She once said, "I am the happiest soul living. If I had not been deprived of my sight, I would never have received so good an education, nor have cultivated so fine a memory, nor have been able to do good to so many people."

Take out of the world the priceless legacies left by sweet suffering spirits and the world would be too poor to live in.

"They are the world's great Altar Stairs,
That slope through darkness up to God,"
"They climbed the steep ascent of heaven
Through peril, toil and pain,
Oh! God, to us may grace be given,
To follow in their train."

George Matheson, the blind Scotch preacher was told by his physician that sight would soon be gone. He went to the one whom he loved most and she rejected his love.

Alone in darkness and desolation of spirit he wrote the lines:

"O Love, that wilt not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in Thee,
I give Thee back the life I owe,
That in Thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be.

O light that followest all my way,
I yield my flickering torch to Thee,
My heart restores its borrowed ray,
That in Thy sunshine's blaze its day
May brighter, fairer be.

O Joy, that seekest me through pain
I cannot close my heart to Thee;
I trace the rainbow through the rain,
And feel the promise is not vain,
That morn shall tearless be.

O Cross, that liftest up my head,
I dare not ask to fly from Thee,
I lay in dust life's glory dead,
And from the ground the blossoms red
Life that shall endless be."

Broadway Banter

FORNEY WYLY

BURSTING into tears at a play is hardly in your correspondend's line and I greeted with much derision the report that I would go dewy around the eyes at John Van Druten's new play, "Diversion." Yet it seems I broke my drouth of years and, yes found these old eyes brimming over on more than one occasion.

"Diversion" takes up the age-old story of a young boy's first love for a woman much older than himself—a glamorous actress who finds him amusing for a few weeks and then dismisses him from her mind. And how he goes on worshiping her, little by little ruining his life until he finally strangles her and kills himself—this is what makes up the play "Diversion." It is the work of the men who wrote "Young Woodley," and apparently Mr. Van Druten is quite hipped on the subject of young men loving autumnal ladies. In "Diversion" he again writes with the same true and direct touch which made "Woodley" so popular. I doubt if "Diversion" will be the hit the former play was, but then Woodley in that play was enacted by America's pet, Glenn Hunter. The boy in "Diversion" is played by Richard Bird, that excellent young English actor who played "Fanatics" here earlier in the season. It is largely due to the way Mr. Bird plays those heart-breaking scenes that you find your eyes moist. Cathleen Nesbitt is magnificent as the enticing actress.

Go to "Diversion" and treat yourself to a nice cry.

There has been a raft of Phelans hereabouts recently. To begin with, Mrs. Ulric Atkinson finds herself in the unique position of living in New York without ever being here. Since she and Ulric came here to take up their home, they've been away almost all of the time. They've landed back in town now, however, and were on hand when McGovan Phelan Goldsmith and Wickliffe blew into town for the automobile show. Then Palmer Dallis has come up to join the Atkinsons. When I last saw Mrs. Atkinson and Palmer they were directing their energies and charms toward securing two seats to Katherine Wilson's opening in "A Distant Drum," which is to take place the night of the day I must mail this to you. I have always felt Mrs. Atkinson, if she could have been sure nobody was looking, might have sneaked off and gone on the stage one of these days. Next week I'll tell you all about Miss Wilson, the play and the Phelans being present—for I know they got there, don't you?

"A Free Soul," as its name might suggest to you, is food for the Snappy Stories set. After you admit the play is pretty trashy at best, you have got to admit it rather holds your interest. It is an adaptation by Willard Mack of a novel by Adele Rogers St. Johns—isn't she the one who seems to have three or four hundred stories in every magazine every month. In "A Free Soul" the saucy heroine has been given to understand by a lax father that she may live her life as she chooses. She openly admits that while she would possibly prefer marriage, that wouldn't hold her back if she ever met a man she really loved. After a few thrilling acts—and again I repeat interesting ones—we reach a trial scene in the last one. It is quite evident from this scene that Miss Kay Johnson, the heroine, has been devoting quite a lot of time to the tabloids of late. For in her appearance, her costumes and her general conduct, she bore an uncanny resemblance to the late Ruth Snyder.

"White Eagle" is the name they've given to the poor, dear old "Squaw Man," now that they've swamped him with dancing and music. It is with no attempt to appear unconvincingly young that I state "The Squaw Man" was before my time. Maybe just ten or fifteen minutes, but anyway, before. So I don't know whether this high-kicking version sticks to the original script or not, but I feel that it must. Rudolf Friml's music for the first time disappoints me. There is no melody in "White Eagle," for which he should be particularly elated over having written.

As for the dazzling and colorful costumes, I think James Reynolds has gone just a little too far.

I don't know whether the screen version of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" has reached you as yet or not. You may have read of the nation-wide search the producers conducted to secure the perfect girls to portray the gold-digging Lorelei and the unrefined Dorothy before the camera. Ruth Lee Taylor, who has frisked a great part of her life away in Mack Sennett comedies, was finally allotted Lorelei and a girl named Alice White became the screen Dorothy.

All this is leading up to the fact that your correspondent has just had lunch with the cinematic Lorelei, which, I suppose, is the highest one can get in this life. She seems to take her selection quite seriously but never for an instant tiresomely. I mean only that her conversation is plentifully besprinkled with such Loosisms a "a girl like I," etc. Not one bangle did she obtain from me and the fact that she would waste a whole luncheon hour on a gentlemen like I was the only discordant note in the famous Miss Lee's character.

Vanity of Vanities

The Will Gave Him Buckram Place and St. James' Square Was Left to Her. In Order to Trade Houses These Cousins Hit on a Unique Scheme.

THE only three living descendants of Richard Stone Ludlow were gathered about the great table which had been made to his order in the reign of William IV. One sat there of right, for he had inherited the table as Richard Stone Ludlow's son; the others sat there because their host, their great-uncle, had asked them to dine and because, when he asked them to dine, they always went.

George Stone Ludlow was eighty-nine and a true pillar of the state. He was the son of his father, and everything that he touched derived from him that gray magic of stability which had sprung from his grandfather's loins. Solid, regular, imperturbable, nothing could shake the Ludlows or anything that was theirs. Merchants of the city of London, their name at the foot of a letter turned the paper to sheepskin, the ink to blood; residents of St. James' square, they had come to leaven even that standard loaf; squires of a Dorsetshire parish, their word was law.

The threefold tradition had passed from father to son and had stood immaculate for over a hundred years. Men used to say that the only things that the war had left as they were were the pyramids of Giza and George Stone Ludlow and all his works.

The man was a figure-head, proverbial, commanded a reverence which was honored behind his back; perhaps his greatest achievement was that he had gained and held the confidence of his great-nephew and niece.

The cloth having been drawn, the butler approached Miss Edgecomb and offered her cigarettes.

The girl looked at her host.

"Is this allowed, sir?" she said.

The old man smiled and nodded.

"Tonight, yes. I trust you will stay at table and drink your coffee with us."

"I don't have to smoke, sir."

"I know that. I'd like you to."

Natalie Edgecomb did as she was bid.

Her cousin, Jonathan Baldric, sat back in his chair.

"Which reminds me," he said. "A week ago I sent you some cigarettes."

"What ever made you do that" said Natalie.

"I can't think," said Jonathan. "Did you get them?"

Natalie nodded.

"I rather liked them," she said.

Her great-uncle turned to Jonathan.

"I'm sure," he said, smiling, "that's all you wanted to know."

"I suppose so," said Jonathan. "But you must admit, sir, that her manners leave much to be desired."

The old man laughed.

"The true woman's always do. I see a night club was raided on Monday last. I hope you weren't there."

"I cannot tell a lie, sir," said Natalie. "I left ten minutes too soon."

"And I, sir," said Jonathan, "arrived ten minutes too late."

"Then all's well," said their great-uncle. "But you musn't run things too fine. O, by the way, I have to send to Paris tomorrow. Can my messenger do anything there for either of you?"

"He can bring me some scent, sir," said Natalie. "And six pairs of silk stockings, if he can get them through."

Her cousin raised his eyes to heaven.

"I should like two cigars," he said meekly. "Of course, he must declare them to the customs and pay whatever they ask."

"That's right," said Natalie swiftly. "And all the time he can have the [illegible]."

The old man laughed. Coffee was served. The door closed behind the servants and the three were alone.

For a little light conversation held its own, the old man taking his share but no more than that; with eighty years of memories to draw on, no single reminiscence passed his lips. George Stone Ludlow was an excellent host.

"At length: "Now I want to talk business," he said, "for ten minutes of time. When I leave this room I get sleepy, as you very well know; and then, again, business should be talked about a table and not from an easy chair."

He paused there and, after a moment's hesitation, took a cigarette from the box and lighted it thoughtfully. The act was significant; George Stone Ludlow had not been known to smoke for twenty years.

For a moment he inhaled luxuriously.

Then: "It's like this," he said

He turned to the sideboard, and said, "are you quite sure you can't play with some ginger-beer?"

"I'm eighty-nine years old—rising ninety. And, as men don't live forever, before many months I shall go to my long home. Your great-grandfather had three children, of which I was one. Had he been asked to predict how many descendants of his would be living today, I daresay he would have said 'about thirty.' As we know, he would have been wrong. He has only three. Soon he will have only two.

"I know it's the fashion to mock at a man of substance, a man who behaves himself and honestly holds what he has. His regularity is sneered at; his belief in law and order is pitied; because he expects those who have passed their word to keep it, as he does himself, he is abused. But I think that, if you examine the circumstances of his traducers, you will always find that their quarrel with him is personal. Either they do not behave themselves or do not honestly hold that which they have. Frequently they have nothing. Or law and order are distasteful to them. Perhaps at some time or other they have not kept their word. I don't think I'm wrong in this. I have found the personal reason over and over again.

"I have, therefore, no shame in being a man of substance, and, though I'm not proud of it, for I see in it no reason for pride. I believe that men and women of substance high and low, are what this country needs. A decent, orderly home, inhabited and maintained according to the means of its owner, is a rock upon which a statesman can build and points a moral which agitators find it hard to refute. The bigger the home, of course, the more its influence; but a crofter's cottage can offer as sound foundation as any county seat.

"Very well. My father made two such homes and he handed them on to me; it was his wish that I should inhabit and maintain them, as I have done; before very long one of you will be the mistress of one and the other master of the other. You will each have the means to keep them—indeed, you will have much more, for I'm very rich. Between you, you will share my fortune—upon condition that you use and maintain your homes. Should either of you fail in that, his or her home and share will at once revert to the crown.

"And now let's go to the library. I have a lot of new records, and I'd like you to see what they're worth."

The cousins left, as usual, at half past ten.

As the car which bore them stole out of the family square, "He's a great old fellow," said Jonathan. "I'm damned proud to be his kin."

"There's no one like him," said Natalie, shakily.

"Quite so," said Jonathan, thoughtfully. "No one, I—I wonder who's going to get which."

"O, you brute," said Natalie. "Hardly out of his house, full of his wine, sprawling about his car—and you begin to pick over—"

"Easy over the cobbles," said her cousin. "Who's pickin' over what? And I'm nothing like full of his wine. I wish I was."

"It's indecent," said Natalie. "You know it is. For no reason on earth, you're going to be left half a kingdom, and you can't even wait till you're home to try on the crown."

"The correct answer to that," said her cousin, "is very short. I hope you don't know it, but I think you probably do." Natalie choked. "Yes, I thought so. And now let's get this straight. For no reason on earth, you're going to be left half a kingdom. Are you going to ask me to believe that you don't care which half it is?"

"I suppose you mean that you want St. James' square."

Jonathan Baldric sighed.

"I don't," he said. "I mean that since half-past nine you've never stopped prayin' that you get Buckram place."

Natalie shrugged her white shoulders.

"I shall," she said shortly. "It's really hardly likely that he'll leave it to you."

"Why not?" said Jonathan.

"He knows you loathe it," said Natalie, "that its beauty, its peace, its traditions mean nothing to you."

"Well, I'm banking on getting it," said Jonathan. "I'm going to roof in the terrace an'—"

"What?"

"My dear, you can do what you like with St. James' square."

"Of course he'll leave me Buckram," said Natalie. "Knowing how much I love it, it would almost amount to an insult to leave it to you."

"O, feel the brakes!" said Jonathan. "Feel the brakes! An' who's tryin' on the crown now? An' climbin' up on her chaser, because she's not sure of its shape."

Natalie bit a red lip.

After a moment she put out a little hand.

"I withdraw," she said softly. "I—hope very much I'll get Buckram. I can't help that. But—"

"Tears for two," said Jonathan, putting her hand to his lips. "Cool hands you've got, haven't you? And very well shaped. I don't wonder he's doing you proud. O, an' look at that leg."

"Be quiet," gurgled Natalie, sliding her arm through his. "He's doing us proud because he likes us—both, and because we've never slimed round him, but just shown him decent respect."

"That's his fault," said Jonathan. "And I like our dinners together. He's human; it's like hobnobbin' with a Van Dyck or drinkin' out of a flagon that Lamerie made. Besides, I like seeing you there. You know. Apart from the crowd. It's like—"

"Now do be careful," said Natalie. "These metaphors."

Her cousin frowned.

"Respectability," he said, "is devastatingly dull. If it weren't, I should be respectable. But your presence leavens the lump. I've been wholly respectable tonight, but I haven't been dull."

Vanity of Vanities

"That," said Natalie, "is nothing to do with me. Any woman—"

"And then you're wrong," said Jonathan. "'Owdareyou' Bearskin's all right; but put her at George Stone's table and all her paint'd come off. She wouldn't fit, my lady; none of 'em would. But you're at your best."

Natalie squeezed his arm.

"If," she said sweetly, "if by any chance—I don't think it's likely—but, if by any chance I did get St. James' square, if the law will allow us, Jonathan, will you promise to swap?"

"My dear," said her cousin, "will I promise to back a winner whenever I can?"

"What ever happens? I mean, he may live for years—I jolly well hope he does. And you may be married, and your wife may fancy sticking to Buckram place."

"I promise. I know what I want. Besides, I shall simply tell her I loved you first."

"Another wrecked home," sighed Natalie. "However, you've been very sweet."

The man looked round and down at the eager face.

"There are times," he said, "when I can deny you nothing. This i one of them. I know you set out to beguile me, but I've allowed for that. You're amazingly attractive, you know; but ten times out of ten you've got the notice boards out. You know, 'Visitors are warned not to touch.'"

Natalie nodded.

"That's right. I'm a woman of substance. I hold what I have."

Jonathan sighed.

"At any rate," said, "I'm your cousin. You can't alter that."

"I don't want to—tonight," said the girl.

"Because I've done as you asked?"

"Perhaps. I don't know." She turned a glowing face. "And I'm sorry about the boards, but that's my way."

"It is a pity," said the man. "I mean—"

"Here's the club," said Natalie swiftly, withdrawing her arm.

Jonathan shrugged his shoulders.

"After you, the deluge," he said. He sighed again. "Well, well . . . An' there's 'Owdareyou.'"

Five minutes later he was dancing with Dorothy Bearskin.

That Natalie loved her cousin there can be no doubt. Jonathan Baldric was a very attractive man. Lazy, good tempered, fearless, he sloped through life, doing all that he did handsomely, taking all things as they came, and changing the rough to smooth with his pleasant, infectious smile. Add that he was very good looking and you will see that the ball of feminine friendship was at his feet. He kicked it along skilfully, kept his head and his heart, stayed unspoiled.

But if he kicked skilfully, he kicked the delicate ball, and that was the sum of the trouble with Natalie Edgecomb. She knew that he liked her, suspected that he loved her—and continually pushed him away. She could not bring herself to give an opening to the man to whom openings were being given by every one else. The others made themselves cheap; determined not to do this, she made herself too dear. She wanted all of the man, wished him to single her out and let the others go hang. This he must do—for all the world to see. The world must see that Natalie Edgecomb at least had not shown him the way.

So she hung out her boards for him, as for every one else. Jonathan respected their warnings, naturally enough; he could hardly be expected to divine that he alone was to ignore their burden. The position was inviting disaster as plain as could be.

If Natalie played her cards badly, Jonathan played none at all. He looked upon his cousin and loved her, frowned at the notice boards, sighed, and returned to his ball. Only their blood relation prevented the gulf between them from becoming a sea. And once their great-uncle was dead . . .

George Stone Ludlow died in his sleep on a starlit midsummer eve, some three months after the dinner at which he had told his two relatives what to expect.

Not until the obsequies were over did each of the cousins receive a copy of the will.

This was commendably brief.

By its provisions J. G. Forsyth, solicitor, was appointed sole trustee; Jonathan Baldric became master of Buckram place and Natalie Edgecomb mistress of 37 St. James square; each of the legatees was to receive the income of four hundred thousand pounds, so long as they "regularly inhabited and faithfully maintained" their respective properties.

* * * *

Natalie stood at a window which commanded a slice of Mayfair and admitted the roar of the battle which the traffic continually waged.

Her mourning suited her well, declared her beauty, insisted on her exquite shape. The pink and white magic of her skin, the warm gold of her hair, the slim perfection of her legs were always notable; the black showed three several wonders, which a man having seen would remember so long as he lived.

The girl stood very still, grave-eyed, hearing the warfare of the traffic and remembering the stately silence of Buckram place.

A bell throbbed and she passed to the telephone.

"Yes."

"Mr. Baldric to see you, madam."

"Show him up, please," said Natalie.

A moment later Jonathan entered the room.

He laid down his hat and stick, lowered himself into a chair, and closed his eyes.

"Behold me aged," he said. "Too old at twenty-nine. And I don't mind if I never see Lincoln's Inn Fields again. They may have been all right before the lawyers blew in. But now." He shuddered. "There's doom in the very air, documents in the trees, writs in the stones, and—"

"What on earth do you mean?" said Natalie.

"My dear," said her cousin, "if you have hopes, prepare to scrap them now. Forsyth was civility itself, and about as helpful as a hangman explaining the drop. The will's like a slab of cast iron on a snowy day. Monkey with it and it bites. I'm the comic squire of Buckram and you're the lovely chatelaine of St. James' square. And nothing this side of witchcraft can cross it out."

"Did Forsyth say how much of each year we'd have to reside?"

"Nine perishin' months," said Jonathan over the rim of his glass. "I bit and I scratched for six, but he wouldn't budge."

Natalie took her seat upon the arm of a chair.

"When are we to start?" she demanded.

"As soon as may be," said her cousin. "The servants don't know where they stand. Whether they're sacked or kept on is for us to decide. An' the bailiff keeps wirin' from Buckram about some right of way. I've no idea what it means, but it seems there's a horse pond involved."

"That's right," said Natalie. "You'd better go down tonight. Odd Acre's always watered at Firefly Splash. The people who've bought Jay's Hanger are trying to close the lane on the left hand side. They've not a shadow of right. The lane's been open for twenty-five years or more. And the water at Firefly's better than anywhere else. But you don't want a lawsuit, and so you must snuff them out."

Her cousin regarded her dazedly.

Presently he set down his glass.

"Can't be done," he said, weakly. "Georgraphy was always beyond me, and—"

"But you must," cried Natalie. "You can't sit down and quietly watch an outrage committed on one of your farms. Besides, its not faithful maintenance."

"My dear, it's no good. I can't put over the grand seigneur and father-of-'is-people, and I'm blinkin' well not going to try. More. I shall have plenty of chances of making a blue based fool of myself without mixin' it with my neighbor over a scent I can't smell. If you like to go and represent me—"

"How can I?" said Natalie. "Besides, if I'm to enter St. James' square, I must see a builder at once."

"A builder," said Jonathan. "Why?"

"To fill in the basement," said Natalie. "I know it's damp. And a ground floor kitchen—"

"I refuse," said her cousin excitedly. "I mean, I protest. That isn't maintenance; that's destruction—layin' indecent waste. You can't have a kitchen on the street in St. James' square. And what about all the wine?"

"The workmen can move it."

"The workmen?" screamed Jonathan. "The work— O Moses' button boots!"

"What's the matter?" said Natalie.

"Angina pectoris!" said her cousin, covering his eyes. "That cellar at St. James' square is holy ground. It's not a cellar at all, it's a treasury. It ought to be scheduled as an ancient monument. There are bins there you oughtn't to talk about, except in church."

"I don't propose to talk about them," said Natalie. "But I'm not going to settle down in a house that's damp. Besides, as I was saying, I don't like a basement kitchen. If they take down the library wall—"

"I can't bear it," said Jonathan wildly. "There's the finest residence in London, absolutely perfect from bottom to top, and you want to turn it into something between a gun emplacement and a railway buffet. Besides, it has memories for me."

"What about Buckram?" said Natalie. "How do you think I feel to see you letting that lovely estate go west?"

"It's entirely different," cried Jonathan. "What's the closing of a one-eyed mule run compared with the sacking of a shrine?"

"It's all the world to Odd Acre," flashed Natalie. "the second best farm you've got. They wouldn't swap the water at Firefly for the wine at St. James' square."

Jonathan loosened his collar and wiped the sweat from his face. Then he rose and passed to a window, to look down upon the street. Presently he took a deep breath.

"There is a way out," he said quietly, "a clean way out of the pass. I didn't mean to mention it, for fear you would take offense. But I laid it before Forsyth, to see what he'd say, and he confirmed my opinion that if ever this course was taken the will couldn't stand in the way."

Natalie said nothing, and after a while he went on.

"I mean our marriage. That would make you mistress of Buckram, and—and we could discuss the—the improvements at St. James' square. And—well, of course I shouldn't bother you. You'd spend as much time at Buckram as ever you pleased, and—well, you'd know where to find me if ever you wanted me down."

"A marriage of convenience?" said Natalie.

"I suppose so," said Jonathan slowly. "I—I should be very proud of my wife. And she would have nothing to fear."

"Are you content to do this?"

The man turned.

"Very well content," he said. "I've everything to gain and nothing to lose."

Natalie raised her eyebrows.

"Let's keep on the ground," she said. "This is a business transaction and it won't look pretty dressed up. You're ready to sell yourself if I'll do the same?"

The man shook his head.

"I'm afraid I'm not," he said slowly. "What makes the deal possible for me is that I'm dealing with you. It's right that you should know that. I've been half in love with you for more than two years. That I've never got any farther has not been my fault; but, under the circumstances, perhaps it's as well. So, you see, I'm not selling myself and it's rather a one-sided deal.

Natalie rose to her feet, crossed to a table and took up a cigarette. She did this in self-defense. Her brain was rebelling, refused to obey her will. She wished to reply to her cousin, instead she could only dwell upon what he had said.

"Half in love with you for more than two years . . . not my fault . . ."

As she lighted her cigarette, "I hope very much," said the man, "that you'll take no account of that. You needn't even believe it. I probably shouldn't have told you if I'd been a business man. And, as I've said, I shan't bother you. I only wished you to know that, if you came in on the deal, you'd be paying considerably higher than I." He took a deep breath. "And now will you fire me out, or shall I go?"

Natalie's brain cleared.

"To be perfectly honest," she said, "I think you deserve another drink."

Jonathan raised his eyes to heaven.

"I wish," he said, "there was dust on your little shoes. Then I could make a light lunch." He turned to the sideboard. 'Are you quite sure you can't play with some ginger beer?"

"I'll try," said Natalie. "And thank you very much for breaking my fall. I should hate to have been married entirely for my '34 port."

Her cousin looked over his shoulder, bottle in hand.

"Happily," he said, "I am not a vain man. Otherwise . . . I mean—well, I'd rather be married for my cellar than Blowfly Splash. By the way, will you go down?"

Natalie nodded.

"But I must have a warrant," she said.

"Of course," said Jonathan. "The beautiful bearer having become my betrothed, I hereby——".

"An engagement ring would be simpler."

"But, what a brain," said the man. "I'll seek one at once. Are you above rubies?"

"Not the best ones," said Natalie.

What Has Happened to Justice?

Fiend Slew Little Yetta Abramowitz On Rooftop—A Figure Against the Sky and Then All Was Darkness

JUSTICE has scored a notable triumph in apprehending the murderer of Marion Parker, of Los Angeles. But what has happened to justice in the case of little Yetta Abramowitz, the New York child slain eight months ago?

Here was a fiend-slaying atrocious in the extreme. From what little evidence we have, the child had been stalked for days before she was finally enticed onto the roof of an apartment house near her home in the bronx, ostensibly to view the searchlights from the fleet in the Hudson.

Once on the roof the fiend attacked her, then brutally killed her. The wounds indicated that he had seized the child by the feet and dashed her head against the brick coping.

One person witnessed this ogre at his work, heard the child's screams, saw the man run. For a brief instant the scene was outlined against the illuminated sky, and then fell a darkness which never lifted. Justice groped for a while and then gave up.

The murder of little Marian Parker in Los Angeles recalls a "fiend slaying" in New York some months ago even more appalling, in at least one respect, than this recent western atrocity. Terrible as was the killing of Marion Parker, the death of Yetta Abramowitz may be rated as more serious for this reason: the slayer of Yetta Abramowitz has never been caught.

The late Yetta Abramowitz, who was killed by degenerate fiend.

Yetta Abramowitz was 12 years old, the same age as the Parker child. She was the next to the youngest of the five children of Sarah and Louis Abramowitz, who lived at 883 East 165th street, the bronx, in the heart of a thickly populated section.

Not a strong child, she was habitually mild and quiet, and everybody loved her. Her parents, her brothers and sisters idolized her; she was their angel. And her teacher at P. S. 23 loved her, too. Yetta, according to the teacher, had the best singing voice in her class. She had been chosen, last May, to participate in the health play at the school, to take place June 1. She was going to be one of the ladies-in-waiting to the Queen of Health.

Yetta and her sister Rebecca, who was 13, had planned the pretty white dress Yetta was to wear.

What with her school activities, and making clothes and things for her beloved doll, and helping her mother around the house, Yetta was a very busy child.

And she was too trusting, too completely innocent, to attach any particular significance to the fact that a man had followed her several times during the weeks of late April and early May.

Always Following Her.

That a man did follow her was established later. Several times during these weeks the child visited a neighbor who lived on Southern boulevard. Yetta had spoken about it. "Gee!" she had said, "every time I go down the street he's following me!" But the neighbor gave the matter no serious thought.

No more than did the teacher who turned Marion Parker over to the engaging young man who said Mr. Parker had been hurt and was calling for his little girl.

So we get the appalling picture—a child with a doll tripping happily down the street, singing in her sweet way one of the songs she had learned in school. And in the background a beast who stalked her . . .

Mrs. Abramowitz last saw her daughter about 5 o'clock on the afternoon of May 14, a Saturday. The mother gave Yetta twenty cents with which to buy a tooth brush. The child did not return. Presently darkness came, and still she did not return. The family became worried but did not think of notifying the police.

The mother went out among the neighbors. But they had not seen Yetta.

One person, however, did hear the child, if she did not see her. That person was Mrs. E. E. Tibbs, of 1016 Simpson street.

Mrs. Tibbs had been to the store and after she came home she took her cat up on the roof of her apartment house to give it a little walk before retiring. It was about 9:30 o'clock in the evening and it had just started to drizzle. Mrs. Tibbs held a newspaper over her head while she walked back and forth.

Beams of Light.

From the west the sky was illuminated by powerful searchlights—the fleet was in the Hudson. The woman watched the beams of light sweep across the heavens.

Suddenly on the roof of the house directly opposite she heard a child screaming. The child uttered one word over and over:

"Mamma! Mamma!"

The cries were so piteous that the woman climbed up on a cement parapet and looked across, trying to see through the gloom to the other roof. And then the lights swept across the sky. And the woman saw.

Sharp against the illuminated background, Mrs. Tibbs beheld a man. He was moving quickly back and forth as if trying to prevent some or something from passing him in the direction of the door of the pent house leading down into the building. The piteous cries continued.

Then abruptly the man disappeared.

Mrs. Tibbs was still watching there, frozen to the spot when Yetta's broken body was discovered. The man had hardly disappeared when Mr. and Mrs. Anton Costelman, of 1017 Simpson street, came strolling across roof. They had been visiting Costelman's brother Albert, who lived at 1013 and were passing the pent house when they heard faint moans, then saw the small, still body.

So Yetta Abramowitz was found broken, strangled, but still alive.

Costelman summoned help and the unconscious child was hurried to a drug store and then to Lincoln hospital. She died within half an hour, without regaining consciousness.

Yetta had been assaulted, then fiendishly killed. According to the medical examiner, the condition of the wounds indicated that the murderer had seized her by the feet and swung her head against the brick coping around the roof.

The News Spreads.

Swiftly the news of the atrocity spread. A crowd of several thousand persons gathered in front of the house. A child had been killed on the roof, killed by a fiend who had escaped. This man was abroad, perhaps among them now, simulating horror.

It was midnight when the father and mother heard of the terrible murder that had occurred near their own home. A little girl . . . and Yetta had not come home. . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Abramowitz hurried to the police station. Then the mother was taken to the morgue, while the father remained to give the police what information he could.

But he could give little information of any use to the authorities. Yetta had never spoken to her family about being followed. The mother had sent her on an errand and she had not come back. They had worried but had felt sure she had been visiting at the home of some girl friend, or perhaps had been taken to the movies.

As a matter of fact, it developed that Yetta had been taken to the movies—by her murderer.

District Attorney John E. McGeehan of the bronx personally took charge of the investigation, visiting the scene, searching the vicinity with detectives, questioning neighbors. "It was the most brutal and vicious murder I have ever known about," he said in a talk with reporters. "I'll not rest contest until I've found the fiend who did this."

The first reports stated that the killer had been a young man in a gray cap and red sweater. One of the occupants of the apartment house told detectives that she had seen such a person running down the stairs. And another occupant, entering the house, saw the same man.

"A little girl has been cut up on the roof," he said, and hurried away.

But this had been Costelman, running for aid.

The police concluded that the murderer had never descended down

INSTALLMENT IV.

UNTIL the days of the French revolution it had been a row of underground cells occupied by monks, the simple, illterate, pious peasant monks of Brabant and Picardy. The monks themselves were dead and buried and their places taken by the jetsam and flotsam of humanity—sodden, wicked, fate crushed, vice crushed their faces a silent villainous recounting of most villainous deeds leaning across table tops slopped and cluttered with fouled plates and sticky bottles and glasses; talking to blowzy women in raucous, metallic slang—and here and there a gaping tourist out for a second hand thrill.

Lord Carmyon and his two friends sat down and ordered drinks.

The Gascon pointed.

"Bibi le Larceur and his gang," he whispered.

Carmyon and Tamerlanoff looked up.

Seated about a table across the room were half a dozen men, very much alike as to shrewd, vulpine clean-shaven features, peaked caps jauntily pushed back on bullet-shaped closely cropped skulls, velveteen peg-top trousers tightly encircling the ankles, and a typical finishing touch of effeminacy given by yellow pointed shoes. A girl was with them. She was dressed with cheap, glaring ornateness. But she was startlingly beautiful, with a mass of auburn hair piled up like a carved Florentine helmet, a crimson sensuous gash of a mouth, a short, high bridged nose, and eyes as green as a cat's.

"A woman to be loved greatly," commented Tamerlanoff.

"A woman," replied Gascon, "to be avoided greatly. For she is Casque d'Or—she belongs to Bibi—and he has been known to croak citizens who looked too deeply into her eyes."

So the three musketeers conversed about this and that and the other thing and sipped their very bad wine until, just as the huge bronze-tongued bell in the Church of Saint-Roch boomed out the muffled sob of the half hour, Mustaffa Bek and Capt. Jones entered. Piloted by the ex-burglar who was head waiter—"I tipped him off with a bit of coin," explained L'Hommedieu — they sat down at a table not far from the gangsters.

Then things happened—quickly.

For suddenly Bibi le Farceur rose.

He crossed the room, approached the newcomers. At once a grimly expectant hush fell over the caveau; the music—a drunken Maltese sailor was twanging a guitar—broke off with a jarring discord; a waiter dropped a bottle; people shifted in their seats, stared, trembled a little. For Bibi le Farceur was Bibi le Farceur, and they had no way of knowing that he was exchanging the tiniest bit of a wink with Mustaffa Bek even as he gripped him by the shoulder and demanded loudly:

"I want to talk to you, aristocrat."

The other played his role to perfection.

"You are talking to me," he replied. "In fact, you are shouting."

The audience tittered; stopped tittering as Bibi turned and glared at them. Then, once more, he addressed the oriental, inquiring by what right the blankety-blank specimen of a blankety-blank aristocrat was making sheep's eyes at Casque d'Or.

"I didn't look at her," said Mustaffa.

"In other words, I'm a liar—eh?"

Again the audience tittered; but tittered appreciatively, whatever his answer. Bibi le Farceur had him there. What a superb fosher—this Bibi!

Some of the tourists moved nervously. The thrill was getting entirely too real. They called for their bills.

"L'addition!"

"Waiter! Waiter!"

But the waiters paid no attention. They were having a thoroughly good time.

For Bibi le Farceur had broken into a flood of foul invective. He was inviting Mustaffa Bek to fight; inviting him furthermore to pick out his slab in the morgue, right then and there. "Ah—boug' de salguad!"—and a feline reaching for the ever-ready dagger in the folds of the scarlet shawl which was wound around his waspish waist . . . at which moment Capt. Jones got up—Capt. Jones who, doubtless a cad, was as doubtless a fearless man.

His fist shot out to the Apache's jaw. In the nick of time the latter jerked his head back; and, at once, the other gangsters came on a run, swinging chairs and bottles, while one of them, racing past the table of the Three Musketeers, whispered sharply:

"Quick! Behind you! The electric light!"

Lord Carmyon obeyed instantly. He found the switch, turned it. Evidently it controlled the lighting system of the whole place. For the caveau was plunged into inky blackness.

Came a rushing about of people in all directions. Curses; yells; laughter. The grand, wild symphony of lawless men battling in the dark with a sort of passionate futility. Free-for-all fights—fights for the splendid fun of tickling a rib with pointed steel or smashing a nose awry with clenched fist.

"Nom d'un nom d'un nom!" exclaimed L'Hommedieu who, a Gascon, thus cousin-in-blood to the proverbial Irishman, was all for cracking a head when he saw it, even when he did not see it—and it took the combined strength of both his friends to hold him down to his seat.

Voices:

"Ah—pig! You will, will you?"

"J't'saignerai, mon p'tit loup!"

"Aughrr——" a gurgling yelp of pain.

Biff! Bang!

Another cry of pain.

A woman's shrill voice, in English with a decided Liverpool twang:

"O — my necklace — help — George!"—the latter being her husband, a gentleman with faulty adenoids and buck teeth who had few equals behind the ribbon counter of Robinson, Robinson & Robinson, Ltd., but was not meant for heroic strife. Besides, he happened to be buried beneath three roughs who smelled sickeningly of absinthe and sweat and rank tobacco and whose fingers, since they believed in combining business with pleasure, were exploring his pockets.

Then a thin ray of light stabbed through as the door was kicked in. There was a rapid swirling of bodies up the stairs and into the street; and words out of the dark—now the semi-dark—in Lord Carmyon's ear:

"The trick is turned!"

He waited a few seconds; switched on the electric current.

Came a dazzling, blinding flood of light, and, immediately afterwards, attracted by the noise, half a dozen policemen tumbled into the caveau with drawn sabers, triumphantly showing the teeth of blueclad authority and giving their proud battle cry:

"In the name of the law!"

They did not discover much to use the flats of their swords on nor the square toes of their stout, capable shoes—which disappointed them. Just a number of men nursing bruises and cuts—some hysterical, unimportant tourists; not a sign of the gangsters who had caused the riot and, in spite of bullying questions, nobody—it was partly fear, partly loyalty—to breathe Bibi le Farceur's name.

Then one of the policemen saw a pair of feet protruding from beneath a table. He did the logical thing: he pulled—and dragged forth a burly Briton, unconscious, a ragged wound across his scalp, and near by the broken bottle that had done it.

The police gave him first aid. Some of the crowd helped. They bandaged his head; dashed cold water into his face; forced brandy between his lips.

He came out of his daze; looked for Mustaffa Bek; did not see him; heard just then, one of the Good Samaritans' sibilant whisper:

"We've kidnaped your friend. Not a word to the police—or we'll slit his gullet."

Capt. Jones obeyed. He staggered to his feet.

"Don't trouble," he said to the sergeant, who, pencil and pad in hand, was speaking pompously about taking down monsieur's deposition and evidence. "Came here alone. Bit drunk. No harm done—except a headache. Complaint? Heavens—no!"—and a gold piece dropped into the policeman's hand.

For Capt. Jones was a very clever man.

Kicked out of the army in disgrace, utterly discredited, he had for several years, before he took service with Sultan Iskandar Bek, made a good living in the city of London.

A very good living. Vintage champagne with and between his meals. Charming service-flat in Mayfair. Apartment in Paris. Rolls-Royce Trout stream in Norway.

It had not lasted long. But—O—While it lasted!

If you don't remember yourself, ask any city man of your acquaintance. Just mention the name Capt. Jones—Capt. Evan Jones. And if the city man still does not recollect mention the Great Danish Health-Bread Syndicate; or the Orange-Cure-Dyspepsia Sanitarium, or the High and Mighty Lodge of True-Blue All-British Knights.

You'll hear things. Perhaps you'll be offered, very cheaply, stock and bond certificates in these three concerns. Don't buy. Rather buy Brooklyn bridge.

O, yes. Capt. Jones was a clever man. He obeyed. He did not complain to the police.

But—he thought.

He thought rapidly.

He considered that the man—he had not seen him—who had whispered the warning had said:

" . . . or we'll slit his gullet!"

Gullet!

The word was too true to type; too much like an Apache; too melodramatic.

And so Capt. Jones took a good, quick look about the caveau to see what he might see; to store away the knowledge or impression or suspicion in his subtle Welsh brain.

* * * * *

It was a little after twelve o'clock on the following morning—up in Delphine's room, way up, seven flights, at No. 17 Rue des Poitevins. The room was not very large, but quite large enough for her and Mustaffa Bek, chiefly considering that she was saving space by sitting on his lap.

They were silent—had been silent for several minutes.

Suddenly, for no special reason, he said: "I love you. I love you so—"

"And I love you, dear."

She kissed him. There was another, shorter silence. Then she went on: "Why do you love me?"

An easy question to reply to—in a letter. Most people can write love letters, convincing love letters.

But to speak about it? To improvise on the spur of the moment? That's a horse of a different color.

Why, indeed—coming to think of it—does any body love anybody?

Why is the sky blue? Why do birds sing?

"Tell me!" insisted Delphine. "Why do you love me?"

"I love you because your soul is the net that incloses my soul with beauty and desire! I love you because you are all my dreams come true! I love you because you are like the wayward hours of spring that ripple with flut songs and flowers—"

"More! More!" she demanded. "'Twas beautiful," she exclaimed.

"And true," he rejoined, quite soberly. "You've no idea how true."

He buried his face in the curling hair about her neck.

"And you," he asked, "why do you love me?"

"O,"—she smiled—"just because!"

"No other reason, child?"

"It's enough reason—enough and to spare—for a girl." And, after a pause: 'Mustaffa!"

"I don't think we ought to marry."

"Eh?" he demanded, sharply. "What's that?"

"I'm a nobody, while you're a prince——"

"You'll be a princess — my princess."

"You know what I mean. People are such snobs—and so envious."

"Don't be a small fool. Titles are at a tremendous discount these days."

"Still — I don't think we should marry."

"Look here"—he was growing impatient—"we'll do exactly as we said we would. We'll have a simple Moslem ceremony today, as soon as our guests arrive. And later on—when this kidnaping business is settled, and, incidentally, paid for, and when I can show my face once more on the Champs Elysees—we'll have a church wedding before a magistrate. Three in one."

"But——"

"Not another word out of you, young lady! Or I'll give you the father and mother of a spanking."

"Brute!"

"Do I win?"

"You do." She kissed him. "Dear, dear, brute! You know"—she went on—"you look like a brute, with your peg top trousers and pointed shoes and scarlet shawl."

For no longer was Mustaffa Bek garbed in the extravagant height of European fashion nor topped by a monumental turban of purple silk shot with gold, but dressed instead in a spare suit of clothes belonging to Bibi le Farceur. It had been the latter's suggestion when the other had insisted that, Capt. Jones or no Capt. Jones, he was going to keep his engagement with Delphine.

"An excellent disguise, mon p'tit," Bibi le Farceur had said.

Nor had he jested when he had added: "Don't disgrace it!"

For, descendant of a long line of Paris apaches who had earned their living by fist and steel, by simple and compound felony, he was proud of his calling. Far from being a radical, he believed in the sanctity of personal possessions—as long as they were his own and regardless of whatever violent methods he had used in acquiring them . . . "at heart, really soundly middle class," Lord Carmyon characterized him; said that, when it came to a sort of self-righteous holding one to ill-gotten gains, Bibi didn't differ so much from the average stock broker or the members of the league of nations. . . . "Virtuous burglars, eh, what? Second story men quaintly appealing to the forces of law and order."

Ribbon Serial By Achmed Abdullah

Mustaffa Bek was not sorry about the change in his outer man.

He quite fancied himself as an apache, and he had experienced a pleasant thrill as, entering a telegraph office on his way to Delphine to wire invitations to his wedding guests, the clerk behind the wicket had treated him with as much obsequiousness as he might a Spanish cardinal or a Chicago millionaire—and again, as, stepping from his taxicab in front of Delphine's house, a peaceful citizen had bumped into him, mumbled abject apologies, and rapidly shuffled away.

He rose now and surveyed himself in the mirror.

"Becoming!" he announced, taking the peaked cap from the table and tilting it on his head at a rakish angle.

"Very becoming!" she agreed.

She went to the door.

"Where are you going?" he asked.

"I must shop for lunch."

"How much money have you?"

"Twenty francs."

"Here's all I have"—he emptied his purse—"a little over fifty, and seven people to feed. How's your credit hereabouts?"

"Terrible. But don't worry, dear. I'm a good housekeeper."

She left and presently returned, and soon it was apparent she had not lied about her abilities as a housekeeper.

For an hour later, when the guests crowded about the small table, two sitting on the bed and one on a box borrowed from the grocer, the omelet was as light as a feather, the salad dressing had a rich and right suspicion of onion juice, the flageolet beans were as soft as butter, and the red wine not bad at all.

Perhaps the coffee was too weak.

Since in the west lunch comes after the wedding ceremony, the east, with natural perversity, does it the other way around. So, the meal over, there was a simple Moslem marriage: "I take this woman to be my wife. Before Allah I swear it—before Allah and the Prophet!"

"I take this man to be my husband. Before Allah I swear it—before Allah and the Prophet!"

And then Mustaffa Bek, in the absence of a green-turbaned priest of the faith, sonorously and solemnly chanted the fatha, the opening chapter of the Koran:

"Praise be to God, the Lord of the worlds!
The compassionate, the merciful!
King of the day of judgment!
Thee we worship, and thee we ask for help!
Guide us in the straight path,
The path of those to whom thou art gracious;
Not of those upon whom is thy wrath nor the erring!"

So they kissed the bride—indeed, why shouldn't they?—and shook the hand of the bridegroom, who said:

"Honeymoon on the Riviera just as soon as my father pays up and I get my half."

"No honeymoon on the Riviera yet awhile," replied Lord Carmyon.

"Pardon?"

"Back to the hotel for you—without your bride—as soon as Capt. Jones sends the money."

"Without my bride?"

"Absolutely. Nor a word about it to Jones."

"But——"

"Supposed to be kidnaped, aren't you? Want Jones to put two and two together and throw a monkey wrench?"

"Of course not. Still—"

"Well?"

"What earthly good is the money to me if I can't use it the way I like to? And I want to be through with Capt. Jones—through with my father—that was our agreement——"

"Keep your hair on, old dear," interrupted Lord Carmyon. "All you need is a little patience. Wait until your father orders you and Capt. Jones to return to Mervistan——"

"He'll do that soon enough."

"Good. Then, at the last moment, you run up the red flag, declare your

Then she went on: "Why do you love me?"

independence, and go on all the honeymoons your heart craves."

"With the same girl, I hope," smiled the young sultana, while Mustaffa asked if Capt. Jones had been notified where to send the money.

"This morning, by special messenger," replied the Gascon, adding that a certain house in the Passage Moret had been named as rendezvous.

"Safe, do you think?"

"Safe—because it is so unsafe. No self-respecting gendarme will show his nose in the Passage Moret."

"Besides," added Prince Tamerlanoff, "Jones will not breathe a word to the police. L'Hommedieu wrote the letter. You should have seen it——"

"Ah, yes!" exclaimed the Gascon proudly. "A warning most bloodcurdling — most genuine — most apache!"

A warning—thought Capt. Jones as he reread it for the seventh time—too genuine, too apache; just as, he remembered, the warning whispered in his ear last night at the Caveau had been too genuine, too apache.

Still, although he discounted it, he could not afford to go to the police. For the police would tell the newspapers. The newspapers would eat it up. There would be publicity, scandal, sinister allegations. The oldest son of a reigning monarch, if only an Asiatic monarch, kidnaped and held for ransom—how the yellow sheets as well as those less yellow would headline it and scream about it:

"Extra! Extra!"
"Le Matin!"
"Le Figaro!"
"Latest developments"
"Germany implicated!"
"Le Gaulois!"
"Perfidious Albion's guilt!"
"Extra! Extra! Extra!"

It might easily lead to all sorts of international complications. For by a peculiar reasoning process—since after all, Mustaffa's kidnaping had nothing whatever to do with it—the French would awaken to the sudden realization that such a country as Central Asia existed; that it was rich; and that, considering it was the duty of the English as a civilized and Christian nation to "protect" the oil wells of Mesopotamia, so it was their own duty, as a nation quite as civilized and Christian, to "protect" the wheat fields of Central Asia—protect against whom? Don't ask silly questions—against the original owners, of course!

At which, promptly, Mussolini would make a speech to his blackshirted Fascist legions, give the grandiose salute of imperial Rome, and clamor brawlingly for a share in the loot.

Belgium would join the chorus. So would Portugal. The little dogs would yelp where the big dogs barked—we want a bone! we want a bone! we want a bone!

Mandates, then, demanded from the league of nations.

Let's all bear the white man's burden—at a thousand per cent profit!

God save the king!

Allons, enfants de la patrie!

Hooray! hooray! hooray!

Perhaps President Coolidge would refer, sympathetically, though without committing himself to central Asia's hard lot; perhaps Senator Borah and Oswald Garrison Villard would denounce the injustice in a fine frenzy of flaming, thunderous phrases; perhaps Senator Jim Reed would make the caustic suggestion that the Europeans pay their honest debts to Uncle Sam before embarking on more kleptomaniac adventures.

But all this would be of no practical help.

Mervistan would be jerked out of the comfortable half-light which its sultan preferred; preferred as a cloak to hide his own not so unselfish designs on Kivastan; preferred, too, as a cloak for his real master, to whose piping he danced. This real master was Russia—the Russian Bear, which, though it had changed the Czarist for the bolshevist pelt, had not lost its imperialistic appetite—the Russian Bear, which had all its four greedy, sharp clawed paws in the central Asian honey pot in spite of the solemn assurances given to Great Britain so recently at Geneva, when Sultana Evelyn had come there to plead her case.

No—thought Captain Jones—impossible to risk the scandal, to complain to the police. He would not have done it even without the bloodcurdling warning contained in the letter.

He read it again. It told him to bring the ransom money tonight, tomorrow night, or at the very latest on the third night, between seven and eight o'clock, to No. 37 Passage Moret, where, in exchange, Mustaffa Bek would be turned over to him.

Early in the morning he had cabled to Iskandar Bek for instructions. He was now waiting for the reply.

It was long past the lunch hour and, since he was one of those Britons who have an idea that alcohol is food and that whisky shaken up in a cocktail contains valuable calories, he had already five times telephoned to the bar and, on the waiter's appearance, had said: "Another one. Dry. And with a dash—you know."

He consulted his watch. Four o'clock.

He was on the point of deciding that, having had cocktails for lunch, he had better have a pint of champagne for tea, when there was a knock at the door.

"Come in!"

"Telegram, sir!"

"Thanks!"

He opened it. It was from his royal master, Sultan Iskandar Bek, and delightfully characteristic of the latter.

For, decoded, it said that the sultan had not enough money in his treasury to pay the fifty million francs demanded by the kidnapers—"Bloody lie!" commented Captain Jones—that it was Russia's affair quite as much as his own; that Captain Jones should communicate immediately with Platon Fyodorovitch Kuprine; that it was just as easy to ask for sixty as for fifty million francs, and that the sultan could use the ten million francs difference very advantageously.

Captain Jones laughed.

Clever chap, Iskandar Bek, he

WE CALLED him "Big Fellow" at the Royal Canadian Mounted Police post at Craig Harbor, Ellesmere Land. And he looked every inch his name.

Not that he was so very big. He did not stand nearly so tall as King, the giant leader of the Dundas Harbor police post on North Devon Island, a hundred and fifty miles farther south. Nor was he as heavy, pound for pound, as old Okadleo, in his day the master of a hundred fierce half-wolves at Pond's Inlet, Baffin Land.

But Big Fellow was big, if you know what I mean. He was clean-limbed; broad of chest and his strong back arched like a ribbon of steel beneath his shaggy fur. His feet were broad and strong-clawed, and the way he carried his magnificent tail proudly curled over his back was a certain sign of the unconquered. And with it all Big Fellow was a handsome dog; brown and black, with touches of white beneath his deep throat.

He used to look a veritable king of the Northland, standing with his slim hindlegs thrust strongly in the snow, his head held high, radiating the consciousness of his superiority over every one of the forty-odd dogs we had at Craig Harbor. As a fighter he was invincible—not so much because of his size and spirit, but because he possessed the keenest fangs in the Arctic and could use them with lightning speed. Big Fellow's eyes were deep brown, flashing softly here and there as he lay quietly among the other dogs of the team. But, seemingly indifferent though they were, little ever escaped them, and the slightest sign of trouble would suffice to make them sparkle with eagerness.

Big Fellow came up to us from Disko, Greenland, brought north on the yearly supply ship Arctic with fourteen other dogs for distribution among the newly-built police posts on the edge of the Polar Sea. An epidemic of "pobiokto," a species of Arctic rabies, had wrought havoc with the dogs brought up from Baffin Land, and the new consignment was to fill the thinning ranks.

He had attracted the corporal's attention by the cool, disdainful way he lay among the snarling animals lashed in the Arctic's 'tween decks, only growling menacingly whenever two fighting dogs lurched near him on the end of their steel chains. It seemed to us, eying him critically, that Big Fellow must have been king of that great pack of savage dogs which roam the beach at Disko during the workless months of summer. For no cruel teeth marks marred his fine pointed ears, and his very manner showed that Big Fellow had yet to meet his master.

He was probably three years old when he came up to Ellesmere. The shark meat summer fare at Disko had kept him lean, and he must have weighed in the neighborhood of ninety pounds. In spite of his size and strength, he was as gentle as a kitten with humans; jealous, as most Eskimo dogs are, and by far the most affectionate of the five allotted to Craig Harbor.

A huge gray lay beside Big Fellow, and it was evident that they had run together down at Disko—for mutual protection, if nothing more—and we selected him, together with two fine-looking white bitches and a peculiar yellow dog of great strength, but of such a nervous temperament that it was only with great difficulty that we could get him over the side of the Arctic and into the whaleboat.

The ship brought down from Etah, North Greenland, two Eskimo families who were to stay with Corporal Michelson, Constable Anstead and me at the lonely police post on Ellesmere Land for one year, replacing a family of Baffin Land Eskimos returning south to Pond's Inlet. Both Klisshook and Panik-pa brought their own teams, so that with the new Disko dogs and those we already had, there were nearly forty dogs at Craig Harbor, of which thirty were fit for sled work.

And how they fought during those first days, when we let them run loose about the camp to limber up after the confinement of shipboard, testing each other's strength and struggling for the leadership of the entire post!

Panik-pa, the old walrus hunter from Etah, possessed three good fighters, led by an evil-looking gray called Akshuktua. Klisshook's team were all ugly white, like the northern wolves from which they sprang, and were forever fighting among themselves. A great white dog, with a black patch over one eye which gave him the sinister look of a canine Long John Silver, daily struggled for the mastery with a fast young white, eager for the honors of leadership and the spoils it brought.

The nervous yellow dog from Disko we named Ginger, and what a dance he led us before we could get anything out of him! His perpetual fear of every one and everything was comic, and yet pathetic. We could never decide whether he had been born scared, or whether life down among the half-wolves of Disko had drained all his spirit. It was all the more peculiar because he was a well-built animal, enormously strong, and possessed a fine set of teeth.

It was almost pathetic to see how he would creep near Big Fellow and Rusty for protection—never too near to risk incurring their displeasure, but never so far away that a warning growl did not arise in Big Fellow's throat if another dog sought to molest him.

For those first few weeks at Craig Harbor he was the bane of our existence. He bit himself loose repeatedly, and, as he was always hungry, never daring to come near the blubbershed at feeding time, he roamed about the post eating everything in sight, including several pairs of sealskin shoes and the leather thongs on our skiis, stacked behind the storehouse.

Finally we lassooed him and wired him in a set of reinforced harness and kept him there. He would snarl in the most ferocious manner and lie on his back twitching his long, pointed ears, but he never actually bit any one. In his way, he was quite handsome, and his strength was prodigious, though much of it was born of fear. Later on he became a great sled dog and a wonderful worker, though he never ceased being scared.

The results of those first tussles were decisive. Big Fellow and Rusty met the Pond's Inlet dogs, Arkjung and old Okadleo, on the flat behind the detachment house. It was soon over. Rusty easily defeated Okadleo, who had broken one of his fangs in a struggle with Arkjung the year before, and Big Fellow would have killed Arkjung had we not observed the fight in time and driven him off with heavy sealhide whips. Although he had been beaten himself, it gave old Okadleo a great satisfaction to see the punishment meted out to his enemy. Arkjung, by the new fighter from Disko, and he crawled away behind a rock to watch the humiliation of the black.

The clash between Panik-pa's fierce leader and Big Fellow came on a hunting trip when both teams were put together to haul a big load of frozen walrus meat. And among the twelve dogs hitched to the long Baffin Land sled there could be only one master. At first Akshuktua and his Etah friends ran on one side, leaving a gap in the fan-spread traces directly in front of the sled runners. Big Fellow and his followers panted along on the other side. A jam in the ice started the inevitable battle.

Panik-pa was driving, and when the loaded sled stuck between two hummocks he used his sealhide whip unmercifully. The straining dogs leaped forward, only to fall back again in a snarling, tangled mass when the sled refused to budge. In a flash the fight was on.

Akshuktua charged the Disko dogs, growling his passionate rage. The lazy look had left Big Fellow's eyes, and they shone like sparkling amber. He shot forward like a steel spring suddenly uncoiled and hurled himself between Akshuktua and Ginger, sinking his keen fangs beneath the Etah dog's ear. The force of the assault carried Akshuktua off his feet and crashed him backward on the snow.

Howling ferociously, a powerful white Etah dog sprang to his leader's assistance and sank his teeth in Big Fellow's shoulder. But before the youngster could lock his jaws Rusty had hurled his massive body against him and the pair fell together, a ripping, snarling, tangled heap of blood and fur. Ginger crept to the end of his trace and awaited the outcome.

Akshuktua fought desperately. He was no coward, and he, too, had yet to experience the bitter pangs of defeat. Foam, flecked with blood, dripped from his mouth as he fought to loosen Big Fellow's grip on his throat. For several minutes the dogs battled. Then Panik-pa leaped in, swinging his whip. A brutal blow of the ivory handle sent Rusty reeling.

Freed from Rusty's grip, the Etah dog turned and threw himself on Big Fellow. Quicker than a flash the Disko leader loosed his teeth from Akshuktua and met the fierce youngster in mid-air. Vice-like, his fangs gripped the youngster's ears; a quick shaking, as a terrier shakes a rat, and Big Fellow had flung him aside, turned again, and grappled with Akshuktua as the white dog rose to meet him. Over and over they rolled until Panik-pa, with a volley of imprecations and a shower of blows with the heavy whip-handle, drove Big Fellow from his bleeding victim.

It was enough. The white wolf-dogs from Etah knew they had met their master. They knew now that they could never hope to defeat the lightning-streak from Disko single-handed Some day, with the aid of Klisshook's savage whites, they might bring him down. But Akshuktua never again tackled Big Fellow alone.

It always seems that there is something in the spirit of a Northern sled dog akin to that which animated the champions of the old prize ring, or the celebrated gunfighters of the old days in the West. Fighting to them was the breath of life. They fought all comers, fiercely rejoicing in victory and proud of supremacy, and then, sooner or later, drinking deeply of the cup of defeat.

So it is with the dogs whose lives are spent in the wilderness of the North. The leadership of a hard-fighting team means continuous combat, and never-ending fear that some day will come another dog, bigger, stronger, quicker with his fangs; fear that some day one of those fast-growing youngsters will prove just a little too strong, a little too speedy, for the tricks of the old master.

It was interesting to watch how each of the old dogs behaved when the three young puppies born to Ipuksae, the keen gray bitch, joined the police team soon after Christmas. They were fine little fellows, fat as butter, strong for their seven short months of life, and as mischievous as they could be.

At first they ran on short traces, behind the rest of the dogs, and were unceremoniously pulled along in the right direction when the sled swung suddenly round a curve. Big Fellow left them entirely alone, treating them with a mixture of affection and contempt. Rusty, while they were young, did likewise. So did Okadleo, Arkjung, Ooniooch and the others. It was the timid, spiritless Ginger who turned bully.

That was during the winter, when they were growing and getting used to things. When spring came, with the brilliantly cold days of late March and early April, they blossomed out in all their youthful strength, and one day they piled on Ginger in a body and gave him the drubbing of his miserable life. After that the yellow dog's life was wretched enough The mischievous youngsters would slip up behind him on the trail and nip him artfully, until Ginger howled with pain.

In the team Ginger was a wonderful worker, panting along as if he feared to be whipped to death any minute, though he seldom needed a touch. Big Fellow was tireless, driving along with his short, nervous stride. He did not pull with the frenzied energy of Ginger, nor with the steady power of big Rusty, yet he seemed to forge along mile after mile in an easy, effortless way. He was seldom too tired at the end of a hard day's run to hurl his weight against the breast-strap of his bearskin harness and bring the team into camp on the dead run.

The fight between Big Fellow and Narlegakshua, the evil-looking leader of Klisshook's wild team, was bound to come, sooner or later. And when it came it was an epic. Like the previous struggle between the police team and Panik-pa's dogs, it took place out on the floe-edge when the two teams were joined to haul an eighteen-foot sled loaded with a ton of walrus meat.

Neither leader started the tussle. One of Klisshook's savage whites attacked Ginger and precipitated the battle. This time it was Rusty who sprang to the yellow dog's assistance and sent the Etah dog reeling in the snow. Then Iksuk, Narlegakshua's teammate, charged Rusty from the rear. At the same time the Etah leader leaped forward and sank his fangs into Rusty's neck.

Big Fellow's spring carried him across five yards of snow and squarely on top of Narlegakshua, who turned to grapple with him To and fro they swayed, struggling to clamp on a death grip. Klisshook had gone down to the floe-edge, and there was no one to interfere.

Narlegakshua was a heavy dog, extremely powerful, and a tricky fighter. Big Fellow thrust his sinewy hind-feet in the snow and hurled the white dog backward, but before he could leap on him and sink his fangs in the thick fur Narlegakshua had slipped from beneath him, turned, and was ready to grapple again.

To and fro they struggled, streams of white breath pouring from their nostrils into the zero air. Once, with a desperate lurch, Narlegakshua threw Big Fellow down and sprang for the patch of white fur beneath his throat with a low growl of rage. If those iron jaws had locked on the Disko dog it would have been the end. But, as he fell, the great dog slipped sideways, and, as Narlegakshua's mouth slid past, Big Fellow drove his keen fangs through the Etah dog's lower lip, rendering him powerless to bite.

It was a battle for mastery, and Big Fellow meant to kill if he could. Gone were the influences of human contact during the years of semi-domestication. They were dogs no longer, but wild Arctic wolves struggling pitilessly for the crown of supremacy. No longer was Big Fellow the affectionate, tolerant dog he always seemed. No longer was Narlegakshua the overbearing bully, meting out punishment to an insurgent teammate. Death itself seemed in the air as they fought.

Once Narlegakshua tore himself free, blood dripping from his lacerated lips to stain the snow in crimson blotches. With a savage, ripping slash he opened a three-inch gash in Big Fellow's flank, but he had not strength left to follow up the attack or withstand the fury of the Disko dog. Luckily, Klisshook arrived in time to save the big white from certain death beneath Big Fellow's flashfangs. A blow of the Eskimo's icepick sent him reeling in the snow, away from the blood-spattered spot where Narlegakshua lay moaning weakly, a beaten and humiliated dog.

Big Fellow lay breathing heavily, licking his wounds and showing his satisfaction at the outcome of the tussle in the gleaming sparkle of his brown eyes. This battle had made him sure that, alone, at any rate, no other dog at Craig Harbor could hope to defeat him. There was no droop in his proud tail when he walked across the snow to where Rusty lay.

Rusty and Narlegakshua's teammate, a savage white named Ilksuk, had been evenly matched. The superior strength and greater weight of the Disko dog had been counterbalanced by the youthful eagerness of the Etah white. Both were nearly spent when merciless blows of the icepick drove them apart.

Big Fellow had been at Craig Harbor nearly two years when Corporal Michelson drove up the long, lonely 500-mile journey from the police post on Jones Sound to Cape Sabine, far up the eastern coast of Ellesmere and opposite Etah on the Greenland shore. The previous summer, when the supply ship Arctic paid her annual visit from civilization, we had gone still farther north on her, and built a shack at Sabine to be used by a patrol which each winter would come up from Craig Harbor.

There was nothing to do, no one to see, in this vast, uninhabited wilderness. But the government, far down in Ottawa, had decreed that the patrol should be made, if only to place beneath a cairn of stones at Sabine a cartridge case containing a record that the journey had been accomplished.

It was on this trip that Big Fellow was lost, or rather, as seemed most probable to me later, sacrificed his life for one of the other dogs, most probably Ginger, for neither returned.

Michelson took only Klisshook on the hazardous trip that would lead him over treacherous glaciers, equally treacherous stretches of ice in windswept Jones and Smith Sounds, where gales would make the going difficult and smash the floes without a moment's warning.

The corporal made a fast trip northward, with Klisshook to drive a mixed team of the most powerful dogs in the post. It was the end of March when the lone patrol was finished and the dogs turned south for Craig Harbor.

In spite of the dog meat in the cache, food was scarce on the trip southward. The party had still many miles to go before they reached Cape Tennyson when bear tracks brought hope of fresh meat for the tired dogs. For miles they followed the tracks, finally catching sight of the big animal just as a mist blew inland from the open water of Baffin Bay to the southward.

Mist or no mist, the chance of fresh meat was too good to lose. Throwing off the load as the sled sped over the smooth ice, Klisshook cut the straining dogs loose one by one, "clucking" them after the speeding bear. They needed little urging, and were soon lost in the mist. The mist turned into snow, and the snow to a blizzard, covering the sled tracks and the men's own trail back to camp equipment. The driving wind obliterated even the tracks of the dogs ahead, still in pursuit of the fleeing bear.

It was a desperate situation. Without dogs, without any way of finding the camp gear, or the trail back toward Craig Harbor, the two men were helpless. In the blizzard they lost each other, striving to find the dogs.

Neither man, even now, knows how he reached Craig Harbor. Deadly tired and half starved, they reached the camp, having walked more than forty miles after the storm lost them the team. Some of the dogs straggled in, some of them not until days later. But Big Fellow, the great heart, and Ginger, the coward, did not return.

Knowing Big Fellow, we could picture what his end had been—if, indeed, it was. The great white bear, cornered on a flat iceberg, surrounded by the snarling pack of dogs, rushing at them when they sought to grip him, always just a little too slow. Back again, to stand rumbling with rage against a pinnacle of ice, swinging his huge forepaws as the howling dogs sought to drive in and seize his white throat.

Then, perhaps, Ginger drawn to the fight with the others, standing still a respectful distance from the baited bear. The great white brute sees him, charges Ginger standing in his tracks, too paralyzed with fear to move. The bear pays no heed to a cat-like bitch clinging like a limpet to his flanks. His glittering beady eyes see only Ginger.

Big Fellow sees the rush. He hurls himself with lightning speed straight as an arrow for the gleaming white throat, sinking those magnificent fangs in the yellowy-white fur. He hangs on grimly with the courage born of the wild. It would be enough. The check would give Ginger time to escape the bear's savage onslaught. But no! He stands fear-stricken in the path of the big brute, making no effort to get away. One swinging blow from the mighty forepaw and Ginger crumples, a heap of lifeless bone and yellow fur.

A savage lurch and Big Fellow's clinging weight has brought the great white brute to his knees. The other dogs dart in and sink their teeth in his fangs and neck. But they can't hold him! Nothing can hold him. He is too powerful and far too fresh, even now. He rises, lumbering to his feet, flinging off the dogs as though they were flies—all but the courageous leader, still with his jaws locked in a death grip below the bear's ear. Another swing and a sweep of the giant paw, and Big Fellow, heavy as he is, goes hurtling through the air to fall twenty feet away in a mass of jagged ice. He lies still, his spine and half a dozen ribs broken like reeds. Bereft of their gallant leader, the other dogs melt away into the mist and eventually find the trail home to Craig Harbor, leaving the bodies of their dead teammates quickly stiffening in the biting Arctic air.

Perhaps that is the real story. It seems there can be no other. Unless, perhaps, Big Fellow and Ginger, the hero and the craven, kept on the trail of the bear as he swings for the open water, kept on too long and too far, and were carried away by the breaking floes.

Sometimes it would seem different still. Maybe they kept on the trail of the white one far north along the Ellesmere Land coast, even into the channels leading to the Polar Sea, eventually to "go wild" and join one of the great packs of Arctic wolves ranging the caribou and musk-ox hunting grounds of the Far North, back to the life of their forbears, and rejoicing in the new freedom.

Perhaps. Who can tell?

thought. He liked him; had genuine affection for him.

Very well. He would make a bid for sixty million francs. But wait—why not sixty-five?

He, too, could use a few extra pennies, and it never hurt to ask.

He left the room, stopped at the bar for just one more drink, jumped into his car and drove to Kuprine's house, a charming little villa, pagan in its white, slim simplicity, on the very crest of Montmartre, that great hogback hill dedicated to the saintly memories of early Christian martyrs.

Not that Platon Fyodorovitch Kuprine was a martyr. Nor was it certain that he was a Christian.

He called himself a Russian and indeed, spoke that fantastic, purring language like a native. But then he spoke English just as fluently, as well as German, French, Spanish, and a baker's dozen of oriental dialects. Besides, his complexion was too dead white for a Russian, his spade-shaped, silky beard too black—the sort of black which is more purple than black and more blue than purple. Nor were his eyes Russian. For they held in their brown-gold depths a sardonic mockery which was never Slav.

He might have been a Jew. But for that his lips were too thin and scornful, his ears too small, his manners too suave; and he professed a genuine liking for Jews, which, of course, no real Jew would have done.

He might have been a Kirghiz or a Tartar. But for that his nose was too aquiline, his height too towering, his mind too sword-keen.

Perhaps he was a Russian after all. I don't know. Perhaps he himself did not know; had forgotten his real name and race during the many years he had spent, first in the Czarist, afterwards in the bolshevist secret service, always borrowing the names, the nationalities, and individualties of other people.

At all events, there he was—whatever, whoever he was; and to Captain Jones, who had once gone to Cambridge and who had still a pretty literary smattering and conceit, he has always seemed like a figure out of one of Lord Byron's darker, gloomier, more cruel poems.

Jones was grimly amused, as he always was, when he saw the well polished metal plate on the outer door of the villa.

For engraved on it, boldly, largely, was:

RUSSIAN SOVIET SECRET SERVICE HEADQUARTERS.
RESIDENT AGENT:
F. P. KUPRINE.

"Why not?" the latter had explained to him some time ago. "If the French police are as shrewd as they are supposed to be, they would spot me for a bolshevist spy though I resort to the customary trick—put Russian Red Cross on my plate or Russian industrial commission, or Ukrainian famine relief, or what not. On the other hand, there is more than a possibility that the police, reading my sign, will dismiss me as a jester or a fool and pass on their way without bothering me. Advertise your secrets if you don't want them known. Tell the truth if you don't want to be believed."

Women and Sport

I hold that life is about to become more difficult for women, but I also hold that the courage needed to fight the difficulties of daily life has nothing to do with the audacity needed for aviation or for any other sport.

I have maintained that woman is more audacious than man, but I was not speaking of physical audacity or audacity in sports.

I spoke of the audacity with which she defends the beings that are intrusted to her and of the audacity with which she risks her life to be loved, which are far different from the audacity required in sports.

I made the acquaintance recently of the wife of one of our great war mutilated—a woman who is a flexible reed, incapable of lifting a table from the ground; one of those frail women of the past who fear even the sight of a mouse.

She related to me how a band of drunken men had attacked the isolated country villa where she was living with her husband, who had no arms and could do nothing to protect himself. She was trembling, but despite her fear she armed herself with a revolver, went down and put to flight this band of menacing men. This woman who trembles at the sight of a mouse had this courage, but she had it because she had a being intrusted to her care whom it was her duty to defend. She would never have done it had she been alone, even though she had been trained in sports.

And it is just the same at present. After the Mafalda was shipwrecked several months ago, hundreds of episodes were told of women who saved their children, defending them against the crowd who wished to push them aside and even defending them from others on the sinking ship who tried to take their life belts away. The women carried the helpless children in their arms toward the life boats, and many let themselves drown in the abyss in order that their weight might not overload the boat that bore their children.

This is courage. This is audacity. But both were excited by the sentiment of love. Well, this courage and this audacity have nothing to do with that acquired by participation in sports, aviation included, nor has this anything to do with the audacity needed for the battle of life.

But if I do believe that the courage and audacity with which woman is provided, or which she needs, are acquired by sports, it is not true that I am opposed to the idea that woman should acquire prestige.

I am in favor of woman gaining prestige—but in her own domain, in a domain in which she can be a superior being, in a domain in which she can find enjoyment.

Man loves sport; he loves to play tennis, to fly, to swim; he puts passion into these efforts, but he puts passion into them because for him sport is an agreeable exercise that appeals to his intelligence.

The end at which man aims is not so much to play or to conquer as to materialize an idea that preoccupies him.

What amuses him in football, tennis or golf, is not so much to exercise his muscles, or to be applauded, but more to see how he can arrive at such and such a combination, just as a woman does when she dons a new dress.

Men take so much pleasure in sport because sport permits them to conceive an infinite number of little combinations of an abstract kind, just as a mother does with her baby. The attraction a game holds for man is as a variant to meditation, and this attraction can be replaced by meditation, by calculation.

That is why he finds almost as much amusement in watching others play as in playing himself, and that also is the reason why sports have all been invented by man and are continually being changed by man.

Sports and aviation are for man games of intelligence—like commerce, literature, science—with this advantage: Here the effect of calculation can be realized and controlled at once, here his discoveries can be followed by thousands, by millions of individuals, and the prizes, the honors, the money he can gain from them are very tangible.

Nothing of this for woman. Sport for her is not a means of exercising her intelligence, but a game for her muscles, a gamble, and an occasion to change dresses and to meet friends. In point of fact, if she is amused by gambling, she does not find amusement in watching others play or in playing alone; although she is superior to man in the domain of inventions, she has invented nothing in the domain of sport.

She has devoted herself to this during the last few years a little for the attraction of competition and the prizes to be gained, but more under the illusion that her indulgence in sport and the prizes and celebrity she might gain would be useful to her in making herself more pleasing to men, making it easier for her to attract their love, as these things are useful to men in attracting the love of women.

There is, however, a grave confusion in this way of thinking.

The desire to please, to make a favorable impression on those with whom she comes in contact, is one of the deepest and most essential desires of woman. This desire is, let it be noted, more constant and universal than love, with which it is often confused.

The desire to please is for her essentially a desire to receive; love, on the contrary, is a wish to bestow. The desire to please is unlimited in woman, while love is limited, even unique.

Woman wishes to please all, her master, her pupil, her client, her tradesman, even the passerby whom she meets in the street, the person who looks at her out of a window, the workman who comes to mend her furniture, all the people who do not interest her in any way.

Woman wishes to please every man, every child, every adolescent whom she meets or hears talked about.

It is the chance of being seen, of being commented on—in short, of pleasing many people, of being applauded, that has pushed women into sports, just as it has pushed them toward masculine studies.

To be lauded by the Paris crowd, to augment the number of people she could please—perhaps this is why Miss Ruth Elder risked her life in the airways of the ocean, like her less fortunate competitors who lost their lives.

This is apparently confirmed by the fact that Miss Elder, like the other women aviators, in the interviews she gave before the voyage made a point of describing with much detail the toilettes she planned to wear, rather than speaking of the mechanism of her airplane.

Now, do sports and aviation offer woman the best means of pleasing? Can the money and the official recognition she obtains in sports make her beloved? I do not believe it.

Renown, riches, the recognition of professional ability, which are the aims of sport, have nothing in common with the possibility of pleasing. Woman lets herself be easily fascinated by the individual—man or woman—who has received academic degrees, who has gained laurels, even, or above all, in sport. But it is not thus with man. He lets himself be easily captivated by the charms of even the most stupid woman who knows how to excite the admiration she can wield, but he is neither blinded nor seduced by the most noted professional ability, nor by the most glamorous official recognition. He not only does not admire the woman who has earned great official laurels, but he mistrusts her as well.

It is no doubt for this reason that ambitious women are generally so envious of every one else and so discontented even if they have attained the celebrity which they desired. It is because the satisfaction of their ambition does not suppress in them the desire to please; on the contrary, they are persuaded that fame and public acclaim ought to intensify the love and admiration of those who surround them, and they are furious when they find that this is not the case.

No woman who is courted, adored and preferred by the little circle to which she feels herself superior will fail to envy the learned or illustrious woman who has become famous throughout the world.

It is not for her works that women envy the woman who has distinguished herself, but for the illusion that reputation assures her preferences, that, more than any other woman, she pleases those who surround her.

In the same way a woman does not know what to do with the money and laurels accorded by these official honors, if these do not facilitate love.

If this is just or unjust; if man is right or wrong in being indifferent to the laurels of a woman, I do not discuss. I only note that it is so, and that this instinct corresponds, perhaps, to the interests of society.

The fact that man and woman aim at different ends, that they desire different compensations, clearly separates the domains in which men and women desire to succeed and cuts short all concurrence through this fountain head of all durable incompatibilities.

It is this that must not be lost sight of when one wishes to encourage woman to go in for sports.

That woman should go in for a little sport, as much as is needful for her health, is all very well. That she should go in for enough sport to give elasticity to her muscles is very good. That she should go in for sport as a pretext for changing her dresses, for meeting her friends is all very well. But she must know that the pleasure she can gain from athletics is very small, much smaller than that which man can gain and she must learn that the advantages she can derive in the form of giving pleasure are a sheer illusion.

It is in the domain of grace, of tenderness, of love that she can shine and show her courage, her audacity. It is there that she can find her true joy the satisfaction of her desire to please and the compensations in which she will find far more happiness than in any she could obtain from sport.

Vanity of Vanities

. . "Good," said Jonathan. "If I find what I want, you'll have to dim it at night."

"What about the size? Shall I—"

Jonathan bowed.

"I don't think that's necessary," he said. "No one who knows them as I do could ever forget your hands."

He brought her glass to her and returned for his own.

"Well, here's luck," said Natalie. "I hope you'll be very happy."

Jonathan raised his glass.

"I can hardly congratulate you, but here's your very good health."

But the lovesick girl was scared. She had purchased a man who might have come to love her; she had studiously loaded the dice against herself. Worse. She had ended the game which she had played so badly, and how to start the new one she did not know. Jonathan would not start it—the honor was hers. And how on earth could she start it? The slightest gesture she made would have a new significance, could mean but one thing, would be, in fact, a blunt request to be loved.

The lovesick girl wrote two letters to break the engagement off; the woman of substance reread them and tore them up, and Natalie lingered at Buckram when she ought to have been in town.

"The marriage will be very quiet and the honeymoon will be spent on the Italian lakes."

So said the society reporters—and spoke more truly than they knew.

It had been privately arranged that Natalie should favor Como, while Jonathan fleeted the days by Maggoire.

This idea had been Jonathan's and had been presented with a lazy nonchalance which no one would have suspected of concealing regard. Indeed, throughout the engagement the man behaved very well. He paid his respects, did escort duty, saw the girl through formality—all with an easy friendliness before which embarrassment fled. Neither gallant, nor casual, he steered a most delicate course, yet gave the constant impression that he was drifting.

The girl was thankful—and desperate. Here were the footings of a wall which, once raised, she would never break down. One might have dealt with difficulty, out of a dilemma anything might have come; as it was, her path being made so smooth, there was nothing to do but walk down it day after day.

So till the first of August, on which day they were to be wed.

The wedding was to take place at two o'clock.

At a quarter to two Natalie received a bouquet, accompanied by a note, the superscription of which was in Jonathan's hand.

The envelope contained two documents.

One was a check for six thousand two hundred pounds.

The other was a letter from a firm of wine merchants.

Jonathan Baldric, Esq.

Sir: In accordance with the terms of our agreement to purchase the contents of the cellar at 37 St. James' Square, we beg to say that the removal of wine has now been completed and to enclose our check, made payable, as you directed, to Mrs. Baldrick, for six thousand two hundred pounds.

We have the honor to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servants,
—AND CO.

There had been no reception, but fifty friends had been dealt with at ——'s hotel; the bride was changing, and the bridegroom was sitting in the lounge, with a cigarette in his mouth and both his eyes on the clock.

Lady "Sue" Fustian, who had attended the bride, emerged from the lift and crossed to where Jonathan sat. As he rose to his feet she put out her hands.

"Jonathan," she said, "I'm just going. I think you might have kissed me in the vestry, but I shall try to forget. Don't be away too long, we shall miss you both. And Natalie wants me to say she'd like to see you upstairs."

Two minutes later Jonathan entered the room where, six weeks before, his marriage had been arranged.

This was empty.

After a glance at the door which led to a bedroom, Jonathan passed to a window and stood looking down upon a motor. This was a claret colored cabriolet, perfectly appointed, gleaming from stem to stern. Its chauffeurs sat like images, looking steadily through the windscreen, giving their dignity rein. Directly behind was another, but wholly closed car, with luggage, carefully shrouded, upon its roof. Beside this stood Jonathan's valet, with his hand on the door.

A rustle, and there was Natalie, papers in hand.

"M'dear," said her husband," the carriage continues to wait."

"I know," said Natalie. "I've seen it. It looks very nice."

"It'll have to go very nice if we're to dine at Folkstone with any sort of content."

"I know. I can't help it. That's the worst of a wife." She held out the check and the letter. "Jonathan, why did you do this terrible thing? How could you——"

"O, the weddin' gift," said the man. "Bridegroom's present to the bride." He sank into a chair. "I'm not sure you can't arrest me for sellin' your wine."

"Why did you do it?" said Natalie.

"If you simply must know," said her husband, "I did it to remove an impression." He crossed his legs. "You had an impression that I was a-marryin' you for the cellar of wine you'd got in St. James' Square or, at any rate, that the liquor that lay therein had gone towards makin' the match. I don't blame you. I'm a notorious wine bibber, and, if I remember rightly, the deal we've just done rose, so to speak, like Aphrodite, from the foam of the must. Well, there you are. The clearer I saw the impression, the less I liked it. It offended me, m'dear, and so I removed it."

"Did yo udo it because you were 'half in love' with me?"

Jonathan got to his feet.

"I suppose I did," he said slowly. "But I think we can wash that out. I swear it wasn't a gesture. I felt that this deal of ours was involving a slight—which you deserved rather less than any woman I know. And so, in my clumsy way, I sought to cut the slight out. I admit I'm a rotten bad surgeon, but there you are. And now, havin' stripped my soul, what about the Folkestone road? The family coach is waitin," and——"

"I like to think," said Natalie, "that the reason why you did it was because you were half in love. I mean, that intrigues as woman much more than the thought that you did it to do her justice, her vanity is disappointed; it's like giving her something useful; but if you do something because you are half in love, her vanity of vanities is touched. And, by the way, if ever you're all in love, you might let me know."

Jonathan started forward.

"Natalie!"

The girl put up a small hand.

"I only mean that then I'll consider your claims. I want to be—"

"Consider them now," said her husband, taking her hand. "Say, 'This fool would have loved me if I'd given him half a chance.' Say 'I took him because I had to, but——"

"That wouldn't be true," said Natalie.

"Near enough," said the man. Buckram——"

Natalie withdrew her hand, flung herself on to a sofa and burst into tears.

Distressed beyond measure, her husband sat down beside her and stroked and patted the shoulder which he could reach.

"Natalie, darling—my dear, I can't bear you to cry. I shouldn't have said what I did. I never meant to presume—I never will. I'm just your jolly good friend—remember that. I'll see you safe to Como, and——"

A hand came out, seeking his.

Suppressing the impulse to kiss it, Jonathan held it fast. So far a little space. Then Natalie sat up straight, with her other hand to her eyes.

"Listen," she said. "I've got to tell you the truth. You think I'm white; but I'm not. I've played the rottenest game. A month before George Stone died he showed me his will. He'd left me Buckram, and you St. James' Square. I asked him to alter it, Jonathan—leave them the other way round." The man stared violently. "You see, I thought it might help me to marry the man I loved."

Jonathan gave a great cry.

Then he took her two arms and put them about his neck. When he spoke, his voice was trembling.

"My beautiful darling," he said, "tell me one thing. Didn't he tell you I loved you?"

Natalie nodded.

"Ah."

"And I thought you did—in a way. But I wanted all of you, Jonathan. And I thought if once you had me, if once you could look at me and say 'This is mine.' I thought that then perhaps you wouldn't look anywhere else."

Jonathan kissed her lips.

"I've adored you," he said, "from a distance, ever since I knew what was what. If ever I'd had a close-up, I should have gone over the edge. But that you wouldn't give me."

"You should have taken it," said Natalie "I tell you, I'm a woman of substance—I hold what I have—until someone who's stronger than me comes and takes it away."

Jonathan held her close.

"I know. I understand. It's in the blood. I never knew how much I loved you until I came into this room ten minutes ago."

His wife laid her cheek against his.

Presently a mischievous smile stole into her face.

"It's my duty to remind you," she whispered, "that the family coach has been waiting——"

"Let it wait," shouted Jonathan. "I've waited for more than two years, and, now that I've got the bowling, I won't be rushed. Of course, if you feel you must be going——"

Natalie's cool fingers came to rest on his mouth.

CHINOOK
THE OLD TRAPPER'S LANGUAGE
By EL COMANCHO

(Cut this out and save it. With other lessons, appearing each week in this page, you will soon have the complete Chinook vocabulary.)

ATS.—The A is sounded as in Hat, and the TS as though it were written T-S-S-S, or almost TISS. Accent the A and pronounce "At-sss." This word means sister and nothing else. If "my sister" is meant, use NIKA (my-ka) before it, and if your sister, MIKA (my-ka). Thus NIKA ATS means "my sister."

BOS'N—Pronounced Boss-un. This word has an interesting history. In the old fur-trading days on the west coast most of the American vessels engaged in the trade came from Boston, while the English vessels came from London or Liverpool. To distinguish the American from the Englishman, who spoke the same language, the Indians called the American "Boston Man," or "Bos'n Man." The Englishman he called "King George Man," or rather "King Zghorzgh Man," which was as close as the Indian could get to the sound of the English words.

So BOS'N means primarily an American, but after white men went to live on the west coast it came to mean any white man, no matter of what nationality. Very few of all the men that now came there were from Boston, but the word persisted. Therefore you can use BOS'N to mean any white man.

BEBE—Pronounce Bee-Bee. This is a corruption of the English word Baby and is used to mean any small child. If a girl is meant, the word KLOOTCHMAN (Woman) is used before BEBE. This means "Woman Baby," or as we would say it, a "girl baby" or a "little girl."

CANIM—Sound the C as K, the A as in Fate, and the I as in If. Accent the first two letters, saying "Kay-nim." This word means canoe and nothing else. Thus NIKA CANIM is "my canoe."

CAPO—Sound the C as K, the A as in Fate, and the O as in Oats. Accent the last syllable, saying "Kay-poh." Capo is a corruption of the French word Capote, and means coat or cloak, or even a robe or blanket. In fact, a covering of almost any kind.

(Additional words of the Chinook language will be published next week.)

MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

Flapper: "I'd like to try on that rose dress in the window."

Salesman: "Sorry, Miss. That's a lamp shade."

SHOVELING SNOW

George and Frank and Allen lived in homes along the same city block. They were all ambitious boys and wanted to earn money. So when the first heavy snow came all three were out with snow shovels as soon as the storm had stopped.

All of the boys had to shovel the walk in front of "home" before going to hunt a job elsewhere.

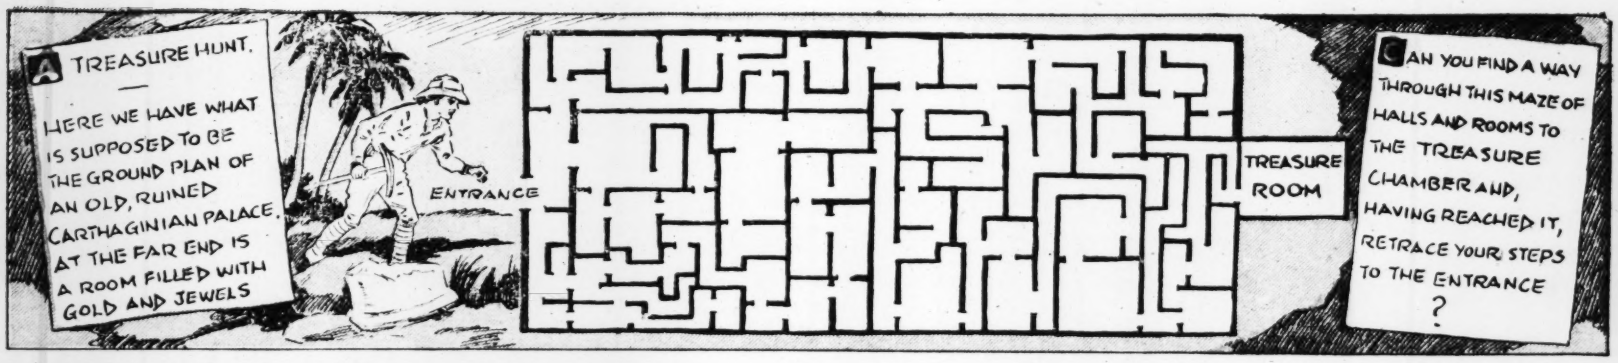

George just shoveled a path down the center of the drifts and then scampered off to grab a job ahead of the rest.

Frank shoveled the width of his walk but did not stop to sweep the loose snow that remained, for he was afraid that George would have all the good jobs.

Allen cleaned all the snow from his walk and swept it perfectly dry, even pushing the snow away a little from the edge of the walk so that when it melted it would not be wet.

When some of the neighbors came out and wanted to hire somebody to shovel for them, they looked at all of the three walks. And you can guess pretty quickly whom they hired for the work. When George and Frank returned at noon they found Allen "signed up" for several jobs right at home, all because he had a good sample to offer.

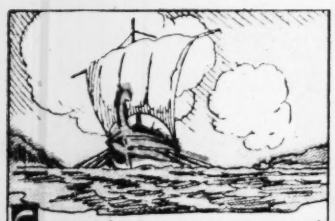

You see, it is possible to show superiority even in the homely common tasks that you have to do every day.

Chapter 64—The Rise of Carthage and the First Punic War.

By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

CARTHAGE, THE MOST IMPORTANT OF THE COLONIES PLANTED BY THE ANCIENT PHOENICIANS, IS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN FOUNDED IN 813 B.C. A CARTHAGINIAN LEGEND ASCRIBES THE FOUNDING OF THE CITY TO DIDO, A BEAUTIFUL PHOENICIAN QUEEN, WHO, AFTER HER HUSBAND HAD BEEN MURDERED BY ENEMIES, FLED FROM TYRE BEARING HIS TREASURE. LANDING ON THE NORTHERN COAST OF AFRICA, NEAR THE SITE OF MODERN TUNIS, DIDO ASKED THE NATIVES FOR AS MUCH LAND AS SHE COULD ENCLOSE WITH AN OX HIDE.

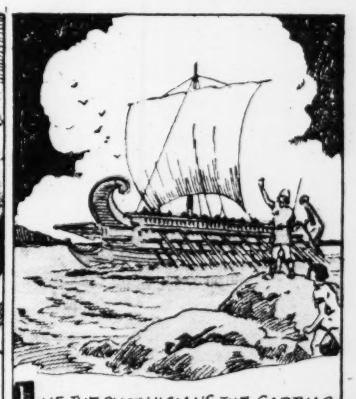

THE NATIVES, WONDERING WHY SHE WANTED SO LITTLE OF THEIR LAND, READILY GRANTED HER REQUEST, BUT WERE MUCH AMAZED WHEN THE CUNNING QUEEN COMMANDED HER FOLLOWERS TO CUT THE OX HIDE INTO NARROW STRIPS. —•

SHE THEN HAD THEM TIE THE STRIPS TOGETHER TO FORM A LONG, LONG ROPE. WITH THIS SHE ENCLOSED A PLOT OF GROUND LARGE ENOUGH TO SERVE AS THE SITE OF A CITY. WHEN THE CITY WAS BUILT, DIDO NAMED IT CARTHAGE. —•

CARTHAGE BECAME ONE OF THE LARGEST AND FINEST CITIES OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, BUT BECAUSE THE VAST AFRICAN DESERT LAY BACK OF THE FERTILE STRIP OF LAND ON THE COAST THE CARTHAGINIANS WERE CONFINED TO THE SEASHORE.

LIKE THE PHOENICIANS, THE CARTHAGINIANS WERE FORCED TO TURN TO THE SEA. THEY WERE EXPERT SAILORS AND SHIPBUILDERS, AND THEIR MERCHANT GALLEYS VISITED EVERY CORNER OF THE MEDITERRANEAN IN SEARCH OF TRADE. —•

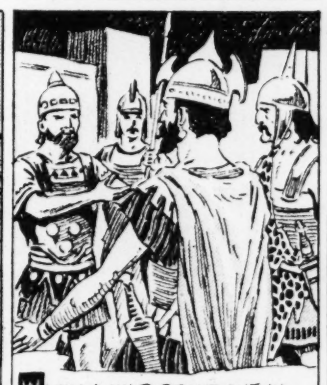

ALONG THE COAST OF AFRICA, IN SPAIN AND ON MANY ISLANDS THEY BUILT TRADING POSTS WHICH IN TIME GREW TO BE FLOURISHING COLONIES. SO LITTLE BY LITTLE CARTHAGE BUILT UP AN EXTENSIVE COMMERCIAL EMPIRE AND RIVALLED ROME IN POWER.

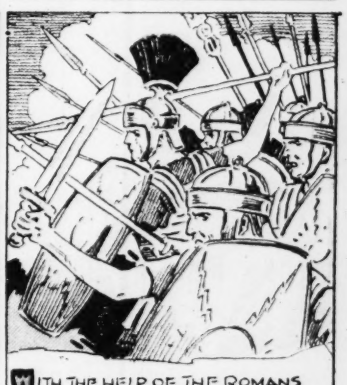

THE CARTHAGINIANS VISITED THE ISLAND OF SICILY AND, STRUCK BY ITS FERTILITY, BUILT TRADING STATIONS THERE. EVENTUALLY, THEY CONTROLLED THE ENTIRE WESTERN PART OF THE ISLAND. THEIR PRESENCE IN SICILY ALARMED THE ROMANS.

SICILY LIES CLOSE TO THE ITALIAN PENINSULA, AND THE ROMANS DID NOT CARE TO HAVE THE POWERFUL CARTHAGINIANS FOR NEIGHBORS. AS TIME WENT ON, THEY BECAME DETERMINED TO DRIVE THE CARTHAGINIANS FROM THE ISLAND.

WHEN A WAR BROKE OUT IN SICILY BETWEEN THE SYRACUSANS AND THE MAMERTINES (264 B.C.), CARTHAGE SUPPORTED SYRACUSE, WHILE ROME, EAGER TO STRIKE A BLOW AT HER RIVAL, FOUGHT ON THE SIDE OF THE MAMERTINES.

WITH THE HELP OF THE ROMANS THE MAMERTINES WERE ABLE TO DEFEAT THE SYRACUSANS, WHO MADE A SEPARATE PEACE AND LEFT CARTHAGE TO CARRY ON THE WAR ALONE. THE ROMANS WERE VICTORIOUS IN MANY LAND BATTLES.

CARTHAGE'S STRENGTH LAY IN HER MIGHTY FLEET OF WAR GALLEYS, WHILE THE ROMANS, WHO WERE INEXPERIENCED SAILORS, HAD NO NAVY. NEVERTHELESS, THE ROMANS PLANNED TO DESTROY CARTHAGE'S SEA POWER, AND BEGAN TO BUILD 120 LARGE WAR VESSELS. —•

FOR THEIR MODEL THEY USED A CARTHAGINIAN GALLEY THAT HAD BEEN BLOWN ASHORE ON THE COAST OF ITALY. WHILE THE SHIPS WERE BEING BUILT, THE ROMAN CAPTAINS TRAINED THEIR CREWS OF ROWERS ON THE BEACH.

THE NEW ROMAN FLEET, UNDER THE COMMAND OF THE CONSUL DUILIUS, MET THE CARTHAGINIANS IN A GREAT BATTLE OFF THE NORTHERN COAST OF SICILY IN 260 B.C. THE ROMANS, CONFIDENT OF THEIR SUPERIORITY IN HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING, HAD PROVIDED THEIR SHIPS WITH GRAPPLING HOOKS AND LONG GANGPLANKS BY WHICH THEY WERE ABLE TO BOARD THE ENEMY VESSELS, AND BEAT THE CARTHAGINIANS ON THEIR OWN DECKS. MOST OF THE CARTHAGINIAN GALLEYS WERE CAPTURED OR DESTROYED.

AFTER THIS VICTORY A ROMAN ARMY INVADED AFRICA, BUT IT WAS BADLY BEATEN. THE WAR LASTED FOR 24 YEARS, FIRST ONE SIDE WINNING AND THEN THE OTHER. BUT AT LAST THE ROMANS GAINED THE UPPER HAND, AND THE STRUGGLE ENDED (241 B.C.) WITH THE CARTHAGINIANS BEING FORCED TO GIVE UP SICILY AND PAY A LARGE SUM OF MONEY TO ROME.

For the Class Cup

A Story of the Conquerors' Club and Basketball

By W. BOYCE MORGAN

SYNOPSIS.

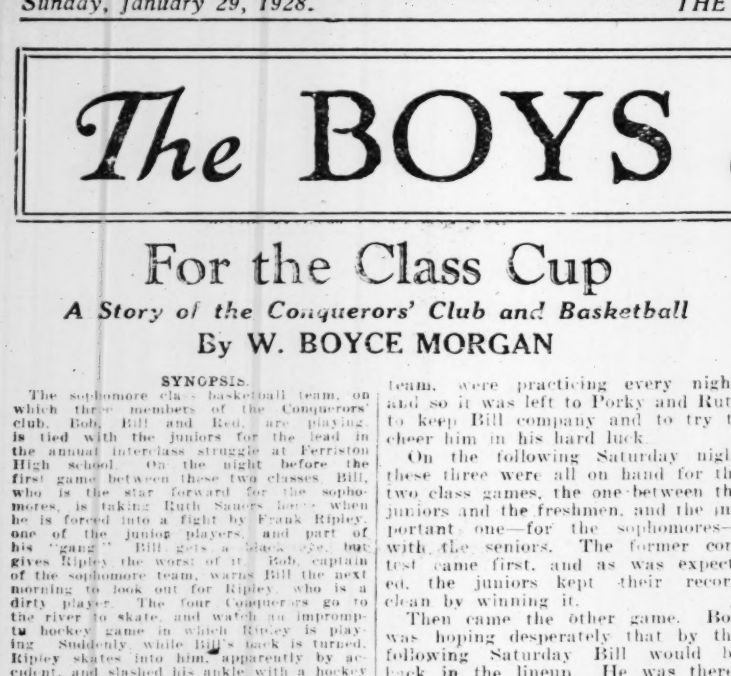

The sophomore class basketball team, on which three members of the Conquerors' club, Bob, Bill and Red, are playing, is tied with the juniors for the lead in the annual interclass struggle at Ferriston High school. On the night before the first game between these two classes Bill, who is the star forward for the sophomores, is taking Ruth Sauers home when he is forced into a fight by Frank Ripley, one of the junior players, and part of his "gang." Bill gets a black eye, but gives Ripley the worst of it. Bob, captain of the sophomore team, warns Bill the next morning to look out for Ripley, who is a dirty player. The four Conquerors go to the river to skate, and watch an impromptu hockey game in which Ripley is playing. Suddenly, while Bill's back is turned, Ripley skates into him, apparently by accident, and slashed his ankle with a hockey club. Bill drops to the ice, and on examination reveals that his ankle is badly bruised and he will not be able to play basketball for at least two weeks. With him out of the lineup, the sophomores are unable to match the juniors, who beat them that night 23-19. At the conclusion of the game Bob draws Ripley aside and warns him that his underhand tactics must stop.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

INSTALLMENT III.

During the week following their defeat by the juniors, the sophomores were very gloomy. There was small chance that the freshmen could beat the third year men, while the sophomores, without Bill in the lineup, had to meet the seniors on the coming Saturday.

"I played better than I know how, Bill."

At the present time the juniors were ahead in the race, having beaten the seniors twice and the freshmen and sophomores each once. The sophomores had lost one game to the juniors, and had beaten the freshmen twice and the seniors once. After their game with the seniors, however, there was still another battle with the juniors. If they won both these they would be tied with the juniors for first place, and a play-off game would be necessary. That was their only hope.

Meanwhile Bill's ankle was healing slowly. By Wednesday he was able to limp to school with the aid of a cane. Red and Bob, with the other members of the sophomores' team, were practicing every night, and so it was left to Porky and Ruth to keep Bill company and to try to cheer him in his hard luck.

On the following Saturday night these three were all on hand for the two class games, the one between the juniors and the freshmen, and the important one—for the sophomores—with the seniors. The former contest came first, and as was expected, the juniors kept their record clean by winning it.

Then came the other game. Bob was hoping desperately that by the following Saturday Bill would be back in the lineup. He was therefore determined that the seniors should not, in the present game, destroy the sophomores' chances of tying for the lead. Bob was not a great basketball player ordinarily, but that night he was. While Bill, Porky and Ruth sat howling on the edge of the floor, the president of the Conquerors' club literally ran wild. From his position at center he was all over the floor, and he dropped baskets in from angles that seemed impossible. Before the game was half over it was evident that the seniors were overwhelmed.

The final score was 42 to 13, and Bob himself had accounted for 28 of those 42 points. As he joined the others after the game they pounced on him with glee.

"Bob!" shouted Bill. "What makes you think you need me on that team? I never saw anything like the way you played tonight."

"And you probably never will again," grinned Bob. "I played better than I know how, Bill. We just HAD to win that one. Now, if your ankle is in shape we'll have you in for the last game with the juniors next week, and this time we'll beat them."

"His ankle will be in shape, all right," said Ruth positively.

"And if we do win it, just let the juniors TRY and stop us in the play-off game," exulted Porky.

The three other members of the Conquerors' club accompanied Bill as he took Ruth home, and then helped him to his own house.

"You've got to put up with all of us for a while, Ruth," was the way Red put it. "We simply are not going to let Bill out of sight until after that game. You can't tell what Ripley might try to do."

Nor did the boys let Bill out of their sight. They were with him when, on Thursday night, he made a final trip to the doctor and was told that he could play basketball if he was very careful. They were still with him when, on Friday afternoon, he went back to practice with the sophomores, a heavy leather brace guarding the still tender ankle.

On Saturday night a raging, screaming crowd of students filled the gymnasium. Never had there been such a bitter battle for the class cup. None of the students knew about the foul play that had been responsible for Bill's injury, and now that he was back in shape, everyone knew that this would be a battle royal—the sophomores' big chance to tie for the cup.

A few minutes before the game, Ted Weeks, junior president, ran into the locker room where the sophomores were dressing, and clapped Bob on the shoulder.

"As one class president to another," he said with a grin, "I want to wish you good luck. Bob I only wish I was on the team to help beat you."

Bob laughed and returned the good wishes. "There's a white boy," he said to Bill as Ted hurried away. "Too bad Ripley isn't like him."

A tremendous roar went up as the two class teams entered the gymnasium and started their practice. For the sophomores this changed to a wail of disappointment a few minutes later when the team went on the floor to start the game and Bill was absent from his position. But it was whispered around that his ankle was still a bit weak, and that Bob was craftily saving his star player until he was actually needed. Consoled at this, the sophomores redoubled their cheers as the game began.

From the first toss-up it was a racing, breath-taking contest. The sophomores were the first to count when Bob dropped in a field goal from the middle of the floor. Soon the juniors tied it, however, and then the lead swung back and forth, first one, side scoring, then the other. At the end of the half the spectators were hoarse and wilted in their seats, and the score was 14 to 13 in favor of the juniors.

When the second half started and Bill was still not on the floor, the sophomores' supporters began to get uneasy. But Bob was biding his time. He watched the other players getting more and more tired. Ripley, who could guard Bill, was not in condition and was very evidently in some distress. But finally, when the juniors had pushed the score up to 18-14, he called time out and motioned to Bill.

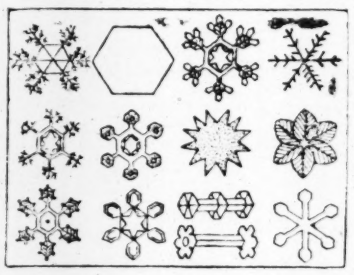

The skylight was nearly raised from the gymnasium as Bill trotted onto the floor, with just the slightest limp. Formally he shook hands with Ripley, who glared at him angrily. The referee put his whistle to his lips and tossed the ball.

(To Be Continued Next Week.)

AS SCIENCE SEES IT

Winter is at hand and with it comes the fall of snow, at least in Canada and in most of the United States. It is beautiful in itself as it falls out of lead colored skies and covers the fields and houses in a blanket of velvet white; but each single flake has an individual beauty that can be observed quite easily if you have a small magnifying glass in your possession.

Place a few snowflakes on a cold, dry, black piece of cardboard and scatter them loosely over the surface so that each flake can be seen clearly. Now look at them with a small enlarging lens. You will note that the flakes are of many different sizes and shapes, particularly if they fell out of a cold sky and undisturbed by a wind.

Some of them will appear as small stars, as six-side polygons, as a six-spoked wheel, or as six-sided plates. Their size and shape depend on many things and vary according to conditions, but you will note that they are all arranged in artistic shapes as though patterned by a master artist.

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

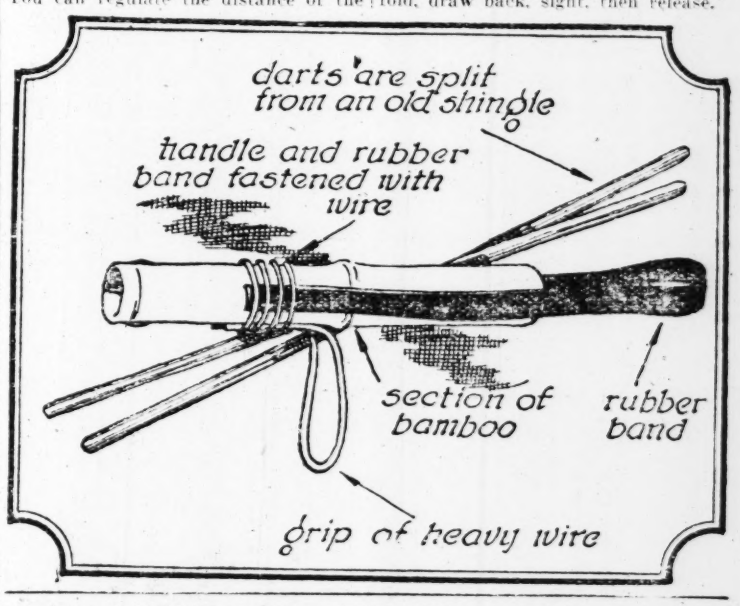

A BORNEO DART GUN.

The natives in Borneo sometimes made and used blow guns with the tips of the arrows coated with violent poison. The blow gun was made of a shaft of bamboo and the powerful blast of breath from their lungs would send the light dart through the air for great distances. Nor did the arrow need to more than scratch the surface of the quarry; once the poison entered the system, it was only a matter of time until the animal or bird would fall dead. The animals, after being shot, would then be followed by the natives until they died.

This Borneo gun isn't dangerous, but it shoots light arrows a great distance and with surprising accuracy. The motive power isn't your breath either, but a stout rubber band attached to each side of the barrel. You can regulate the distance of the shot by the distance you pull the band back.

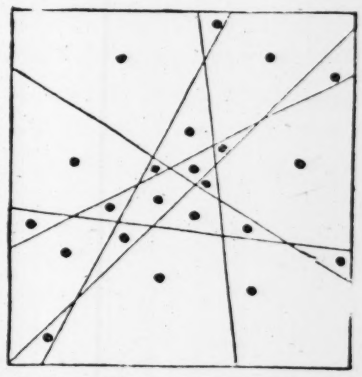

The barrel should be of bamboo about 10 inches long and from 3-4 to 1 inch in diameter. If a joint is included, ream this out well with a red-hot iron. Cut the rubber strip from a piece of inner tube, 1-2 inch wide and about 16 inches long. Bend a handle from stiff wire as shown, then fasten the ends of the rubber band and the handle to the barrel with wire. Strips of adhesive tape will help to make the attachments more secure.

For the arrows, split off strips from a straight-grained shingle, putting a small tack in the end to make it slightly heavier. To use the Borneo dart gun, drop a dart in the barrel, grasp the rear end between the thumb and forefinger in the rubber fold, draw back, sight, then release.

THE ADVENTURES OF PETER PEN

BY NICK NICHOLS

through that apartment house, that he must have fled over the roofs and out on the street from another house.

As for clews at the scene, there was none.

Mrs. Tibbs definitely stated that the slayer was a man of average height, muscularly built, and that he wore a soft fedora hat with a flat brim. She said she could see him only down to the waist. She didn't know whether he was wearing a raincoat or some sore of jacket with a belt.

"The reason I am so sure of his description is that a little later I saw Mrs. Costelman when she crossed the root to Yetta, she said, "and I was able to note every detail of her dress. I am positive of what I saw."

The Lone Witness.

Could any one identify a man of this description? Had the people of the neighborhood seen such a man? Yetta had been with him from early evening until almost 10 o'clock—surely some one must have seen them together somewhere.

Yes, one person had seen them together—or thought she had seen them. This person was Mrs. Frances Katz, ticket seller at Loew's Boulevard theater on Southern boulevard, a short distance from the scene of the crime. She said the Abramowitz child had appeared at the ticket office late in the afternoon in the company of a "man about 30 years old, swarthy, clean shaven, and wearing a tan coat."

Mrs. Katz positively identified a picture of the child.

But that was as far as that clue went. Yetta Abramowitz was buried, amid scenes of most heart-rending grief, and justice went on groping in the darkness. And the darkness never lifted.

Stories, reports, theories there were by the dozen—stories of "a tall young man" who had been seen loitering in the vicinity; of a "swarthy brute" who had attempted to lure young girls into doorways; of any number of perverts who had terrorized the children of the neighborhood.

Four women and a girl living in the same block gave the police a description of a man who had been persistently annoying during the previous two weeks.

This man, according to one woman, attempted to drag her 15-year-old daughter into a hallway at 1000 Simpson street. The girl had broken away and escaped.

Ten days before the Abramowitz tragedy, a Miss Fay Cooperberg, 25 years old, had been seized by a man as she stepped into the hallway of her home at 1004 Simpson street. She screamed for help and another woman ran to her assistance, frightening the man away.

There were many such reports as these. But usually the descriptions differed.

Dr. Alexander Gettler, the toxicologist who has been called in on so many murder cases in this section, reported after an examination of the child's stomach that she had eaten nothing while in company of her abductor. Apparently the man had taken her almost directly to the movie theater and remained there until about 8 o'clock or later.

Predicts an Arrest.

Rebecca Abramowitz admitted to the police that she and Yetta and the other children of the neighborhood often asked adults, about to enter the movie theater, to take them in with them.

District Attorney McGeehan, however, said he was virtually certain Yetta knew the man who attacked her. The murder had been committed, he felt, to prevent her from telling.

"We expect to make an arrest at any moment," he announced.

Subsequently, there was an arrest; in fact, quite a number of arrests. The suspects included a laborer named Frank Polcheski; Michael De Stefano, Max Gilbert, a baker and John Hutton.

Polcheski was picked up by New Jersey state troopers three days after the crime as he walked along the railroad tracks at Somerville, N. J. The troopers noticed bloodstains on the man's coat. He said the stains were due to injuries he had received in Philadelphia.

The description of this man did not tally with the description of the Abramowitz slayer, but the police were rather desperate by this time. So he was held and his stained coat was sent to Dr. Karl S. Kennard, assistant medical examiner, for examination.

The next day he was released. The bloodstains were not those of the murdered girl. His own story was found to be true.

De Stefano was also unfortunate enough to have bloodstains on his coat. He was arrested in Jersey City. It was said he had pawned a tan coat in New York the night of May 14.

But he, too, was released when it was found that his alibi was correct.

Gilbert was arrested several weeks after the crime. A policeman saw him in company with a little girl early one morning at 14th street and First avenue. He said the child was his sister, but the officer noted that the two were obviously of different nationalities, so he questioned the child. She began to cry then, and said she would tell the truth.

She had been to a movie and on coming out the man had accosted her. He had invited her to go uptown with him.

The man's record and movements were investigated thoroughly, but he could not be connected with the Abramowitz murder.

Finally, there was Hutton.

This man was arrested August 2 upon the complaint of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cesnohliedek of 1316 Avenue A. The couple reported to a policeman in Central park that their son Charles, Jr., 5 years old, had come running out of the bushes crying that a man had tried to make him breathe some "smelly stuff" in a can.

The officer arrested Hutton and found in the man's possession a quarter pound can half filled with ether.

Hutton later pleaded guilty to impairing the morals of a minor but steadfastly denied that he knew anything whatsoever about the Abramowitz murder. He admitted he was subject to fits and loss of memory.

Slender threads, to be sure. But soon there were no threads at all. The Abramowitz murderer remained unidentified.

No Fat
In Love Scenes

Here's the right way to avoid it

In the Movies slender figures are required, because almost everybody dislikes excess fat. So in every circle. Fat mars beauty, health and vitality. Every modern style calls for slenderness. That is why men and women by the millions have banished overweight.

Some do this by abnormal exercise and diet. Others do it in the easy, pleasant way, in the modern scientific way—with Marmola prescription tablets.

Marmola is based on wide scientific research, on thousands of experiments. It supplies a substance which in the body turns food into fuel and energy rather than into fat. The formula comes in every package, also the reasons for results. This to banish every fear of harm, and to let you know just why fat disappears.

Marmola has been used for 20 years—millions of boxes of it. You can see the results on every hand. Doubtless some of your friends can tell you what it did for them. Now excess fat is nowhere near as common as it was.

Try Marmola, in justice to yourself. Watch the results for a little time, in reduction, in health, in vitality. Stop when you attain the weight desired. Then tell your friends about it. You can do no greater kindness to them if they overweigh.

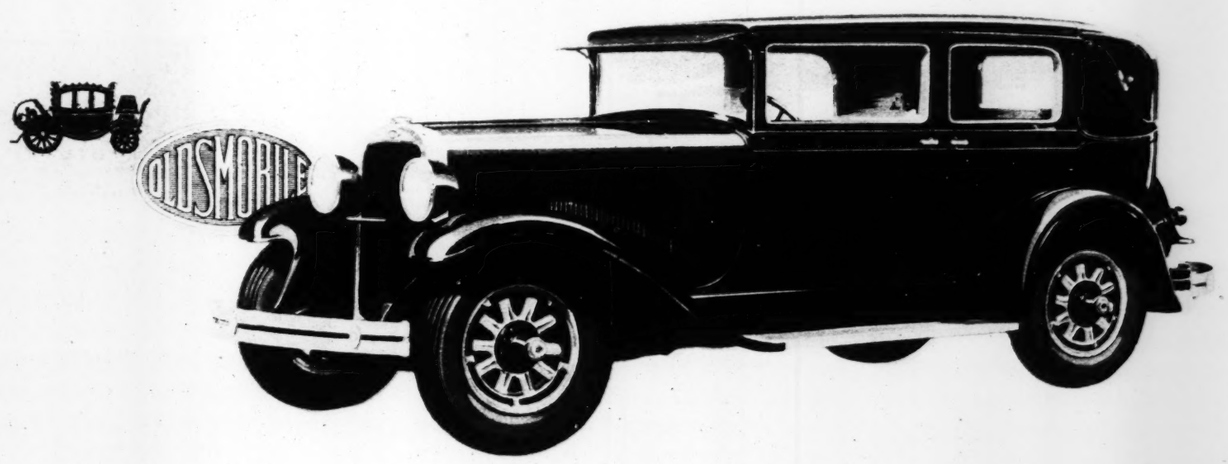

Order now before you forget it. Few things are more important. Let this test show you the easy, the scientific way to reduce.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.
